And be a father too!"

And so I laughed—my laughter woke
The household with its noise,—
And many an dream, alas! unspoken broke,
To please the grey-haired boys.

THE CHURCH OF THE MAGDALEN.

MADEMOISELLE DE FERIAS went one morning, accompanied by an old servant of her grandmother's, to hear mass at the Church of the Magdalen. She perceived the Duchess Blanche kneeling at a little distance from her, apparently in deep meditation, and unaware of her presence. Sibylle had passed the evening before at the Hotel de Sauves, and the young duchess had reminded in a more marked manner than usual that singularly affectionate bad at the same time capricious interest in her the explanation of which was still a mystery to Sibylle, though no longer one for our readers. Blanche's outpoken for pressure in the church at first caused some disturbance in Sibylle's mind, as it brought up before her last train of ideas and feelings which had for so long a time and so obstinately beset her. But she soon became absorbed in pious meditation. Suddenly her attention was attracted by the clear sound of stifled sobs. The mass had ended, and the church was nearly deserted. Looking around her with anxious curiosity, Sibylle soon perceived that the young duchess was the weeper. Her face was hidden in her hands, and her glasses were stained with tears. Sibylle drew near, and said in her sweetest tone:

'Excuse me, are you in trouble?'

Blanche raised her head abruptly, and recognising her with some irritation and confusion, said dryly:

'No, mademoiselle.'

'I can be of no use to you?' asked Sibylle, timidly.

'Of no use, mademoiselle,' said Blanche, 'I thank you.'

The harshly repelled, Sibylle felt her eyes fill with tears; she slightly bowed, drew her mail over her face, and beckoning the old servant, turned to leave the church. As she reached the door a hand gently touched her arm; she turned and met the glance of the young duchess, in which she seemed to see a new expression.

'Mademoiselle,' said Blanche, 'I have wounded you, have I not?'

'A little,' said Sibylle, smiling.

'I beg pardon,' said the young woman; 'I am so wretched! Come to me to-day, at two o'clock, will you? Ask for me, for no one else.'

'Yes, madame,' said Sibylle, whose heart began to beat violently, 'I will come.'

Blanche seized Sibylle's head, pressed it eagerly and left her.

The morning seemed very long to Mademoiselle de Ferias. Notwithstanding the profound obscurity of the labyrinth in which she was involved, a confused instinct divined to certain her that this was approaching the most decisive and most delicate point of her destiny, and when she presented herself at the apartment of Madame de Sauves she was in a most painful state of agitation.

The young duchess ran to meet her as she entered. Her eyes showed deep traces of her recent tears, and shone with unnatural brilliancy. She took both Sibylle's hands, looked fixedly in her face without speaking, then drew her nearer to her.

'Mademoiselle,' she said, 'Mademoiselle Sibylle'—and she lingered on these two words with strange emphasis—'will you be my friend?'

'With all my heart!' said Sibylle.

Blanche gazed at her a moment longer, then threw her arms about her neck, and holding her in a close embrace, covered her with caresses and tears. She drew her to a chair, bid her take it, Sibylle's reason, and weeping without restraint, mingled her sobs with her words.

'Oh, my friend, my friend, how I shall love you! Be good to me! Be generous, will you? I could not conceal it from him, and I was on the point of yielding, of giving myself up to utter ruin—though I was suffering all the pangs of martyrdom—for I have a horror of doing wrong, when God gave me courage to cast myself into your arms, dear angel!'

And she embraced Sibylle with all her strength.

'My darling,' she continued, 'I have complete confidence in you. I will do all you say. Tell me, what would you do if you were I?'

In the confused whirl of reflections, of supposition, and of torment, in which Blanche's confidence had plunged her, Sibylle had some difficulty in attaining to sufficient clearness of thought to carry the conversation to the point desired by the duchess. Although from the first words it was evident her mind was not entirely disengaged from purely personal thoughts.

'My dear duchess,' she said, 'you have too high an opinion of me. I am quite incapable of giving you any counsel. Besides, I do not understand you. Explain yourself, and I will do my best to help you.'

Blanche slowly let her head fall.

'Not much, I am afraid,' said she.—Then summoning herself—'I think I—Monsieur de Marsay—loves—no longer—me.'

'Oh! no, you are not there is no doubt!' said the duchess, with vivacity.

'If you should tell him how far he is deceiving you—if you should ask him persuasively to go away and leave you?'

'I would you,' said Blanche hesitating. 'But no! I should not have both, I could never desire not to—I cannot, Sibylle! and, Sibylle, I beg of you, if you love me, call me by my name, as I do you—call me Blanche!'

Sibylle kissed her tenderly, then resumed a prayerful air, bent her brows, and prepared to be absorbed in the profound meditation.

'This is what I would do,' said she. 'I would just trust to my husband. Without going into any details, and without giving any names, I would tell him I was in trouble, and that I depended upon him; that his honour, and would uphold my character. I would beg him not to go away so often, or else to take me with him. I would tell him that duty, of which for me he was the symbol, was like the Cross; that it was good to bear it always before the eyes, but it might always be within the heart.—The duke must have a generous soul, he would understand, and you would be saved.'

'Yes, I prefer that way,' said the duchess; 'yes, the duke has a generous soul.—I could have loved him if we would have permitted me. I have often been tempted to, but I feel that I am so little to him, a mere child. He scarcely knows me. Yes, I will think of it.

'You must not think of it, you must do it,' said Sibylle. 'I feel sure that your husband, Blanche!'

The young duchess smiled at this tender familiarity. 'Thank you,' said she. 'Yes, he is in Paris.'

'Very well, then, promise to speak to him this evening.'

The duchess rose hastily.

'I hear him coming!' said she.

'In order to speak to him now?' said Sibylle earnestly.

'Swear it to me, quick!' said Sibylle, raising her finger, 'or I will not love you!'

'I swear it!' said the duchess, throwing her arms about her. 'Now go, and come again to-morrow.'

The duke opened the door at this moment, and witnessed the affectionate embrace of the two young women. He made his best bow to Sibylle, who departed immediately.

MADEMOISELLE DE FERIAS, who, as the saying is, was not born yesterday, had noticed at the first glance of the duke coldness and indifference, and even a certain amount of apprehension of a danger in the future. But the duchess's caresses, which, at the distant mutterings of a tempest, thanks to her precision in the air the vague odor of the thunder. But despatching this disagreeable impression under an air of lordly calm, he pressed the smiling lips to the forehead of his little wife.

'I just met your children in the garden of the Tuileries,' said he, and commenced walking about the room, humming an air, and stopping now and then to breathe the perfume of a bucket or vase of flowers.—He detached a rose and carelessly pinned it in his button hole.

'I did not know,' said he, 'that you were on such affectionate terms with Mademoiselle de Ferias, my dear.'

'Oh! we are very intimate,' said the duchess. 'Do you object to it?'

'On the contrary, she is a young person of whom I feel a great attraction.—Besides being extremely pretty, she is very

Mademoiselle de Ferias, while waiting for the dinner-hour, had leisure to pursue among the clouds the thousand vague and chimerical visions which usher the previous evening had been floating above her. Without succeeding to entirely throwing the draft she caught some glimpses of it. Her head rested a corner of the curtain which had so long obstinately concealed the person whose image quickened the heating of her heart. She felt that confused and subdued but deep emotion which is diffused through our veins at certain critical and solemn periods of our lives. It seemed to her that she was soon to see the secret idol of her thoughts, and a kind of supernatural anxiety preceded her joyous.

At about seven o'clock she alighted at the Hotel de Sauves, and at once observed that the rooms, darkened and scarcely lighted, had been arranged with the object of favoring mysterious on the part of the duke. At once he pleasantly bantered her upon the seriousness of her countenance and the depth of her blue eyes.

'You are a dangerous blonde,' said he; 'yes, have the look of an angel meditating a crime! Ah! you do laugh then, pretty little Madam Lucifer. I am delighted to know it!'

Blanche having told him that this demure young woman excelled in making caricatures, the duke refused to believe it, and insisted that she should make one of him upon the spot, and brought the croquis.—Sibylle resisted for some time, but at last retiring into the embrasure of a window, she sketched with a few happy touches a portrait of the regent the memory of Henry IV. on the Pont Neuf, and presented it to the duke with a deep reverence. As she was about retiring with Blanche, the duke drew her aside for a moment and said to her:

'Mademoiselle de Ferias, you must allow me to tell you that I feel for you the deepest esteem and friendship. I have been told you have a liking for generous souls, and nothing could be more pleasing to me than to know you recognised in me the claim upon your sympathy.'

At this word, which had slipped from her unawares, she suddenly ceased talking.

When she had reached a certain point in her toilette, Sibylle ceased to hesitate and to be uncertain.

'Now I am brought a head-dress,' said she; 'shall I put it on?'

'No! no!' cried the little duchess with vivacity; 'I will arrange my own first, and then I will attend to yours. There,' and she threw a mantle over her shoulders, 'keep warm, and wrap yourself up with this while you are waiting.'

A few minutes later the duchess went away the maids who had been assisting them, and made Sibylle sit down before a large mirror lighted by large candlesticks on either side. Then she took carefully from their boxes the flowers she had brought in the morning. Sibylle recognised them at once as wild flowers gathered long fall and love's. Mingled with them were grasses, running vines and leaves, to be found, as she knew, only in retired and shady spots. Her thoughts at once flew back to Ferias, and she fancied she breathed again the keen and wholesome air, which used to invigorate her in the solitary shops of her old delight. The young duchess, after a preliminary meditation, during which she recalled to its slightest detail the whole arrangement of the head-dress worn by Sibylle in Raoul's album began with quick and supple hand to adorn the blonde head of her dear rival. At first she arranged with motherly gentleness Sibylle's long tresses, twisted them in a knot behind her neck, and fixed them there in a superb and slightly disordered mass. Then she smoothed and twisted and curled the remaining hair with the quickness and sure hand of an artist. Next she took the flowers and leaves and vines, and wove them among the hair into a wood-nymph's coronal.—From time to time she raised her eyes to the mirror to witness the effect of her work, but all at once her eyes became dim, and while her hand was flitting like a white bird about Sibylle's head, tears fell and rested upon the flowers of the crown like drops of dew.

'You are weeping?' said Sibylle. 'Why do you weep?'

'It is nothing,' said Blanche. 'Do not mind it. There is some tears which are sweet.'

But here were up of these, and her heart's blood something upon an altar could not have rejoiced the angels of Heaven with a more painful or a purer sacrifice.

When she had ended, she assisted Sibylle to complete her toilette.

'Now then,' said she, 'stand there, that I may look at you. Ah! how beautiful you are! I am content with you, and with myself too, and any come!'

She took her arm and led her out of the chamber.

ONE OF WALTER SCOTT'S HEROINES.—Miss Rebecca Gratz is dead, dead at the advanced age of eighty years, but the beautiful romance of her life will not be forgotten while the writings of Sir Walter Scott are read with delight. In her youth Miss Gratz was a great beauty, had her beauty and rare accomplishments while her widely known. She was admired and courted, but she never wed. Among those who sought her hand in marriage was a gentleman of wealth and position, whose love she reciprocated. But he was a Christian, and she as firm an adherent of the Jewish faith. She loved, and so did he, but neither would sacrifice religion to love, so neither ever took the marriage vows. Washington Irving was a warm friend of Miss Gratz, and he knew all about the episode in her life. When Irving was in Europe he told the story to Sir Walter Scott, and Scott made it the groundwork of the novel "Ivanhoe." The Rebecca of that romance was Miss Rebecca Gratz, who died a few days ago at Philadelphia. The brother of Miss Gratz has resided at Lexington, Ky., for many years, and he can attest the truth of the beautiful romance of his sister's life.—The Christian lover lived to a good old age, but he went down to the grave before the daughter of Israel closed her eyes in death. We wonder how many such characters the society of modern days can furnish?—American Paper.

A sharp old gentleman, travelling out West, got a seat beside his wife in a crowded car by requesting the young man who sat by her to 'please watch that woman while he went into another car, as she had fits.'

THE PRINCE'S COSTUME.

The Prince was very becomingly dressed in the orthodox swallow-tail coat, black trowsers cut tight to the shape, white vest, open low, and white tie, shirt studs of pink coral and links to match. Across the chest he wore the broad black ribbon of the Order of St. Michael.

The London Spectator says: "Nothing can be worse than the accounts from New Zealand, both military and political. The last telegram, dated Adelaide, August 11, says that the rebellion is spreading, and great alarm prevails. The more detailed news received from the colony, and dated about July 10, tell of a change of the Ministry—a change much for the worse, both in men and measures. The programme, indeed, of the ministry of Mr. Fox is not only bad, but ludicrous. He proposes to send two commissioners to England to negotiate for two regiments for the Colony, for which New Zealand will consent to pay the £40 per man demanded by Great Britain, if it cannot persuade the Home Government to grant them on more favorable terms. In other words, the infatuated Colony will promise to pay £80,000 a year for two regiments, in the ministry disposition and use of which it will have no voice, and whenever they are withdrawn, will leave the colony as helpless and unfit for self-reliance as before! Did any one ever hear of bitter obstinacy in time running over and ever agnin to a policy that has not only repeatedly failed, but failed so disastrously that half the burden now overwhelming the Colony is due to it? We suppose the Home Government will grant this request, if made, for although it absolutely refuses pecuniary aid in any useful shape, it seems almost anxious to tempt the Colonies into borrowing regiments which are of no use to them, by offering them at not much above half cost. Every soldier so sent out costs us, we believe, at least £70, besides transport, so that while our Colonial Office goes asking indegently, 'Why tax the heavily-taxed British people for the richer Colonists?'"

BRYAN'S WALSH.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and perseverance (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a sure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1869.

PRINCE ARTHUR.—William Patriot Albert K. G. visited Hamilton on Friday last, and was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and expressions of loyalty. The Council and Board of Trade presented addresses, first to the Governor General, and then to Prince Arthur. He visited all the places of note in the City, and attended a grand ball in the evening. The Spectator gives the list of ladies with whom His Royal Highness was pleased to dance. With the exception of Lady Young, they were all unmarried ladies. This appears to be contrary to his general rule, as he is reported before that to prefer the married ladies; of course there are always exceptions to this rule. The names of those who attended the ball occupy the greater part of a column of the newspaper.

The visit of Prince Arthur to Toronto has been a grand show. The decorations of the streets, the arches, illuminations, lamps, Chinese lanterns, and other indications of outburst of spirit of the Torontonians, made the appearance of the city grand, to use a common term. The Prince must needs be wearied of so much excitement, processions, balls, dinners and addresses, most by this time have become tedious. The people of Canada, however, are determined to make a show, at least, of their attachment to their Queen, and there is no more opportune way than in doing honor to her son. Prince Arthur demanded, we think at Hamilton, that he had received an expression of gratification from his Royal mother, on account of the manner in which he is being feted and honored on her account. The ball at Toronto was all the hearts of those who attended it could desire. We suppose by this time almost every body in the country, and her daughter, will have danced with the Prince—something not soon to be forgotten in the family annals of, so many of the citizens of the New Dominion. Many of them will be able to refer to it with delight when their hairs are silvered and their journey of time nearly ended. The dinner, too, surpassed everything hitherto given in his honor. Each lady who danced with the Prince received as nearly as need copy of the programme of dances, and his autograph.

Prince Arthur was perfectly fascinated in Toronto. The gentlemen bowed down to him, and the ladies fairly worshipped him. It may be feared that they have been guilty of Princeolatry. Sir John Young made a very sensible speech at the Dejeuner in his honor. We purpose giving it next week.—He was to pass through Cobourg yesterday. The citizens there were on qui-vive for him. Reform Ontario is able to express its loyalty as freely as other places. Who are annexationists? It is worthy of remark that Independents and Annexationists are chiefly to be found among Conservatives, from J. H. Cameron down. Time was when Tories called their opponents hard names, now the scale may be turned, Conservatives are crying separation loudest, even though it be under a French and American Protectorate.

The Leader says that for a time both Mr. Rose and Mr. McDougall intended to hold their seats in the Canadian Parliament, although both absent in other countries and too their own business. Does not this show the remit. John A. is driven to find cat's-paws? Four offices by the intercolonial are now vacant—two of them for two years—and not a man can be found worth having, to risk his life in the sinking craft. His government is sure to save itself, and pay, hope it is as well to let it work its own destruction. Sir F. Hincks is sometimes reported as having accepted the office. Most Durham is to have him if Lesark refused. Mr. Burgess is to go to Red River, if so required, in order to leave a constituency for Mr. Hincks. Mr. Bertoch deserves something for his long and earnest services to John A. Perhaps he will now reap his reward in the far west, and make room for other, though perhaps no better men.

The volunteers went into camp on Monday morning, they were in full attendance, all the companies well filled up. They are under canvas, about a mile and a half from the town, at the Douro Mills. The ground was well chosen, as it is spacious enough for training, to-day, and one would imagine not enough from whisky to be free from temptation.

Ramsay reached Keene on Tuesday, that some one had taken a bomb to the camp grounds, and that "Forty rod" was running freely; and this in consequence of a row had occurred between the Eastern and Western companies. We hope this has been without foundation, for so far as the riot is concerned.—The whisky test is a reality, we believe, and as selling liquor there must be without "allegiance," it is not too much to expect that the officers will forbid it. Surely the hellish monster, rum, is poor enough in town, without taking it to their very noses.

Not a few civilians have been seen driving furiously from the grounds, under more or less influence.

A Move in the Right Direction.

Mr. Cluxton has given notice that application will be made at the next Session of the Legislature for an Act to incorporate the Town of Peterborough into a City. This is certainly a step in the right direction. South Monaghan is a corner cut out of this County at a time when Peterborough was a village. It is not reasonable that the market town for South Monaghan, extending as it does further than either Cobourg or Port Hope; besides the new railway connects all harbors in the way of travel, which are little more than ports of call for the Toronto ship from Cobourg and the front, except in winter, and then it is always dangerous. Another wording of the Cobourg Conduit may see a representative from that prosperous little municipality taking his place amongst our legislators here, and we are confident that he will get a hearty welcome. The interests of that township, too, will be got only in connection with this County as in connection with Northumberland and Durham. There is a move to divide Northumberland into two counties and separate Durham from it. There will all necessitate separate public offices and officers, none of which need be expected for many years in this County.

Father Chiniquy visited Peterborough this week. He preached in Mr. Roger's church on Sunday, twice, to the crowding and manning to crowded houses, and on Monday evening he addressed the Young Men's Christian Association, in the same church. Outhoughts, because he believed there were a great many French Canadians in town, he spoke in English, he said that he had been 28 years a Roman Catholic Priest, had studied all their theology, and after mature consideration left the error, and pointed it out to them and challenged them to answer him, but they had never done so. The people of the Roman Catholic church know very little about the truths the Priests use. He said they keep up a sort of Freemasonry, in order not to let the people understand.—He did not wish to raise enmity between Christian and Protestant, but believed he had to tell the truth. The Pope inculcated unity and obedience to him, and he promised victory to conquer the world. In the Catholic church many are infidel, who on Sunday or Friday without compunction, but they believe in the Pope. He always considers what will benefit the church before he does it. Protestants are indifferent in this respect, while the Roman Catholic is a Roman Catholic in everything. That church sees in possession, office, everything that gives power, and uses all for that purpose. He then referred to the scheme of Mr. McGee to send the poor Catholics to the west from the cities in order to better their condition.—Mr. Chiniquy remarked that the Priesthood opposed this, and commanded Catholics not to read the McGee's paper. He in consequence had to leave New York. At a convocation of priests in Buffalo, the scheme was condemned on the grounds that enough of priests could not be sent after them to take care of them. At the poll Catholics were a unit. Protestants were not. Protestants would vote for an infidel if he advocated their interests, but with Catholics the Church was everything. He read an extract from a book by the Bishop of St. Louis, asserting that the Roman Catholic church in America must increase, and that when they do, religious liberty shall be at an end. He read another from St. Liguory, showing that there was no cure for heretics but fire to destroy them. And he remarked that having obtained the power in America they would use it. He said also, that they may swear any thing they like by having a mental reservation. They swear to support the constitution, but they do not regard the oath for they hate the British constitution for its liberty. He quoted from the London Tablet, to show that they hold the church above everything. Also from the Council of Lateran, to prove that heretics must be destroyed.—He recommended unity among Protestants, at the polls, in their religious duties, in all their efforts, for he would as soon admit a dog to his table as send a Catholic to Parliament. The best politician is the religious man, the man who will work for religion. The man who will grant R. C's religious liberty free as the air of Heaven, and who would be true to his duty.

He remarked that a priest once said in Chicago "that R. C's would soon be stronger in the United States than Protestants, and then if the Protestants resist them an awful strife which he feared to contemplate would follow."

He referred to the Fenians as an army preparing to fight for Irish liberty, but yet to fight the Protestants of the United States as well as of Canada.

He then recommended action among Protestants as the "good soldiers of Christ." Every man should work, not leave all for ministers. Every day should be devoted to the work of religion. They should make the best use of their privileges, else they will be taken away. Unity, too, was necessary, and if united with the blessing of God they would form a phalanx which would carry all before them. He recommended unity among the denominations as well—every day and in every work—as among the Young Men's Christian Association; outside as well as inside, and they would accomplish much.

There were not less than 1,200 persons listening to him. After the address a collection was taken up for his mission. We believe he never was in greater need of assistance. The crops in his mission have failed and the people will require aid.—Peterboro, last year, gave liberally, and will no doubt this year also.

ENTERPRISE.—We invite attention to the arrangement of the Cobourg and Peterboro Steamboat Company. The Enterprise has been completely refitted, and is now making regular trips to Harwood and back. Her freight arrangements are good, as all will be delivered at the merchants' door. They should certainly extend a share of patronage to the Company, and encourage all enterprise that is for the benefit of the town.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.—Mr. Henry Morgan has bought out a lease for a term of years of the Commercial House, and has fitted it up very completely. He is well known to the travelling public, and will keep a house worthy of their patronage. To those who require such accommodations we can recommend the Commercial House, and mine host Morgan.

The Hon. John Rose has left Canada for England.

South and Monaghan Agricultural

[illegible] Township of Smith and Monaghan. Mr. H. Collins, showed largely in Durhams, as sheep and pigs. Mr. Lewis Dowse in Devon grade cattle; Mr. Samuel Manning, Mr. Adam Hall, and Mr. I. Graham in Durham bulls, and some much cows; Mr. A. Hall, Matthew Walton, Jas. Walton, Henry Collins [illegible] E. Moss, in sheep; Mr. Hall carrying off several prizes, and so did Mr. M. Walton. In pigs, Mr. James Parker, Jas. J. S. Taylor, S. Manning, P. Moss and E. Moss carried some fine looking fruit. Mr. Jas. Fowler had strange variance of his fine looking fruit as could be seen anywhere.

We refer to the prize list for the success of competitors.

In Lower South, the drought [illegible] very fine looking animals, but there were not many shorthorns. Mr. M. Hall's [illegible] also prime. Sheep is certainly a fine [illegible]. Mr. Jas. Stubbs got the second, and Mr. Samuel Nelson the third. These were both good teams, perhaps as useful as the first, but not so valuable just now. Mr. I. Garbett showed a good heavy team, but it was not awarded any prize. Mr. Wm. McKee showed a young Sir Tatton, 1 year old, that took the first prize. There was no great competition in this class. Mr. John Darling took the second and Jas. B. Fowler 3rd. In the ladies line there was not a great show, quilts predominated; a few pieces of nice flannel, and some very well-made yarn, stockings and mits. As there were no prizes for lady's work, it is not to be wondered at that they did not exhibit. Surely this will not be so another year.—Knitting, sewing and patching, are all needful as plowing and sowing.

In Dairy products, Mr. Samuel Manning, I. Garbett and Jas. Mann carried off the cheese; Mr. E. Moss and I. Garbett for butter. These were good indeed, very nice.

Below is the prize list:

HORSES.

Best span draught Horses, Nathan McIlmoyl, 2nd James Stubbs, 3rd Samuel Nelson.

Best Carriage Horse, Samuel Wallace, 2nd Hugh Davidson, 3rd Isaac Garbett.

Prince Arthur was constituted a chief of the Mohawks at Brantford, bearing the title of Chief Kawenaga, we believe.

Agricultural Show.

The Show in Millbrook [illegible] and [illegible] Horses, Cattle, Sheep, Pigs, Grains, Roots, Vegetables, Fruits, Manufactures, Dairy Produce, Needle and Ladies' Work exhibitions. The number of entries compared [illegible] last year, was the largest, the display was very good.

In Fall Wheat, James Miller, Esq., Millbrook and Peter McNeil, each, the chief prizes. There was a bag of Dodd wheat, but it was very little better, if any, than Mr. Miller's wheat which took the first prize.

Spring Wheat was shown largely also, the competitors being Wm. Slater, Wm. Sherbrook, John McFee, Alexander Knox, William West, Alexander Gillespie, A. R. Kidd, Jas. Redmond and J. Rempel.—Mr. A. R. Kidd had some of Platt's Mohr Proof which he says yields very well.

Barley was well represented, Alexander Gilchrist, T. Blezard and James Drummond taking the prizes.

Oats. Alex Gilchrist showed [illegible] fine Oats. He sowed 2 bu of them and threshed 6 bushels and 3 pecks, weighing 40 lbs to the bushel—almost de-lirously delicious.

In Roots, Messrs A Gillespie, Lansdowne, J Mather, Wm Blezard and S Nelson were the principal competitors.

In Butter, John Mein, A R Kidd, Mrs Plunkett and Miss D Moore all took prizes, either for butter in the tub or in tassets.

There was a very fine display of apples. In the department Messrs Jas Cameron, T Blezard, Jos Renwick, John Taylor, Stephen and F Birdsall all obtained prizes. The judges had, no doubt, some difficulty in adjudging.

The Ladies' Department was admirable, and the Home Manufactures of a varied and substantial sort; the Fine Arts excellent; but we, however, must withhold comment this week for want of space.

In Farm Implements there was very little competition. Mr Helm had a cultivator, a useful thing and an ingenious turnip cutter, which looked very well indeed. But the second day will, no doubt, bring out other articles, if not for competition as prizes, for exhibition.

The Horse and Cattle show promises to be very attractive.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The Board met on Tuesday evening.—Present—Messrs. Dunlop, Tuole, Cameron, Cluxton, Gilmour, Dumble and Stevenson.

The minutes of the previous regular meeting and two special meetings were read and confirmed.

It was moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Stevenson,—That the Committee on Property perfect the drainage around the school building, and fix the platform between the house and the street, and fill up under the south east stairs.—Carried.

Mr. Helm remarked that it would be necessary to provide a room for Mrs. Chartier's division, or it would have to be dismissed. She was now using the girl's play room and it was not fit for her use in winter; at any rate it would have to be given up to the girls very soon.

This is the room that Mrs. Chartier reported so unfavorably of at last meeting of Board. It never was intended for a class room and of course is not suitable.

After some conversation it was agreed to try and get a room in some other place, as it was not thought wise to dismiss 60 or 70 children.

Mr. Cluxton thought if applications were made to the trustees of some of the churches a Sabbath school room could be obtained.—He also thought that if application were made to the County Council that the old burying ground north of the drill shed could be obtained on which to erect a central primary school.

Mr. Tuole did not think the County Council could grant it, as it would require an Act of Parliament, he believed.

Mr. Cluxton thought the County Council would grant leave and that would be all that would be required.

Mr. Stevenson thought it would require an Act of Parliament.

Mr. Dumble did not think any of them could tell what would be required until enquiry was made, and thought the best way to do so would be through the County Council, and the Board should first settle what sort of house they intended building. If they determined to build a central primary school Mr. Cluxton was right; if not, only a ward school, he was in favor of taking the school to the children. It was a matter of cost only that prevented the committee entertaining the idea of a central school, as they feared the trustees of the town trust would not furnish money enough, but unless they were now offering liberally, he would go for a central school and take their goodly offer.

On motion of Mr. Cluxton, seconded by Mr. Helm, the Chairman, Messrs. Dunlop, Gilmour, Dumble and the mover were named a committee to take such steps as they deemed necessary to obtain permission toward erecting a primary central school on the Protestant burying ground.

Messrs. Cluxton, Stevenson, the chairman and Dumble were appointed to wait on the trustees of St. John's church, and of others, in order to see if they can rent one of the Sabbath school rooms for Address to the Rev. Jno. Thom, B.A.

The members of the Presbyterian Church of North Smith presented the following address to the Rev. Mr. Thom on the occasion of his removal to the congregation of Ennismillen &c.

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,—We the members of your late congregation desire to express our entire confidence in your unblemished faithfulness and unselfish devotedness as manifested in your ministry ever since you became our pastor.

Matters may have occurred outside the church as do in all communities, in which the Minister and some of the members may differ, but this could not alter or abate the esteemed esteem we have ever entertained of you for your ability, earnestness and zeal in your Master's work, from the pulpit from Sabbath to Sabbath. We have been faithfully instructed in the Gospel and the Grace of God under your pastoral care. Our children have been tenderly led upon the green pastures, and by the still waters of truth, especially in the Bible Class and Sabbath School; by your regular visitation from house to house, which we hailed with gladness, because you came, not only as the faithful Minister, but as our personal friend, by your cheering us in time of adversity and sickness, by the consolation you ministered to our departed friends while in the valley of the shadow of death. And now, dear sir, as your pastoral charge has ceased among us and you are about to remove to another sphere of labor, we pray that the great King and Head of the Church may long spare you to labor amongst those you are to be connected with, to teach, to exhort, to train, to comfort, that they may under the divine spirit grow in grace, and that your labour be not in vain in the Lord. Accept, therefore, dear sir, this expression of our undiminished respect and deep affection for you as our late Pastor, and our sympathy with you in all your labours and trials. We trust that you and your people shall be so bound up in the covenant of life with Christ, and with one another, that you shall pass on through earth's changes together in love to the end, and then entering the general assembly and church of the first born above, that you and your people shall be forever with the Lord are the prayers and sincere desires of the members of your late church at North Smith,

Signed on behalf of the congregation.

JOHN GRAHAM,
FRANCIS J. FREEBORN,
FRANCIS SAUNDERSON,
HUGH M. DEAN,
JAMES GIBSON,
JOHN PARSONS,
RICHARD FREEBORN.

To this address Mr. Thom made the following reply:

MY DEAR FRIENDS.—I feel deeply grateful for your kindness, and heartily appreciate the generous motive manifested in the language of your address, in which your brotherly love speaketh under bright colour the deficiencies and imperfections. It is only stating the truth for me to say, that in the words fell from your lips I wondered how you had hit upon so exact and complete, yet not more than complete, a description and commentary of the several points of duty which I had endeavored to keep constantly before me. In my heart I said, "these the Lord I am sure have been effecting, through the instrumentality of His unworthy servant in the time of your ordinance, far more than I could have dared to hope."

In the providence of God we shall be separated in bodily by the "Spirit of Christ" we shall, first, "be knit together in love," and shall mention of one another in our prayers. That He who walks in the midst of the golden candlesticks may make your candle shine with steadiness and growing brightness, and may, in answer to your prayers, specially on your pastor "enter His own heart," who shall "feed His sheep," and forgetting "His people," in and shall be the prayer of your late pastor and loving affectionate friend,

JAMES THOM.

Mr. F. Hincks is to be born in as soon as Sir John Tracy returns to the capital.—He will run for Lanark, and if defeated, await a favorable opportunity for a constituency. It has been asked, could not West Durham afford Hincks an Asylum? Perhaps a good birth would open the way for such an attempt, in either East or West. Retirement office pickings are no trifles, and not to be despised, if they could be spared, especially as, as no punishment follows Dominion men should now make their hay while the sun shines.

The Committee of the, Protestant Home acknowledge with thanks the following donations for September: A friend, a bag of apples; Mrs. Dunnet, a basket of apples; from the St. Andrew's Church S. S. picnic, a large basket of bread, tea, sugar, cheese and currant loaf; Mr. White, a quarter of lamb; Miss Mary Ralston, cranberries; Mrs. P. Hamilton, dripping; a friend, a basket of cakes; James Wallis, Esq., a load of oat straw; Mrs. Wallis, a barrel of apples; Mrs. Graham, pail of plums; Mrs. Hague, soap grease and sundries; H. Winch, beef and tiled head.

THE PERSIANS AND PRINCE ARTHUR.—The L'Eco d'Italia, the organ of the United Italy party in New York, is edited by Signor G. F. Secchi de Casali, as is a highly respectable and reliable journal. In its issue of Friday of last week it says:—"At a Fenian meeting held in this city on the 26th ult., one of the orators (post-prandium) publicly stated that an Italian had offered himself to murder Prince Arthur, the youngest son of the Queen of England, on condition he ingratiate himself with the Fenian leaders so far a ministerial consideration we are left to conjecture. We denounce the charge as a base falsehood and an infamous stain on the fair fame of Italian action. A party that did not shrink from hiring a villainous assassin to slay D'Arcy McGee, the most brilliant orator that Ireland could boast of in the British Parliament, and by the Irish Society called to murder Prince Alfred; a party which attempted to slaughter innocent victims with grenades and vitriol has no want of foreign mercenary cut-throats to satiate the blood thirst of merciless as well as bombastic political postmen. Fenianism has plenty of such heroes and self-sacrificing patriots!"

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them; physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

THE RAMAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr J. C Ayer & Co, employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with arms-spades a coil of rope, and a bag of pepper, they are ready for the forest where they cut the Sarsaparilla, furnishes them with food, and their bowered trees their only shelter. Few of them, after the thousand rejuvenated by the medicine, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig roots for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes have their own.—Boston Commercial.

A Strange Story.

The Trenton, New Jersey, Sentinel says:

It is now forty years ago or more that the dead body of a stranger was found in the woods near the Rosebrook Bridge, about one mile to the east of Pennington, a village of that country. We were a child then, and lived near said village, and remember well the circumstances well. It was an incident to make a lasting impression in a quiet rural neighborhood. Years later when we kept road to go into states in that neighborhood, many or less fears were aroused by reference to the circumstance, for he had as well as not in superstition. Nobody believes in ghosts, and yet almost everybody is afraid of them.

The body was found in a sitting posture against a beech tree. The face was distorted, the eyes protruding as though the death pain had died in agony. His hat laid a few feet from him. His dress bespoke one in comfortable circumstance. He was a stranger, and no one ever recognized to have seen him. There was no money upon the person. The knife, without special examination, was buried, the fingers of one. There were no wounds upon it, and no evidence of violence. At that day public curiosity was not as acute in reference to the mysterious dead, and no verdict of supposed murder was recorded.

And now comes the strange elucidation of the case. A few days since a gentleman called at our hands a copy of the Manchester (England) Examiner. In that number we found the dying confession of a man named Rachel Habeman, acknowledging to a murder perpetrated forty years ago, in the State of New Jersey, United States of America. The murdered man's name was James Eberhart. The murder ex ape acquainted with his victim in the old country, and came out about one year before him. Habeman was a tanner, and worked in New York. When Eberhart came over he sought out his old acquaintance. On pretence of examining the country and purchasing land, Habeman started with Eberhart on a tour through New Jersey.

He had with him a flask of poisoned brandy, as he had resolved to murder his friend for his money. They first stopped at Princeton, and then concluded to walk across the intervening nine miles to Pennington, the weather being pleasant, and public travel being greatly circumscribed.

When within a mile of the latter place they stopped over into the woods, under a tree, to partake of some victuals they had procured before starting. Habeman then passed his flask to his companion, who drank it literally, and died within an hour thereafter, in fearful agony. Habeman looking on all the while. He then robbed him of his money, and set him up against the tree as before described.

There are still old men about Princeton who will remember this event. It seems almost marvelous that, after a lapse of forty years, this affair should have come to light by a death-bed confession, three thousand miles from the place of commission. And yet it is even so.

The Suez Canal.

Among the grand achievements of modern enterprise and modern engineering which have marked the present century, the Suez Canal is entitled to a prominent place. The idea of cutting a canal from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea is by no means a new one, but it has been reserved for M. Lesseps, a French Engineer, to accomplish that of which others only dreamed.

The object of the Suez Canal is to save vessels bound for India from the tedious voyage down the African coast and around the Cape of Good Hope, thereby opening for them a route similar to that over which thousands of passengers travel every year. Some conception of the magnitude of work necessary to effect this can be gained from a few statistics. The length of the canal is about one hundred miles, and when completed its dimensions will be Width at the top.....328 feet.

Width at the bottom.....246 "
Depth.....26 "

The formal opening of the Canal will take place next week (October 13th) in the presence of the Emperor and Empress of the French, the Viceroy of Egypt, and a host of other titled dignitaries.—Ex.

HOW IT WORKS; OR, WHAT IT COSTS.—The Government is giving us some facts in regard to the tariff, but omitting others much more important to consumers. In 1868 it exacted of the people, in gold, $190,000,000 on $456,000 of dutiable foreign goods. The consumers paid all this and all the importer's profits of not less than 50 per cent., or $95,000,000. The importer charged the profit on the tariff that he did on the first cost of goods; jobbers, importers, wholesalers, retailers, each also exacted his profit on the total cost of goods to him, and so when those imported goods are paid for by the consumers, the accounts stand thus:

Original cost of goods.....	$396,000,000
Cost of shipping (15 per cent.)..	59,400,000
Duties on the goods.....	190,000,000
	$645,400,000
Profits of middlemen and transportation companies (60 per cent.).....	387,120,000
	$1,034,520,000

Thus the first cost is enhanced nearly three-fold by tariff and profits. The import tax averages 50 per cent., and the middlemen's profits raise it to 75 per cent. American Paper.

SUPERSTITION IN CANADA.—A family living on the line of the Brockville and Ottawa Railway believe that one of their number, a young girl who is slowly dying of a lingering disease, has been bewitched, and will not let a doctor go near her. A so-called witch doctor has been employed to attend her, and he goes through a series of incantations by which he expects to cure her. Wrapped in a white sheet he enters the house backwards, carrying plants and herbs, and strange articles, said to be brought from the spirit land, and uttering strange and incomprehensible sentences.—He says, when asked about his patient, "All is well." A writer in the Brockville Recorder deplores the fact that a belief in witchery is very prevalent and very strong in the County of Leeds. They have an old woman down there who cures bewitched cows by the old process; to-wit, a prescription of a bottle of milk and nine new pins, to be buried together in the earth it being understood that by some magic power of prescience conferred upon the pins they will be sticking in the ground and pricking the old hag at the same time, until she is glad to withdraw her spell. Leeds wants missionaries.

The trial of Nicholas Melody and Jas. Kehoe for the murder of the father and step-daughter of the former, has ended at Goderich. The jury in Melody's case after an absence of eight hours returning a verdict of guilty, and the prisoner was sentenced to be hanged on the 7th of December next.

From Cariboo, a station of the Central Pacific railroad in eastern Nevada, we learn of the discovery of a wonderful cave in the near Mineral Hill mining district. The entrance to this cave barely admits the body of a full grown man, but once in the discoverers, Messrs. Wilson, (agent of Wells, Fargo & Co.) and Gilbert, of the Central Pacific railroad, found a magnificent stalactite chamber, with ceiling fifty feet high. The stalactites reflected the light from their torches a hundred feet, and in all colors of the rainbow. The echoes made were remarkable. The explorers say that they have scarcely seen it, for half a mile.

The Pope has sent a communication to Cardinal Manning in reference to the commemoration of Dr. Cumming to appear at the Ecumenical council. The Pope refers the Doctor to the signs of the latter of invitations addressed to Protestants, and says he will find that Rome an invitation not to discuss but only to profit by an opportunity to return to the church. The Pope says, in conclusion, that there is no room at the council for doctrines of errors which have already been condemned.

We have it on very excellent authority that Sir Francis Hincks has not accepted office under Sir John A. Macdonald, nor is it likely he will do so a step in recognition of the waning popularity of Sir John, unless, indeed the anti-Catholic cries are complied with. Many of our friends, very consequently, spare their indignation, and bottle up their venom until they have from us again on this subject.—Montreal Star.

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skillful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Remember he will be at Caine's Hotel, from Monday the 18th, October till the evening of Saturday, 23th Oct. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of his diseases of the most complicated and incurable character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession.—Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skilful in the treatment of consumption as well as other diseases, and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy. Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygiene by the Great Shoshonees Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of these lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the enterprise will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind, have ever been published in these Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as can ever be compiled, will be done. I further affirm that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam of Wild Cherry. Hagyard's Yellow Oil. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam of Wild Cherry. Hagyard's Yellow Oil.

Glorious Meeting in the Windward Isles.

Pilot Magazine, which contains two excellent engravings, has extracted this new political ballad, which is a veritable publication to commissioners at Heath Lazaretto Alert Captain Jinks.

The Franchise Electors of the Windward Isles,
Come to mark your votes and smiles,
I'm sure to please you with my wheat,
If you send me to the Party—meet.
So if you want a job you know—
A job you know—a job you know—
You'll always be certain where to go,
If you need me to the Party—meet.

Spoken—Yes, brother Electors! that's a part of political business. Better myself I understand as well as any man; so if any of you want a berth in the Customs, a Commissionership, or a snug little sinecure of any kind, you've only to come to me because you know—

Chorus—I'm Francis Hincks, &c.

Where flew resigned. Mac didn't know
For a good commissioner where to go,
So he send on me, and he'd tell you so,
If you need me to the Party—meet.
At Stanning I'm a regular swell—
A regular swell—a regular swell—
And you'll benefit so, I can hardly tell
If you need me to the Party—meet.

Spoken—Yes, brother Electors! I consider I am rather a swell at financing. Just look at what I did for you when I was in power, years ago. Why, you hadn't even a public debt worth speaking about before I took matters in hand; and you can't be a great country without a big public debt.—So if you want it doubled, you've only to apply to—

Chorus—Francis Hincks, &c.

So now you've got the choice you see,
Twixt Francis Hincks and Malcom C—
And if you're wise, you'll vote for me,
And send me to the Party—meet.
Then, if you want a railroad now—
A railroad now—a railroad now—
I'll tell you exactly what to do,
If you need me to the Party—meet.

Spoken—Yes, gentlemen Electors, I know something about making railroads, and a very profitable business it is too! I don't mean to the Shareholders, but to

Chorus—Francis Hincks of the Windward Isles,
Who comes to beg your votes and smiles,
And if he gets over you with his wiles,
There'll be the devil to pay in the early—meet.

The Approaching General Council at Rome.

Letter from Dr. Merle D'Aubigne to the Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M. P. With reference to the Ecumenical Council at Rome.

GENEVA, May 10, 1869.

MY DEAR MR. KINNAIRD,—I wrote to you some time ago about the Œcumenical Conference which it was proposed to hold at Geneva on the occasion of the General Council at Rome.

A question presented itself—Should it be held before or after the General Council? Some thought—and some friends at Geneva were among the number—that it should be after, as it is then only that we shall know what the Council will have done, and what can be said in reply. Our resolution is not to hold our Conference this year.

But is there nothing to be done before the Council is held at Rome? Shall we say nothing when Rome calls us? Do you not think it would be well to have a consultation about it in London while so many of your earnest men are assembled there for the May Meetings? The subject is of great importance. No General Council of the Romish Church has been held since that of Trent, in the sixteenth century. On that occasion the Pope invited Protestants to return to the bosom of the Church of which he is the head.

The present crisis, which agitates more or less all Christendom, renders it important that there should go now a great manifestation of Evangelical principles; for the doctrines then established are precisely those which are attacked by Rationalism, Rationalism, and other erroneous systems.

The work of the Reformation was arrested in the second half of the sixteenth century. It is time that we should take it up; and the invitation which the Pope has addressed to us furnishes a suitable occasion.

This manifestation of Evangelical principles, to be useful, should be made in every town, even every village, where there is Christian life: would to God that were everywhere!

But what should be the aim of these meetings? The great doctrines of Holy Scripture should be affirmed, and the urgent necessity of carrying on the work of the Reformation should be pressed upon the Christian public. Is it not true that the love of earnestness, sincerity, and noble character, now in the Church of Rome, should abandon a religion of externals, of forms, and rules, to receive that which is "Spirit and life?"

Ought we not to try to make Roman Catholics understand that the difference between them and us is this—that they cling to a religion which addresses itself to the imagination or intellect, the essence of which is submission to the Church, to the commandments of men, a dead form; while we ask them to receive a perfect and free salvation, by grace to find a living Christ—that "kingdom of God which is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost?"

These are the questions to be opened up; but it must be done with prayer, with all bitterness, without violence; it must be done in love. When we consider the millions of Roman Catholics who have been baptized in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, but, hindered by the veil of superstition, human tradition, and creature mediation, do not know, do not know, do not possess Christ, our feelings should be those of sorrow, not anger; and we should beseech them, by the meekness and gentleness of Christ, to come to Him in simple faith.

The Council at Rome will commence on the 8th of December, the anniversary of the promulgation of the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception. What is to be done at this period? Will it be permitted to me to express my thoughts, which I submit entirely to your wisdom and to that of the brethren associated in London?

Would it not be well that, in every place where there may be a certain number of pious and intelligent Christians, this day should be devoted to Conferences, to which orthodox Christians of different denominations should be invited? Would it not be well that prayers should arise, not only in these Conferences, but in family worship and public services, to entreat the only Head of the Church, Jesus Christ, for the illumination and eternal salvation of those who are placed under the Papal yoke?

In these times Roman Catholics and Free-thinkers show great boldness: shall we, the Evangelical Christians, be the only cowards?

It appears to me that the proposition of such a manifestation of Evangelical principles in Christian parishes would come much better from London than from a Council which, under the pressure of the influence of your great capital, the metropolis of Evangelical Christendom,

Many important Truths of the Gospel are [illegible] a great blessing [illegible] for Her glory.

I remain, ever dear Sir,
Yours truly,
WILLIAM D'AUBIGNE.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, unnatural extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent stomy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, sceptic stage, faintings, trembling, cough, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and if administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box containing the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a safe and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, when the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

New Method of Washing Clothes Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chamber, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the wristband. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housekeepers. The operation can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

[This cut represents the U. A. Dodge's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical motor now in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec 15th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also delegated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and, if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We will especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and self-setting Circular Saw-Mills, Upright and Oscillating Reaping Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also, Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & HIGGINS, P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

FARMS, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1868 I was taken with a weakness of the stomach, which gradually during the spring of 1869, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, until I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and many kinds of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Rheumatic Remedy by reading the same performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had hopes to find the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Rheumatic Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a part of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Rheumatic Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. P. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Rheumatic Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and destroyed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of soiling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the history of human medicine, has any remedy proven so wholly and so deservedly upon the confidence of mankind, as this opprobrium of pectoral medicines. For a period of a quarter of a century, and a constantly increasing series of years, and a constantly increasing series of men in high places, higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its virtues have commended it to the favor of the people of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a remedy for pulmonary affections, which, when neglected or unskillfully treated, too often fasten upon their victims the fatal disease, Consumption. Its wonderful cures of pulmonary complaints, even after the disease had made such fearful progress as to induce the patient to believe that no medicine could reach them, have astonished the most intelligent communities. Clergymen, Statesmen, and the distinguished men of the country, have come forward and given their names to certify to the public the astonishing results of this remedy, even when all other means had failed. Almost every person in the community has been personally cured of some of the distressing affections of the throat and lungs which this remedy controls, or has eminent friends or neighbors who have been restored to health and vigor by it. Many of these publish their certificates, which can be had gratis, and which the agent below named will be pleased to furnish to those who call for them.

Consumption, which fastens its fangs upon the strongest and most healthy as well as upon the feeble and consumptive, is always startled at the approach of this remedy. Even in the last stages of the disease, when the patient is fondly deceived with the hope that a cough is all that ails him, this remedy will show its potency, and completely change the symptoms, and make the disease assume a milder form. Under its use the night sweats, the cough, the expectoration, the fever, the pain in the breast, the hectic flush, the general debility, all subside, and the patient gains flesh and strength. Thousands publish the fact that they have been raised from beds of sickness, apparently on the verge of the grave, by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is the mastery over the diseases of the throat and lungs that the most obstinate of them yield to it. Even Whooping Cough is robbed of its unnatural violence and severity by it, and relinquishes its grasp. Bronchitis and Asthma are relieved by it, and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

The Cherry Pectoral is recommended where we need not publish the particulars of its virtues, for those who know the public need be assured of its fully sustained character.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from Malarious, Miasmatic, or Intermittent poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Opium, nor any other mineral or poisonous drug, it is entirely vegetable, and may be taken with perfect safety by any patient. The number and importance of the cures it has performed in the healthy districts of our country, and in the new States and Territories, where it is rapidly taking the place of all other remedies for the cure of Fever and Ague, are literally beyond computation. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected by it in obstinate cases, and where other means had signally failed. Unacquainted persons, either resident in, or traversing the sickly districts of the country, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, promoting Bilious quite remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all around the world.

Poetry.

A REVERY.

From the Toledo Commercial.

Mrs. Livermore, in her lectures on women's rights, is in the habit of telling a story about a woman who, at the birth of her baby, remembering the disadvantages under which women are compelled to struggle for their support, wept bitter tears of sorrow because the new born was a girl. Poise one life lived long enough to learn that a man's path is not always strewn with flowers—that he, too, is subject to disappointments, sorrows and cares that weigh heavily upon his head and heart—and has given the other side of the picture in the following lines, "dedicated to Mrs. Livermore and Agnes Leonard Cridland:"

I wept—my baby was a boy!
I mourned o'er croup and daily colic,
O'er nurses' fees and doctors' calls,
O'er nights of screeching diabolic.
I thought upon the crimsoned face,
The lungs to double force inflated,
And wondered why of all my race,
To have a boy I should be fated.

I wept—my baby was a boy!
I thought of all my pleasures ended,
Of broken kite and scattered toy,
Of sent and trowsers to be mended.
I wept for pots of huckleberry jell,
For household idols rudely bounded,
For chickens strangled in the shell,
And wretched kittens hung and drowned.

I wept—my baby was a boy!
And sighed o'er all of manhood's bother;
How every girl he chanced to know,
Would want to kiss him for his mother;
How, crossed in love and politics,
When women made the law and voted.
He'd get into some precious fix,
And break the heart that on him doted.

And so I turned unto the wall,
And tried in vain my grief to smother,
To think I had a boy at all,
And vowed I'd never have another.

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

PART SECOND.

CHAPTER VI.—CONTINUED.

Mademoiselle de Ferias was indeed, at that precise moment of her life, not perhaps perfectly beautiful, but supremely pretty and captivating. She was not tall, though she appeared to be, so perfect and harmonious were all the lines of her form. But her great charm lay in the delicate and various expression of her countenance; in her pure and refined mouth, her sweet smile, and, above all, in the glance of her clear eye, which, hidden beneath her slightly prominent eyebrow, was in color generally like the blue of the sea beneath a cloudless sky; but sometimes, at some secret impulse of her soul, this celestial azure seemed to be overspread with clouds emitting flashes of quick lightning. The young duchess, with an artist's quick perception, had noticed this most striking peculiarity, and had taken pains to enhance its effect by the arrangement of the rustic coronal. Beneath the lugh shadow which fell upon her forhead, Sibylle's eyes shone with a sombre and mysterious light, like that of a sunbeam lost amid the thick foliage of a forest, or gently filtering through the stained windows of an oratory. Her shoulders, supremely graceful, had a transparent and iridescent lustre; they seemed luscious and dazzled like the reflection of an immortal substance; and even her most material beauties possessed something chaste and divine.

Such was Mademoiselle de Ferias as she entered the large drawing-room of the Hotel de Sauves on the arm of the Duchess Blanche. Their double toilette had occasioned much time, and the greater part of the guests were already assembled. At her first glance, the young duchess perceived Raoul and Clotilde. They were seated together upon a sofa, and seemed to be engaged in an animated conversation.—Blanche returning hastily the salutations addressed to her as she passed, at once crossed the room, still holding Sibylle's arm, and marched straight upon the enemy. The Baroness of Val-Chesney, at the approach of this formidable couple, felt a sudden chill about the region of the heart.—The Count de Chalys, who was at this moment speaking to her, surprised at the sudden change in her expression, followed the direction of her eyes, and for the first time perceived Mademoiselle de Ferias. He abruptly changed his careless position and sat upright upon the sofa.

'Who is that?' said he in a smothered tone.

Clotilde did not reply; she rose, and Raoul, also rising at the same time, stood a little aside while the duchess and Sibylle were exchanging greetings with Clotilde. The young duchess after this ceremony, advanced toward the Count, and addressing Sibylle, said:

'The Count Raoul de Chalys, my cousin.' Then turning toward Raoul, continued: 'Mademoiselle Sibylle de Ferias, my friend.'

Having accomplished this coup d'etat, Blanche had no difficulty in comprehending the stupor which appeared in the features of her cousin, but felt with surprise that Sibylle's arm was trembling and pressing heavily upon her own. She led her away at once, seated her beside herself at the other end of the room, and looking at her with affectionate coquetry, said:

'Don't be excited, my darling—it will soon pass; but I cannot understand how you could have recognized him after so many years. Explain that to me.'

'I don't know,' Sibylle stammered. 'This mysterious head-dress of yours prepared me for it I suppose. But you, who can have told you?'

'Guess?'

'Is it possible?'

'Do you feel yourself well enough to waltz?'

'To waltz? Why?'

'To bring back the roses to your cheeks. You are too pale for your kind of beauty.'

Blanche beckoned to her husband, who was passing.

'My friend,' she said, 'Mademoiselle de Ferias is dying with desire to waltz with you.'

The duke laid his hand upon his heart, and bowed low before Sibylle; then passing his strong arm around her slender waist he whirled with her through the crowd like an eagle soaring aloft with a dove in his talons.

Excited by the success of her plots, the duchess now began to talk gayly with those about her, though never for an instant losing sight of the corner of the room where Clotilde and Raoul had remained in tete-a-tete. She was overjoyed at the absent manner of her cousin, and the gloomy and irritated expression of the young baroness. She saw that the eyes of the count were constantly directed upon Mademoiselle de Ferias, and perceived with delight that the young girl had become the only object of his thoughts, and even the subject of his conversation.

And indeed Monsieur de Chalys, although thoroughly a man of the world, had just experienced a sensation violent enough to disturb to a great degree his usual perfect equilibrium. The fantastic opposition of Sibylle, and the scarcely less singular fact of her presentation under the open patronage of the duchess, had quite deprived him of his habitual calm self-possession, and with the awkwardness of a school-boy, he committed the egregious blunder of interrogating one pretty woman with respect to another.

'You know that young person there, madame?' he said to the baroness.

'What young person?'

'The one with the—the—Mademoiselle de Ferias, I believe.'

'A little; we are from the same place,' said Clotilde coldly.

'Ah! Ferias! where is Ferias?'

'In Normandy.'

'Near the sea?'

'Not far from it.'

'Is she intimate with my cousin?'

'It seems so.'

'Does she live in Paris?'

'I think not. She is here on a visit.'

'For a long visit?'

'Bless me! Suppose you should take the trouble to ask her yourself?'

'I beg pardon! I thought perhaps I might have known her family formerly. It is of no consequence. But what does concern me, madame, is that you should be convinced of the truth of what I was telling you. That portrait stolen in the reception of your convent has never for a moment quitted me, and if anything happened to me it would have been buried with me.'

Clotilde began to smile, and to play with her fan.

'Ah! really?' said she. 'Is Persia? Dear me how hot it is!'

'In Persia,' replied Raoul seriously, after a pause of evident absence of mind, 'there are so many mountains, as you know, that the heat is never excessive.'

Clotilde shrugged her shoulders, bowed to a young man who was passing, and joined him in the waltz. Monsieur de Chalys endured this affront without even frowning. He found his way carefully through the waltzers, and took Sibylle's place beside the young duchess.

'My cousin Blanche,' said he.

'What is it?' cousin?'

'Have pity upon a man whose wits are bewildered, and allow me to ask you two or three frank questions.'

'I am listening.'

'Did you know, when you presented me to Mademoiselle de Ferias, that she was the original of the sketch you noticed in my album?'

'Very probably.'

'And you love her?'

'Tenderly!'

Raoul looked at the young woman with extreme intentness.

'And you permit me to think her very pretty?'

'I command you to,' said Blanche.

'And afterwards?'

'How afterward?'

'What are your next commands?'

She turned her eyes upon him, then covered her face behind her fan and answered:

'To be honest and happy!'

The waltz ceased at this moment.—Raoul had only time to read in her eyes the sincerity of her generous resolution.—He rose, stooped over her, and giving to his attitude, to his expression, and his voice, all the respect which a manly heart can evince, said to her:

'Blanche, I revere you!'

Sibylle had resumed her seat, and the court was moving away when the duchess recalled him.

'Don't go away cousin. While I am busy with the tea, you can entertain Mademoiselle de Ferias. She is something of an artist; you will understand each other; you can talk painting, landscape, scenery, rocks, fountains, etc.'

Raoul bowed, and seating himself in the duchess's seat, with an air of awkwardness and timidity quite unusual with him, he began:

'Mademoiselle, I don't know how it is with you, but it very hard for me to be.'

'And for me too,' said she, 'I think.'

'I had the honor of being permitted to kiss your hand some twelve years ago, beside a rock which dropped tears into a fountain. Do you remember it?'

'Yes, monsieur.' said Sibylle, a freak came in her clear blue eye.

'You remember it! It seems to me hardly possible!'

'It is very simple under the law. My life has not been rich in adventures, and that meeting with you in my grandfather's park was one of the few. Besides, the souvenirs of early childhood are always very lasting.'

'I frightened you very much, did I not?'

'A little at first, yes.'

'I can see you still with your white waist and your odd aroma. Almost like this, was it not?'

'As for that,' said Sibylle, giving to her smell and haughty mien a gesture of dignity, 'I beg you to believe that it is not of my invention, and when it was arranged for me, I was quite ignorant of the pleasure reserved for me this evening.'

From the beginning of their conversation, these had been in the tone and in the language of Sibylle a frankness and at the same time a dignity which had struck Raoul forcibly, and he was very sensitive to those nice shades of color. And as he studied character delicate countenance, he discovered in it a profusion of details, of feature and of expression, which charmed him.—Yielding himself up entirely to the spell of this exquisite beauty, his artist's soul and eyes were entranced. He felt himself irresistibly attracted to Sibylle, and without care for the morrow, determined to make himself then and there agreeable to her, or to perish in the attempt. So he quitted the rather intimate subject of conversation which Sibylle's reserve forbade him to pursue further, and began to speak of his art and of his travels. All the resources of the wealth of his mind, all the graces of his heart' he brought with eager hands and scattered at Sibylle's feet. And though Sibylle could not perceive the shadow of a compliment in his language, she felt with a woman's tact that the eyes and eager words of Raoul were a continual homage to her; she comprehended that it was she who inspired the eloquent fervor with which he confided to her his impressions, his studies, his hopes, and his joys, touching on every subject as he proceeded in the easy manner of a man who attributes to the person with whom he is conversing an intelligence equal to his own.

This supreme flattery, a flattery worthy of her, charmed and disturbed her. She had a secret fear lest she should seem silly and puerile at the very moment when Raoul was admiring the aptness of her slightest words. Fortunately for her, the Comtesse de Vergnes, properly observant of the extreme attentions of which her granddaughter was the object, soon came to break up their tete-a-tete. Sibylle made haste to relate to her, touching her chance meeting with Monsieur de Chalys in the forest of Ferias, and emboldened by the presence of her grandmother, was able to reply with graceful readiness of wit to the questions the count now felt at liberty to address to her with reference to Ferias, her family life there, her childish impressions, and her travels in Fairyland. He listened to her with delighted attention, sometimes completing her thought by a word, sometimes by a smile, and often anticipating it, as if their two lives had been mingled hour by hour together ever since they had existed, and the slightest throb of either heart had faithfully echoed by the other.

But Clotilde had not observed the commencement and the progress of this good understanding without endeavoring to disturb it by various diversions. She had taken pains several times to stop with her partner in the waltz, directly before Raoul, and had displayed before his eyes the magnificent masses of her hair and the wavy undulations of her shoulders; then, vexed at her want of success, she ceased dancing and endeavored to excite his jealousy. She made Louis Gandrax, who had just appeared in the drawing-room, sit beside her, talked to him behind her fan, and brought to bear upon the ice of the young savant a converging fire from her two eyes which would have liquefied the Alps. Perhaps she dulled by becoming herself interested and piqued in this encounter, and Gandrax, though still preserving his appearance of frenzied impassibility, did not fail to be diverted by it. Monsieur de Chalys observed these intrigues, but he observed them from the height of heaven, and he did not descend. His sweet ecstasy was only disturbed by Sibylle herself, who at last became embarrassed by the evident constancy and suggested to her grandmother that it was time to retire.

As Madame de Vergnes rose, Raoul said, bowing deeply:

'Will you be so good, Madame la Comtesse, as to permit me to pay my respects at your house, and to present to you the portrait of Mademoiselle de Ferias I made twelve years ago?'

Madame de Vergnes assented with a graceful nod, and withdrew with the triumphal air becoming a grandmother who sees glimmering on the horizon the hymeneal torch which is to light her granddaughter to an unobjectionable marriage.

As the Count de Chalys left the Hotel de Sauves, he took the arm of his friend Gandrax. They were both thoughtful, and walked along the quary of the Tuileries without exchanging a word. The night was clear and cold. Raoul followed the sidewalk along the Seine, and looked absently into the gloomy mass of waters, which pitifully reflected the light from the lanterns on the bridges and quays.

'The nymphs are holding a feast tonight,' he said; 'they have illuminated the crystal mansions of their palaces. If one could dream these starry steps!'

Gandrax cast a glance over the parapet.

'Reflexions of the gas-light,' said he. 'There was another pause of silence, broken abruptly by Raoul.

'What do you think of marriage, Louis?'

'What! Already!' cried Gandrax, laughing. 'I think well of it, my friend. Marriage is the chastity of the species. It adds three times the vigor of the social machine. Otherwise, where polygamy flourishes: it brutalizes mankind in the torpor of the harem; it becomes thoroughly impregnated with the vices of women and perishes through them; it is unequal and ferocious. The marriage of respected in any nation, the nearer the nation approaches the social ideal—because it is regulated by order.—Marriage, then, is a good institution; and you may contemplate it, with full approbation, espouse Mademoiselle de Ferias, if your heart so inclines.'

'Had you ever met her before at my house?' asked the count.

'Twenty times.'

'What abberation of mind has prevented your speaking of her?'

'Why should I have spoken of her?'

'Is it possible that you did not recognize in her the little fairy of the fountain, with whom I have so often fatigued your ears? The crowned Sibylle of my album?'

'Reality! is it she? How the devil should I have known it?'

'But she is the living portrait of her portrait.'

'Chimera!' said Gandrax, whose sonorous laughter rang through the night. 'At all events, my friend, I am delighted that she pleases you. I must tell you plainly, however, that on the subject our systems of esthetics are divergent. Explain to me what charm you find in her.'

Raoul stopped short, joined his hands, and lifted them toward heaven.

'Heavenly powers!' said he, 'have pity upon him! My poor Louis,' he continued, taking his arm, 'there was once an artist—and a good artist, too—who set about painting Beauty in accordance with mathematical rules. He made a woman, or a man—I don't know exactly which—whose head was just four times the length of the face, and one tenth the length of the whole body, the foot equal to the length of the hand, and so on. This type of the beautiful is at Boulogne. Go and see it—it was made for you! As for Mademoiselle de Ferias, it seems to me that she was made for me, for my eyes, and for my heart, from all eternity. Yes! Mademoiselle Such my meeting with this daughter child occupied my thoughts ten years ago, and you were the confidant of the strange, wild dream that her remembrance inspired. She was for me the most elegant and charming gentleman I ever met, after you. But precisely for that reason you will be willing to excuse my imagining the fairy to be propitious, for it is very possible, notwithstanding his incontestable attestation of fact existing, that the idea of marrying me may never come into his head.'

'Certainly, that is possible,' said he, 'but I talk to you with such openness of heart because I know what I am talking to. You are a good girl, little Sibylle. Moreover, your predilections for Monsieur de Chalys don't have occasioned a complete night like that of Mademoiselle de Nef [illegible] by [illegible].'

'Ah! you remember that?' said she, laughing. 'Yes, I was very much afraid of the office of the railway conductor, of which he was a director, and having received there his [illegible] Monsieur de Chalys [illegible] four young Parisians, entered his cabin, and began his game of whist, a series of evolutions from which a bad night of hooks and [illegible] could alone avert him.

But he left his granddaughter in a state of trouble and agitation he could never have suspected, for he ignored and could scarcely have comprehended the secret understanding, the delicate and profound preoccupations, that seemed to have prepared and matured in advance that meeting between Raoul and Sibylle which he believed had been merely the result of their meeting the previous evening.

These two beings, equally imaginative, and, as it were, moving toward the same point, had been gazing mysteriously toward each other for long years, and when their first meeting was about to violent that a flame had burst forth. These lightning-strokes of passion, explained by affinities and mutual harmonies of imperious power, are, nevertheless, exceptional. But these exceptions are not extremely rare, and that they really occur in actual life is sufficient to justify their introduction in a romance (which is but the history of exceptional sentiments), and to give to it the interest and the dignity of truth.

A Sunday school teacher was giving a lesson on Ruth. She wanted to bring out the kindness of Boaz in commanding the reapers to drop large handfuls of wheat. 'Now, children,' said she, 'Boaz did another very nice thing for Ruth; can you tell me what it was?' 'Married her!' said one of the boys.

A Milwaukee man, who deposited $100 in a bank, and was told the interest would be 5 per cent., came promptly at the end of the year with $5 in small currency, to pay the interest. When told that the $5 was the other way, he looked up in astonishment, and he went away wondering why a man should pay him for being allowed to take care of his money a whole year.

'Where will you be buried to death,' asked a teacher of a boy in a commanding voice. 'I couldn't tell; to the best of [illegible] knows,' said a little girl at the foot of the class. 'Well,' said the teacher, 'if Joshua knows he may tell.' 'In the fire,' said Joshua, looking very [illegible].

Rich and poor [illegible] the office of retort; order is needed. A hypothetical caricaturist with his misfortunes once visited him in the middle of the night, in a whining tone, 'What brought you here, Mr. Hall?' Hall significantly touched his brow with his finger, and replied [illegible].

It is related of a certain minister of Maine, who was noted for his long sermons, with many divisions, that one day when he was advancing among the teens, he reached at length a point of rising place in his discourse, when, pausing to take breath, he asked the question: 'How many [illegible] my words?' A voice from the congregation earnestly responded, 'Forty-Seven!'

The following inscription is on a tombstone in San Diego, Cal.:—'This year is sacred to the memory of William Henry Skitten, who came to his death being shot with Colt's revolver—one of the best kind, brass mounted—and of such is the kingdom of Heaven.'

'What makes you so glum, Ted?' 'Oh, I have had to endure a sad trial of my feelings.' 'What on earth was it?' 'Why, I had to tip on a pretty girl's bonnet while her aunt was looking.'

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell what is the matter with him, and what to do to put him in better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more quickly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. THE FENIAN SCARE.

On Saturday a telegram was received here, ordering the volunteers to be held in readiness for an hour's notice, and we believe for each man to take his arms home with him. In this state of uncertainty the whole country was kept till Monday, when the fizzle appeared to end as it began, nothing further being made known.

Some say that government detectives gave warning of an intended raid on the penitentiary to release the Fenian prisoners; others that there was an attack on our borders in contemplation, but not yet carried out, and some are willing to hint that secret service men find it necessary to make such strange revelations for fear of dismissal, because not needed.

The Montreal Witness says that there should be caution on the part of our government in giving place to such fears, lest when a necessity arises there shall be no one to notice the cry of "wolf" when he comes. On the whole the good people of Ontario need not be unduly alarmed. Our volunteers will give them a warm reception if they venture across the lines.

The volunteers finished their drill, and returned to their respective homes on Saturday. There were about 385 of all ranks in camp, and several of the officers assures us that their conduct was as good as any company of men could be in camp. The inspection took place on Friday.

On Saturday afternoon, the ladies of Peterboro and Ashburnham gave a splendid collation to all the companies. We were unable to be present, being from home on that day, but we understand that the ladies were unremitting in their attention, and generous in their provisions, abundance being left to warrant a call for a second lunch at 8 o'clock. Peterboro and the ambitious village, Ashburnham, have ever been foremost in their treatment of the volunteers.—Where all do well, it may appear invidious to particularize. But the county, country and volunteers owe a debt of gratitude to Major Rogers, for his zeal on his part, for the defence of his country; to the officers and men who sacrifice time, money and comfort, and the volunteers should not fail to remember the kind attention of the ladies.

A FASHIONABLE WEDDING.—On Thursday last, Fred. E. Burnham, Barrister, &c., Peterboro, led to the Hymeneal altar, Miss Helen E. Cluxton, second daughter of Wm. Cluxton, Esq., merchant of this Town.—The ceremony took place in the Episcopal Church, conducted by the Rev. J. W. R. Beck, Rector, assisted by the Rev. M. Burnham. The bridesmaids were Miss Helen Burnham, Miss Ada Cluxton, and Miss Jennie Boucher. His attendants were Messrs Geo. Cluxton, E. K. Clouston, and Fred. W. Hall. The fair bride and her maids were beautifully dressed, and were the admired of all. The happy pair left in the evening for a tour among our neighbours across the Lakes.

CORRECTION.—In our synopsis of Father Chiniquy's address to the Young Men's Christian Association, an error crept in. The report represented him as saying that he would as soon admit a dog to his table as send a Roman Catholic to Parliament. It should have been: he would rather send a dog than a man without religion to Parliament—the best politician being the man who will work for religion, who is himself religious, the man who would give the Roman Catholics the fullest liberty—liberty as free as the air of heaven; and he recommended the greatest latitude and kindness toward them.

We regret to have to chronicle the death of Mr. Wm. Knox of Otonabee. He died on Friday last, and his remains were interred at Keene on Sunday. Mr. Knox was hurt lately by his team running away, while on his way home from Peterboro, and from the injuries received he never rallied. He was a young man not over fifty years, was an old settler in the Township, and much respected by his friends and neighbours.

SALE OF FURNITURE.—We invite the attention of our readers to the sale of the Rev Mr. Thom's furniture at Lakefield, to-morrow, at 2 o'clock, p. m. Mr. Thom is removing from Lakefield, and all his household furniture will be sold without reserve.

GREAT REDUCTION IN PRICES.—We invite attention to the advertisement of Messrs. Green & Roche, in this week's issue. They are offering some splendid bargains in Staple Dry Goods. Give them a call.

PERSONAL.—The friends of Mr. William Walton, will be glad to hear that he is fast recovering from the severe hurt received about ten days ago, from a fall from an apple tree while pulling apples.

NORTH MONAGHAN.—John W. Gilmour, Esq., has been elected without opposition in North Monaghan to fill the vacancy caused by the demise of the late Mr. Young.

The South Monaghan Ploughing Match will be on Wednesday, the 27th of October, instant, on Mr. Dawson's farm.

The South Monaghan Agricultural Society's exhibition will take place to-morrow at Centreville.

East Riding Show—Concluded

On Thursday the SHOW of horses, cattle, sheep and pigs took place. There were several entries in horses, of every class, in cattle and sheep; but the swine family was not numerously represented.

The heavy draught horses were in a superior description. Mr. Jas. Miller's team might have completed at the Provincial Fair, we are told by one who was at both. The other teams were also fine looking animals. The carriage and buggy horses, too, were excellent animals, and in this class there was strong competition. Mr. Wm. Miller's team and Mr. Simon Johnston were not only useful for the road but also for farm work, something not to be lightly thought of, where a farmer keeps but one team. Mr. Elmhurst's carriage horses were full of action, good travellers and young, which, no doubt, was in their favour. There were other teams not far, if any, behind the prize ones; but as the judges decide in all these cases, observers must fall in with them.

In the horse class, Mr. Robert Renwick carried off the 1st prize for a very handsome young three year old stallion. This horse took the 1st prize last year at the Otonabee show as a two year old, and his taking the first this year again speaks highly in his favour.

Mr. McFee's and Mr. Teepie's horses were also awarded prizes.

In two year old Colts, there were numerous entries, very many of them were large enough to attract attention. But evidently enough "Clyde" about them to affect their symmetry.

In Sheep, Mr. Gill, Mr. Jas. T. McFee and Mr. R. Renwick, carried off nearly every thing. In long wool, Mr. Humphries and Mr. A. Nelson; they had not much rivalry in short wool.

The Porcine Family was not so fully represented as their place in Canadian dietary affairs would warrant.

The shed provided by the people of Otonabee is large, and well adapted for an Agricultural Exhibition. The grounds attached consisting of about two acres, is well fenced, and when levelled off and prepared, will be equal to anything of the kind in any country of the Dominion. It speaks volumes for the liberality and energy of the wealthy farmers of Otonabee.

The Directors, Mr. Grover, Pearce, Blizard, Renwick, Gillespie, Moore, H. H. Burnham, &c., were untiring in their exertions to make the show a success, and in this they succeeded. Mr. Blizard is a host in himself on such occasions.

It may appear invidious to mention names where all did so well. The men of the extreme east showing that they wished the show in the west of their Riding to succeed as well as in the east.

In the evening of each day the Judges were treated to an excellent dinner prepared by Mr. McLauchlan, in very excellent style, and equal to these dinners got up in the hotels of the cities or town. A proof that "mine host" McLauchlin, knows how to provide for the wants of the inner man.

On the whole, the show at Keene was a decided success. There were 907 entries, and over $151 taken at the door of the Exhibition. There were not less than 2,000 people on the grounds, and at the exhibition, and during our stay for the two days, the best of order prevailed in the Village and on the grounds, and when we take into consideration the vast numbers of people, and the great excitement over horses, and observing their respective qualities, the people who attended the show deserve the greatest praise. The Band of the 57th Battalion (Mr. Beckett, Bandmaster), was in the shed during the last day, and did much to enliven the proceedings. This excellent Band is now almost a necessity on public occasions, and well repays the sums expended for its maintenance.

Dummer and Douro Agricultural Show

This Show was held on Saturday last at Warsaw, and was considered a good one, taking into consideration its being a Township Show. There were a good many people on the ground, desirous of seeing what was on exhibition, with the intention, we trust, of adding their quota to the list of entries next year. The number of entries this year was about 200.

The roots shows were equal to anything at either Smith or Keene. There was not such strong competition in horses, cattle sheep as at Smith or Keene shows, but the animals were not behind. It would be difficult to surpass Mr. Gill's and Mr. McFee's sheep. Mr. A. R. Kidd is also improving his stock, and will, ere long, contest the ground warmly in sheep, cattle, swine and farm produce. Mr. James McFee has now one of the best rams in the county. He has also some fine cattle.—At no distant day, Dummer will be able to contest the laurels with the largest townships in the county.

The great evil in all the societies is, that every one who shows thinks he should have a prize, and as this cannot be, there is disappointment. This must remain to be the case from year to year, and the disappointed must only try to improve until they are sure of success. The following is the prize list:

HORSES.

WEST RIDING SHOW.

The West Riding Agricultural Society's Exhibition was held yesterday and the previous day in the Drill Shed. On Tuesday, the grain, roots, Dairy produce, Ladie's work and Fine Arts were open for judgement and inspection.

The grain equalled anything shown in the County, and it speaks favorably for the Judges, that the same wheat that took the prizes at Bridgenorth, took the first prize here.

The roots were fine, Potatoes, Carrots, Beets, Turnips and Pumpkins were superior to those of former years, but there were not so many entries as in former years.

The Butter that took the prize at Bridgenorth took the first prize here.

Mr. John Walton showed some of his cheese now so famous round here. He has some Sage and Cheddar cheese, very suitable for purchasing for family use. They vary from 7 to 10 lbs., and are of very fine quality. Messrs. A. Garbett and S. Manning competed strongly with Mr. Walton, both their cheeses being considered good, indeed.

Mr. John Doherty took the first prize for a carriage and also for a single buggy, covered. Messrs. Lockhart & Miller had also a very nice buggy. After the decision of the judges, of course it is not our province to draw comparisons. A waggon, showed by Messrs. Lockhart & Miller was admired for workmanship and material.

Mr. John White had some ploughs that were admired by the farmers and very favorably spoken of, and a cultivator and a gang plough. Mr. Helm, also, showed a very handsome cultivator.

Mr. Wm Yelland had a very fine looking harrow on the grounds, which took the first prize.

Mr. Robert Renfrew had some machine made pork barrels, flour-barrels, tubs and churns, which equalled anything we have seen made by hand. Mr. Renfrew has also introduced a new branch of his business, making cheese tubs. They are taken by machinery out of the log, and completed by machinery; and Mr. John Walton, who brought many from a distance says those of Mr. Renfrew's are a superior article. Mr. R deserves to be encouraged in his enterprise.

Messrs White and McCullough had a splendid display of boots of every description. Nothing could surpass them in workmanship. He was the only exhibitor in this line.

In the fruit department, the display of apples was very fine. Mr. Gilmour showed some fine pears. There were a few clusters of grapes, but not much competition.

Of the ladies work we cannot attempt to give a description. Mrs. Helm showed an exquisitely worked railway wrapper, worsted work. Mrs. A. Smith's was also admired. Mrs. J. Z. Rogers, raised work. In this department there was some beautiful articles, but the quantity was not equal to what it ought to be in a town where so much that is nice, rich and rare exists. As oil painting, by Miss Bisset, was deservedly admired, and so was some water colors by Miss Roger and Miss Chamberlen. The ladies department would be more successful if visitors were satisfied with exercising their visual organs, and refrain from touching too freely. In home manufactures, fancy work and fine arts, the western exhibition scarcely equalled the display at Keene, and scarcely as fruit and vegetables, in cheese, however, we surpassed the east, and in implements.

The show of Horned Cattle surpassed anything at Keene. Mr. John Walton had some fine Durhams and Grades, and so had Mr. H. Collins. Mr. Joseph Walton, Monaghan, showed a fine herd of Devons and some Grades. Mr. R. Tully showed three superior looking animals, Grades; and the Rev. Mr. Rogers showed a beautiful cow. We were unable to get the list of exhibitors of Cattle, Sheep and horses this week, owing to an unruly animal that broke through all restraint as the day advanced, and, therefore, we must refrain comment until next issue.

In the evening several of the members and of the judges sat down to dinner at the Stewart House, got up in Mr.'s best style; after which there were short speeches and a pleasant time.

The President, John Walton, Esq., in a short speech referred to the fact of the former's early history being work, clearing up their farms, not speech making; but he could point with pride to what had been done, to the progress made and to the success of the society and its advantages.

Mr. E. Kerr, South Monaghan, Vice President, being loudly called on, referred to the honor and pleasure of the farmer's occupation, and to the delight it afforded him to be a member of the Society, and to witness its progress and the rapid progress of agriculture and manufactures in Canada.

Mr. [illegible] was present to the Judges who had favored the Society, and carried unanimously. The other speeches we could not hear owing to our position and other causes.

It was agreed to have a plowing match this fall, and Messrs. J. H Walton, H. Collins, I. Corbett and Jas. L. Walton were appointed a committee to make arrangements for it. Below is as much of the prize list as we could obtain before going to press:

DAIRY AND FARM PRODUCE.

THE FENIAN PRISONERS IN THE KINGSTON PENITENTIARY.—Mr. Patrick Boyle, publisher of the Irish Canadian, in the interest of our Roman Catholic fellow citizens, and also President of the Hibernian Society of Toronto, and Mr. F. B. McNamee, President of the St. Patrick Society of Montreal, lately paid a visit to the Penitentiary to make enquiry concerning the treatment of the Fenian convicts. It is pleasing to learn from this undoubted testimony that these (Fenian) convicts have no cause to complain; they are treated as the other convicts are, no better or no worse. Mr. Boyle had free access to all of them, and they were at liberty to answer freely all questions put to them. This will put an end to the charges of ill-treatment that were afloat. They all speak favorably of the present Warden.

PLOUGHING MATCH.—The East Riding ploughing match will come off on Friday the 22nd instant, on the farm of Walter Scott, now Esq., about two miles west of Norwood, on the road to Peterboro.—There is likely to be a keen contest.

THAT WINE

When we wrote we remarked that rumor of late during the volunteers had got into circulation, and we hoped that it was without much foundation. We have made full enquiry and find that it was only a little stir arising about straw, and that it lasted only a few minutes. As to the whiskey booth referred to, we are also informed that it was nothing more than a canteen, as is generally established by Government orders, and where beer can be obtained, but nothing stronger is sold. There was no booth establishment by any one, for the retail of whiskey as we were credibly told. In regard to the report, that whiskey was the cause of the disturbances, we have been assured that this was no doubt the cause, but the liquor was not obtained on the grounds or near the grounds.

We had not the slightest idea of writing a word belittling the volunteers, and especially would we not of the 57th Battalion. It is the use of imbibing or beer or anything that intoxicates, which we intended to condemn, and the use, if by volunteers, all well as by others. From our personal knowledge of very many of the 57th Battalion, we are able to say that they are a respectable and well behaved class of men as a whole, and equal to any Battalion in the country of like numbers, but it would be too much to say that none of them take too much of the "cursed of Canada," and it was through one or two taking too much that all the fuss arose. But certainly the whole Battalion should not suffer for the sins of one or two.

In our enquiries into the matter—it is due to Captains Kennedy, H. Rogers, Major Kennedy, Lieut. J. Burnham, and all the officers to whom we applied, to say that they afforded us every information—it remained only for Captain Leigh and two or three cockneys and empty privates to insult us, and to urge that we should not be allowed the right of enquiry, and of seeing for ourselves. Such men show fine examples of British love of freedom, and honest expression of opinion, of course. They delight in their deeds coming to light, especially their imbibing propensities. Of course their patrimonial inheritance consisted of a sound mind or they would never have visited Canada. But we can assure them that while we admire the volunteers of the County, and shall continue to do all in our sphere for them that we can, we despise the creature who would interfere with men as loyal as he, and doubly despise the officer who is unable to control his passion, or would stoop to abet an act of rowdyism.

Major Kennedy, Captains Kennedy, H. Rogers, Lieut. Burnham, (Captain J. Z. Rogers was not present when we visited the camp ground, nor did we see the Captain of the Hastings or Norwood company) will receive our thanks for their courteous and obliging conduct and their gentlemanly demeanour.

DRUNK AGAIN.

About two years ago, the press of the country was occupied to no small extent with the delinquencies of the premier of the Dominion of Canada, John A. McDonald.—He had been sunk so low as to be considered selfish. Scarcely having risen from the influence of the "curse." It was hoped that he would reform, and time was given to do so. His friends declared he had done so. Marriage it was hoped would bring him to his senses in this respect; while others more sanguine thought that re election would so elevate him as to ensure self respect.—In all these things the country is disappointed.

In reference to this matter the Daily Globe of Wednesday says:—

"Sir John A. Macdonald, the Premier of the Cabinet and Minister of Justice came to this city in the train of the Governor-General and the Prince, and was invited to the entertainments given to the distinguished party. It is an unquestioned fact that the Premier appeared at every one of these entertainments so intoxicated as to be unable to articulate the very slight tasks which appertained to his position. At the dejeuner, on Tuesday, very shortly before he was expected to reply to the toast of His Majesty's Ministers, he rose from the table, and after staggering about the rear of the hall was led away by a friend and despatched to his lodgings.

Sir John A. Macdonald and his friends were well aware that when he came to Toronto he would attract to himself a great deal of attention from both suppor

Port Hope Correspondence.

Port Hope, Oct. 12, 1869.

Rural 'Readings.'—Perhaps a few hours from this session may not be altogether uninteresting to your readers.

THE FALL EXHIBITION

Of the East Durham and Township of Hope Agricultural Societies was held here on Wednesday and Thursday last, and was very successful. A large number of prizes were distributed. The attendance during the first day and evening was very poor, but there was a crowd present on the last day. Some little ill-feeling was exhibited with regard to the distribution of prizes, particularly in painting, the judges having awarded the premiums for oil paintings to chromos and painted photographs. The mistakes, however, have since been rectified.

THE POTATO ROT

Has made its appearance in the Townships of Hope, Cavan and Manvers, and farmers are of the opinion that the crop will be an almost complete failure.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE

Is beginning to look up in town. Some few weeks since, the "Star of Hope" Lodge, R. A. O. of S. T., which had for some time lain dormant, was re-organized and quite a number of our people have joined. It has now a very fair prospect of success.

THE SATURDAY NIGHT LIQUOR LAW

Is being rigidly enforced, and the vendors of the same are compelled to close their doors at seven o'clock. One saloon keeper has been fined twice within two weeks for infraction of the law. The two fines imposed exceed sixty dollars.

A DOLLAR WEEKLY

Has made its appearance here. It is published by your townsman, Romaine, of the Review. About the first of May he started a paper called the Mercury, here; but it met with a poor reception. It was published at the same rate as the other papers of the town, viz.: $1.50 per year, until a few weeks ago, when finding that he could not compete, and that his book did not show one hundred subscribers, he cut the price down to one dollar. The paper is the same as the Review, the heading being changed and one or two columns of Port Hope news inserted. Notwithstanding the low price it is still without the remotest chance of success; while the paper which he started to run down boasts of having doubled its circulation since his advent. The feeling of the people here is that two papers are quite sufficient in the town; and as he cannot compete with them in the matter of local news, as he prints the paper in Peterboro, his is not one of the two. The other papers; one of which is published on Thursday, contained full reports of the Agricultural Fair, with prize list, &c., last week, while he did not even mention that such a thing had transpired. Those who pay one dollar and a half or two dollars for the Review will doubtless be surprised to learn that he can add two or three columns extra to that paper and send it to another town at the rate of one dollar; and that, even at that rate, the people will not have it. He began a "newspaper war" with one of our local journals, which did him little good, and his opponents have handled him pretty roughly. But enough of this; more important matters demand attention.

THE FENIAN SCARE

On Saturday night created the wildest excitement in this town, being rendered more intense by the fact that no one had the remotest idea of "what was up," further than that an order had arrived for the volunteers to hold themselves in readiness to start at an hour's notice. The streets were crowded by persons anxious to learn what was the matter, and by wags who set afloat all sorts of rumors to the detriment of weak nerves. The drill shed was thronged by an excited crowd, who eagerly "button-holed" every unfortunate they thought could give them any information. A portion of the band paraded the streets, followed by the marshine of the town, and made the night hideous with the noise of their bugles.—Nearly every man of the companies made his way to the drill shed and secured his arms and accoutrements; and all seemed overjoyed at the apparent prospect of being called out for active service.

Yours truly,

OBSERVER.

Peter's Musical Monthly.—This very welcome visitor, for October, has reached us. The literary part is devoted chiefly to letters and notes on music, and notices of new pieces. The music given in the October number is—"Belle Bradley," a song; "There's a home for those who seek it," &c.; "Married, and not to me;" "I'll keep the flowers you gave me;" "Oh, no, not yet;" "Making hay while the sun shines," with piano accompaniment; do. with guitar accompaniment; "There is an hour of hallowed peace;" "Christ our example;" "Fille du Cork;" "Twilight serenade," and "Recuerdos selectionnes." The music in each number is worth the yearly subscription—$3.00 per annum. Address Peter's Musical Monthly, 198 Broadway, New York.

Hearth and Home.—This excellent family Paper comes regularly to hand every week. It contains a great deal of useful information on farming, gardening, and fruit-growing, and the Literary part, from which we are taking the Romance of a Rich Young Girl, is interesting, readable, and of the highest moral tone. The interest of its plot increases, and incidents become more startling and attractive in every successive number. We especially invite attention to the club rates: Single copies, $4 a year; three copies, $9; five copies, $12; or $2.40 a number in U. S. currency. Subscribers can have it direct from the Publisher, Estes, Portengill & Co., 37 Park Row, N. Y., or through the Booksellers in town. Back numbers can be obtained at 10 cents each.

EXTRA SESSIONS.

Queen vs. Samuel Humphreys—Larceny. The prisoner was charged with stealing $42 from John McGee. Pleaded guilty and was sentenced to one year in the common gaol, there to be kept at hard labor, it being his second offence.

Queen vs. William G. McConnell—Larceny. Prisoner was charged with having stolen $1.25 from Betsy Northcote.—Convicted and sentenced to 1 week in gaol.

Queen vs. William Foster—Larceny. Charged with having stolen two books from D. Sinclair. Pleaded guilty and was sentenced to 10 days.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Mr. Editor,—The hurry of harvest being over, the attention of the Farmer, Mechanic and Artizan is turned towards the Agricultural Fairs, from the Provincial Exhibition down to the Township Show, and it certainly is gratifying to observe the important benefits to agriculture they confer. It is the custom of some to treat this organization as one purely agricultural, and confined to a few who struggle to keep the society alive, receive the government grant, and by some means or other divide the surplus funds among themselves, in shape of prizes. This, we submit, is a mistake. Agriculture, manufactures and commerce are like three sisters, who, working cordially and in harmony together, reap a great and triumphant success; divided by fancied hostile interests, and all three will ultimately sicken.

The Agricultural Society is confined to none exclusively; although it derives its support in a great measure from the Government grants, it could not be sustained without the co-operation of the people themselves. We fear not our position when we assert that the Agricultural Society offers like privileges to all, exclusive privileges to none. Agricultural exhibitions have grown in favor since their introduction, dating from 1846, when the Provincial exhibition was held in the City of Toronto, till the present year—1869. The prizes offered are more than eight times as much, the entries increase in almost a corresponding ratio. Counties and Municipal Corporations have seen and appreciated this, and we find that more than fifty counties, ridings and municipal corporations in the Province of Ontario have given aid to societies for the year 1867 alone, varying in amounts from the Township of Carrie grant, $15, up to Welland county, $438, making in the aggregate a sum equal to $4,580.

But, Mr. Editor, we, in Dummer, do not live under any of those who give aid in the shape of grants to Agricultural Societies.—We live in the County of Peterboro, where the people's representatives would much rather make them pay taxes for something else for a few than give aid to what would be a benefit to all. At the first meeting of the directors of the East Riding Agricultural Society a by-law was agreed to, fixing the places of the Riding Exhibition alternately at Norwood, Keene and Warsaw, providing a suitable building would be furnished, and that the funds of the local society, where the show was held, would merge its funds with the the Riding funds for that purpose. The directors of the Dummer and Douro Agricultural Society petitioned the municipalities for aid to erect an Agricultural Hall in Warsaw, in order to be able to accommodate the exhibition in 1870. Douro refused to give anything. Dummer, more liberal, being well filled with agricultural ardour, answered the call by a grant of $100, on condition (see published account of minutes) that the deed issue conjointly in their name, and that three of themselves be on the building committee.

Now, sir, you will easily discover that the Dummer Council was not one of the Townships who made up the large sum as above stated, but I would not have your readers believe, it was not liberal on that account, for by report of minutes of Council fines, that ought not, accumulines abated. On the Agricultural Hall, more anon.

Yours, &c.,

A DUMMERONIAN.

Dummer, Oct. 5, 1869.

For the Examiner.

Mr. Editor.—Can you inform your readers why it is that the Review has taken no notice whatever of the Notice of Application to separate the township of South Monaghan from Northumberland and Durham, and annex it to this County? Has he an axe to grind in another County?

Yours &c.,

ENQUIRER.

October 12th, 1869.

Red River.—The Rev. John Black, Presbyterian minister at Red River under date Sept. 10th, announces in a letter to the Globe, that the plague of grasshoppers is once more in that settlement. He says:—"The creatures are here in myriads and millions, having for the most part arrived from the south and south-west, within these few weeks past, and they have already spread themselves over the whole settlement on both rivers—the Red and the Assiniboine,—with the exception of about 20 miles of the lower part of the former, where they are yet comparatively few; and on every part of hard, bare ground they are now busy depositing their eggs, to be hatched by the warmth of the coming spring, when the young brood will devour the crops just as they rise above the soil.

"There is one mitigating circumstance, and it causes profound thankfulness,—the crop now being gathered in is the very largest the settlement has ever seen—I should say, at least, an average crop and a half, and it is hoped that it will be all, or nearly all, secured without loss. It is too far advanced for the grasshoppers to injure it, and in eight or ten days more, without frost, it will mostly all be safe. And, therefore, with proper care, and with the help of the other resources of the country, the present population may possibly struggle through two years without the crop of next year, and also without any help from abroad; but a large increase of population would be distressing to all parties, and is, therefore, to be deprecated. Therefore, although, like many more here, I should be delighted to see a large influx of immigrants from Canada to occupy and cultivate the fertile plains, to strengthen and invigorate our Churches, and to infuse into us some of their enterprise and some of their enthusiasm for education, I think it would be utterly wrong to lead the many intending immigrants to make a change involving great inconvenience and expense, and which may involve themselves and others in great suffering, without a word of warning as to the prospect before them. I expect the time to encourage immigration is near, but am sorry to believe that it is not yet."

Father Hyacinthe continues firm in the position he has assumed towards the Government power in the Roman Catholic Church. To an affectionate letter from the Bishop of Orleans, imploring him to pause on the threshold of his new path, and to return and make amends for the grief he has occasioned to the Church by his conduct, by acknowledging his error and throwing himself at the feet of the Holy Father whose arms are open to receive him,—he writes the following reply:—

"Monseigneur,—I am deeply touched with the feeling which has dictated the letter you have done me the honor to write me, and I am deeply grateful for the prayers you have made on my behalf; but I cannot accept either the reproaches or the counsels which you address to me. That which you call a great fault committed, I call a great duty accomplished.

Accept, Monseigneur, the expression of the respectful sentiments with which I remain,

Your most humble and obedient servant in Jesus Christ and His Church,

Father Hyacinthe.

Paris, 26th Sept., 1869."

Up rising of his object in life, some time ago, to an acquaintance, Mr. A. T. Stewart, the New York millionaire merchant, said:—"I do business to establish a principle. It is the principal of trade. I am in a state of conflict and warfare to prevent what are called gains too being told to my credit account.

The following was posted on the door of the Ludlow Church, in Hertfordshire some time back: "This is to give notice that no person is to be buried in this church yard but those living in the parish. Those who wish to be buried are desired to apply to me, Ephraim Grub, parish clerk."

A gentleman remarked to a very loquacious visitor about nine o'clock in the evening—"I think Adams, the grocer over the way, is a wise man for he knows when to shut up." The conversation was interrupted at that point by a brilliant flash of silence.

A little six year old was talking with his father, and on passing a church, the child asked:—"What house is that?" "It is the Dutch church," was the reply; "people go there to be good, so that they may become angels." "Will they be Dutch angels pa?"

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Shakhoosa Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those long diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

Honest Facts.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and comes from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would take nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attack of rheumatism, coughs, colds, chollic, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it; to effectually by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

Had better go to Texas.

A Boy Again.

A couple of gentlemen in Ilesc were, not long since whiling an evening away by singing songs and relating anecdotes; when he asked for the song "Would I were a Boy again," at which 'Old Pi Ute" (John K. Lovejoy), who was present broke out as follows:—"A boy again! Who would be a boy again if he could? to have the measles; mumps and itch; to get licked by bigger boys and scolded by older brothers to rub your toes, have the belly-ache from swallowing cherry stones, to have chopped hands and frozen toes, to slip up on the ice and do chores, to get your ears boxed, to get whaled by a three-headed school master, to be made to stand up as the "Dunce" for the amusement of the school, to have visitors come to the school, and tell you how miserably weak and stupid you were when you were born, and ask you what would become of you at that interesting time in your life if your parents had not been so patient with and kind to you (of course it was all one's fault that he was born, and his parents were to be very concerned or interested in the matter), to sit at the second table when company comes, to set out cabbage plants because you are little, and consequently it won't make your back ache much, to be ready to go to school when you don't want to, to get spelled down in school, to loose your marbles, to have your sled broken to get bit in the eye with frozen apples and soggy snowballs, to cut your finger, to lose your knife, to have a hole in the rear of your only pair of pants when your pretty cousin from the city comes to see you, to be called a coward if you don't fight at school, to be whaled at home if you do fight at school, to be struck after a little girl and dared not tell her, to have a boy too big for you to lick tell you your sweetheart cut you dead and affiliate with that boy John Smith whom you hate particularly because he set your hair up the week before, to be made to go to bed when you know you ain't sleepy to have no firecrackers on the fourth of July no states on Christmas to want a piece of bread and butter with honey and get your ears pulled, to be kept from the circus when it comes to town and when all the other boys go; to have the kanker rash and stone bruises, to be called up to kiss all the old women that visit your mother, to be scolded because you like Maggie Lane better than your own dear sister, to be told of what ravishing time little boys will have who spit lies and are not like George Washington, to catch your big brother kissing the pretty school ma'am on the sly and to wish you was big so you could kiss her too, and—oh bah, on being a boy again.

A French professor made up his mind to visit England, and on his passage over he took a violent cold. He had studied English at the French university, and made about as much progress in giving correct sounds to the words as a Yorkshireman might be supposed to do in French tongue with nothing but a dictionary for a guide. Some things he knew and some he didn't know. One thing, however, he felt, and that was, he needed a physician. Accordingly he sent for one, and in the interim wishing to show Dr. John Bull how well he could talk English, he took Nugent, and, found that 'trout' was 'cough' in the latter tongue.

'C-o-u-g-h,' spelled the Frenchman.—'How they spell that? I have him.—P-l-e-u-r-o-n-e-u-m-o-n-i-a plow, and c-o-u-g-h is cow.'

The doctor entered and began to feel his pulse, which seemed all right.

'I have no trouble there,' said professor, passing his hand to his throat; 'I get a cow.'

'Well, I am not a cow-doctor,' said the surgeon, indignantly. 'Why do you send for me to see your cow?'

'But you will not understand me,' said the disconcerted Frenchman. 'Here is my cow—here!' and he thumped his breast with desperation.

The doctor shook his head, as though he thought him demented. The professor again had recourse to his dictionary, thinking, if he got the precise locality of his 'cow' the doctor would understand. Accordingly he looked for the word 'climt,' and found the first definition to be "box," then shouting as loud as he could, he exclaimed:

'Now you understand; I get a cow in my box.'

Sufferers from Catarrh, Diseases of the Eye Ear, Throat, Lungs, Heart, Liver, Kidneys, or any Chronic disease, who desire to avail themselves of the services of a skillful and experienced physician, should not fail to call upon Dr. McTaggart, the distinguished physician of the Hamilton Infirmary. Remember he will be at Cairns's Hotel, from Monday the 18th, October till the evening of Saturday, 23th Oct. He can with true professional pride refer to very many who have been cured by him of his diseases of the most complicated and uncertain character, after they had been given up as hopelessly beyond cure by physicians who ranked high in their profession.—Testimonials from his patients, from medical men and the press, prove him to be exceedingly skillful in the treatment of consumption as well as other diseases, and also to be well worthy the confidence of the public.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Brown's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they get into a short time. Ministers, and lawyers the actors, physicians, merchants, ladies and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of sore complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

Those who know the world will not be troubled, and those who know themselves will never be impudent.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past few years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phathisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, or loss, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is an imposition both sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, headpess of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, anxious sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION Cured. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry Jacobs' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes-washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily fall them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

And have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of the County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverence combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

[This cut represents Mr. E. A. Colby's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 15th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

To Messrs. Gilmour & Co., Peterboro, C.W.

Canada, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Dom. Can., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on upon my legs, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while that affliction was coming on me, and afterwards, I employed medical advice, emplaying, at different times, doctors, lawyers and medicines of different kinds recommended by friends, but all to avail. I finally began to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoneen Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At that time I could feel the weakness in my hands, in fact was getting almost helpless. I used three bottles of the Shoshoneen Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a last of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends, and to any one attended that I have only to say try the Shoshoneen Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this 28th day of February, 1869.

Mr. P. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her statement in her whole in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoneen Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Reactive Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally in use as a cathartic. Everybody needs to purge occasionally, and everybody knows what pills are, and that they are good. Nevertheless, there is a great deal of curiosity to know why Ayer's Cathartic Pills are superior to all others, and the reason is not generally understood. It is because they are more searching and thorough in their operation, more certain in their effects, safer in any case, and pleasanter to take than other purgatives. Being sugar-coated, they are easy to swallow, and are as delightful to take as candy. They contain no mercury or other dangerous drug, and may be taken by any one with perfect safety. Every dose makes its way directly to the diseased organs, and cures them. Hence they are the best remedy we can employ for Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Ulcers, Tumors, Worms, Piles, Female Complaints, Heart Disease, Pain in the Side, Kidney Complaints, and all disorders of the Stomach, Bowels, Blood, or Nerves. Being purely vegetable, they operate with the certainty of a natural agent upon the system, and remove the cause of disease. Cures are made by them which seem almost miraculous. Many apparently confirmed cases of chronic disease, which have baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians, have been radically cured in a few weeks by their use. Every person can find, in his own neighborhood, living witnesses to the truth of these statements. Many of the most eminent men of the country, that the public esteem a public benefactor, have been induced to lay aside their own prejudices, and permit the use of their names in certificates of cures, which we have published in our American almanac. Some of these certificates are from persons so high in office, or so well known, that the mere mention of their names is sufficient to recommend the remedy to the confidence of the people wherever they are known. Others are from persons whose names are not familiar to us, but they are as well known at home as those of the most famous men. Their neighbors and friends have been cured by the Pills, and will tell you so. Ask them about it. Don't be persuaded to buy any other pill, but have Ayer's, and only Ayer's. Prepared by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Investigation of its formula discovers in it the best blood purifier and expel by it, therefore, the germs of disease, which, when they were yet only starting, have been radically cured in many grave maladies to whose very name we are strangers. Hence the popular confidence in it, and hence the public expectation of its virtues or cures.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and potent agent of the organism mines the constitution of infancy, and invites the attack of subsequent fatal disease, or embarrassing complaints of the blood. Again it seems to bring infection through the air we breathe, or the food we eat, and myriads fall victims into one or other of its baleful forms. Sometimes it is the mother's taint that destroys the child before or during birth. In this latter, to her shame be it spoken, she is the guilty cause of heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it appears in the pressure by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Among the scrofulous are to be found the victims of Rheumatism, Blotches, Boils, Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other diseases or terrible forms of deformity or disease. Also in the more debilitated forms, as Dropsy, Neuralgia, Mercurial Diseases, Piles, Dyspepsia, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the menstrual and parturient systems.

Scrofulous or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these confirmed maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will surely cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly both relieved and cured by the purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism is driven out of the system by the alterative effect of the Sarsaparilla, which neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and purifies it, as does Pearlash or Saleratus the sour dough in making bread. Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the sudden changes in the weather, are relieved and cured by the Sarsaparilla. It is good to prevent the fatal results of the Spring months. Those who are Languid and Listless, Melancholy, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions of Danger, or any of the other symptoms of Dyspepsia, or Liver, or any of the innumerable ills that accompany a disordered state of the digestive powers upon the blood, will find immediate relief and complete evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Poetry.

The Reign of Autumn.

The rust is over the red of the clover,
The green is under the grey;
And down the hollow the frost-winged swallow
Is flying away, and away.

Flat are the roses, dead are the roses,
The glory and the glory dews,
And down the hollow the frost-winged swallow
Is flying the way over the sea.

In place of the summer a dread new-comer
His solemn state reserves;
A crimson splendor instead of the tender
Budding, and darling fever.

But oh, the sweetest, the full completeness
That under this reign are born!
Russets and yellow in apples mellow,
And wheat and millet and corn.

His fronts so heavy touch with glory
Maple and oak and there;
And rising and falling his winds are calling
Like a hunter through his horn.

No thrifty sower but just a mower
That comes when the day is done,
With warmth a-beaming and gold a-gleaming
Like sunset after the sun.

And while fair weather and frost together,
Color the woods so gay,
We must remember that chill December
Has turned his steps this way.

And may as we gather the boons together,
And pile the logs on the hearth,
Help us to follow the light little swallow,
Fom to the ends of the earth.

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

PART THIRD.

CHAPTER I.

If the reader has not forgotten the anxiety to which Sibylle was a prey when she took her seat at Madame de Gay-Fernand's table, he will have comprehended with what interest and heartfelt pleasure she had followed Raoul in the development of the spiritualistic argument he had been drawn into by the conversation. To the pure and sincere mind of Sibylle, the rather vague but enthusiastic religious sentiment with which the language of Raoul was imbued could only be interpreted as the firm conviction of a believing heart, a heart that might perhaps be regardless of the observances of practical religion, but which might easily be brought again under their influence. From this moment the fears of the young girl had been all dispelled, and she saw rising before her, under the clear blue sky of heaven, the proud fabric of her happy future, realising her every hope. The blasphemous profession of faith which an instant later had fallen from the lips of Raoul was for her like a flash of lightning from the serenest and most tranquil sky. A single word had opened between her and the man she loved a gulf she had sworn she would never pass. The shock was so sudden and violent that she had fainted under it.

When she came to herself in the retired chamber to which she had been carried, and her first clear glance fell upon the ruin of all her happiness, she would have longed to close her eyes again forever. But she uttered no complaint and did not shed a tear. Left alone with her relatives and her friend Blanche, she said very simply, and in a hard tone that her principles would never allow her to marry a man without religious or moral belief, and she begged them to talk no longer of a union which in every other respect would have been suitable and agreeable. She expressed the desire of returning the next day to Ferias, that she might forget her troubles in its solitudes.

After she had returned to the Hotel de Vergnes, she was obliged to submit to a severe reprimand from her grandfather, who charged her with a narrow and childish bigotry, adding that such sentiments comported well enough with the condition of an old maid, to which the ridiculous pretensions of Sibylle would inevitably condemn her.

She answered with respect and calmness that she preferred the condition of an old maid to that of a deceived and unhappy wife; the deception of a few days to the sorrow of a whole life.

Monsieur de Vergnes at these words again became more angry than ever.

'How the devil do you know he would deceive you?' cried he. 'What! a man known to be honest and honorable in good enough to feel for you no extravagant passion, and your first idea is that he would deceive you, that he would make you unhappy! Your supposition is utterly gratuitous and absurd.'

She replied with the same firmness that a passion which was not purified by moral sentiment and sanctified by religious faith could be nothing more than a mere vulgar caprice, to be the object of which even for a day was repugnant to her; she certainly would not incur the hazards of its future.

To this the Count de Vergnes, with some surprise and much scorn of confidence, replied more gently:

'Very well! my poor child, in that case marry a saint, and we'll say no more about it.'

Sibylle found in Miss O'Neil a more intelligent and tender confidante. The Irish girl had completely indentified her own life with that of her friend; she had shared, as it were, in her love for Monsieur de Chalys and now partook of the bitterness of her deception. Alarmed at the restrained and gloomy sorrow of the young girl, she urged her to quit Paris the next day, and she spent a part of the night in overcoming the resistance which both the Count and Countess thought it their duty to offer to this hasty departure.

Night brought no sleep to Sibylle. All the dreams, all the fancies, all the extravagant hopes of that love which had now received its mortal wound, were pictured before her with cruel brightness and persistence. That love, which to the world had only taken form a few days before, for hers dated from her infancy, from the rank of Ferias, from the first unfolding of her heart. She had felt its secret flame through all the years of her youth, it seemed to have been itself her life, and in leaving her it must have behind an empty void. In the fever of her thoughts, the person and the character of the Count de Chalys now assumed a strange fearful, and even hateful aspect; that to many brilliant qualities, as many noble talents, should unite traitors to their sacred courage was revolting to her piety. In the injustice of her passion, the most innocent features of Raoul, and even his very virtues, became crimes; the raptures of his quick artist's imagination, his noble aspirations, his enthusiasm, now seemed to her the tricks of a shocking and depraved rhetoric; she was almost ready to believe that the Count's conduct toward herself had been the result of wicked premeditation, that it had been for him a cardless diversion, to play before her the part of an angel of light, that he might on a sudden lift the shining mask and reveal the hideous features of a spirit of darkness. But the bitterest suffering of this young girl, accustomed to the triumph of her powerful will, and now trembling for the first time beneath the touch of passion, was to feel that the man upon whom her reason her religious faith, and her pride all lavished their anathemas, yet remained the sovereign master of her heart.

On the following morning she quitted Paris. The heart-broken farewell of her grandmother did not bring a tear to her eyes. During the journey she maintained the same calm and self-collected manner. She reached Ferias the same evening, where the marquis and marchioness received her with surprise and emotion mingled with anxiety. She said to them, laughing, that she had met with a little misadventure, a vexation, that her romantic notions had brought her into trouble, and she had fled to their arms for consolation. She begged them to excuse her for the present from going into details, Miss O'Neil would tell them the whole story. During the preparation of her chamber, she inquired with feverish gayety about the people, and the things which made up the little world of Ferias; then, under pretext of fatigue, she quickly inclined her forehead to the kiss of her grandparents and withdrew.

The sad change in Sibylle's features, her icy indifference, and her strange tone, brought consternation to the souls of Monsieur and Madame de Ferias, and as soon as they were left alone with Miss O'Neil, their mournful eyes eagerly interrogated her. The poor Irish girl took both their hands, and while trying to tell them that nothing of consequence had happened, burst into a flood of tears, and the two old people wept with her. As soon as she became calm enough to relate the story of the short-lived loves of Sibylle and the Count de Chalys, and to tell of Sibylle's courage in yielding up all her hopes of happiness at the voice of her judgment and her conscience, the Marquis of Ferias raised his eyes to heaven, and exclaimed:

'Poor child! I foresaw it! Always her dream of perfection! Always the sword!'

The next day they made no reference to the cause of her return, and only showed how much they sympathised in her sorrows by redoubled attentions and caresses. She seemed to be grateful for their silence, and did not allude to the motive of her sadness. But this sadness began to take forms which alarmed the marquis. Generally she seemed gloomily indifferent, with now and then an effort of painful gayety. She was herself astonished that she could look with dry eyes upon places and scenes whose slightest details during her abode at Paris awakened the most affecting and tender recollections. Her introverted glance saw no meaning in the objects of the outward and real world; the sound of her footsteps and of her voice echoed strangely in her ears, so as she had been all alone in some immense cathedral, or had suddenly found herself the only living being amid a whole people stricken by enchantment.

This excessive development of individual life, characteristic of deep-seated affections of the soul, cannot be long sustained by any human organization without serious injury to the vital powers. Monsieur de Ferias was aware of this. 'God grant that she may weep!' he would say to the marchioness; but they essayed in vain every means, and resorted to every expedient for arousing her sensibility. She allowed herself with careless indifference to be led among the scenes she had loved the best, the gardens and greenhouses of Ferias, the forest no dear to her childhood, the cliff which had been the scene of her resurrection to the faith, even the churchyard, with its two white tablets upon which she had learned to read: no one of these could draw from her any sign of emotion. A few days after her arrival, she was taken to the parsonage where the Abbe Renaud was still leading his hermits life, but the warm embrace of the old priest did not disturb her cold impassibility. The marchioness on the morning of the same day had conceived a similar idea. She had secretly sent a servant to the solitary hut where Jacques Feray was living, on the top of a distant cliff, with orders to report to him Sibylle's return to the chateau. Sibylle indeed had seemed to preserve but slight remembrance of Jacques, and had merely made some trivial inquiry with respect to him at her return; but the marchioness, without expecting any remarkable results from her plan, had been unwilling to leave any means untried.

Jacques Feray received her message with utter incredulity, and the servant who carried it was obliged to make a precipitate retreat to escape the violence with which the maniac threatened to reward his embassy. The ill-humor of the poor wretch was natural: since Sibylle's departure, it had been a familiar trick of the malicious rogues of the village to announce to him the return of the young girl for whom his fanatical attachment was well known.

Twenty times he had been the dupe of this falsehood, and although for a long time convinced that this odious announcement was only a trap for his simplicity, he never failed to go to the chateau to verify the deception.

Upon this day he followed, in the disordered labyrinth of his brain, the usual course of his reflections; and all the while saying to himself that it was certainly a lie, that Mademoiselle had not returned of course, that it was impossible and absurd, he made his way through the woods toward the chateau of Ferias, plucking as he went an enormous bouquet of myrtle and wild violets. The beauty of Ferias were returning in their carriage from their excursion to the parsonage, when the swarthiness perceived Jacques Feray leaping across a ditch which separated the forest from the road.

'Do not show yourself, I beg of you, my child,' she said to Sibylle.

'What care, my pet? when it is so endless now? Is it the poor, or am I the object of your fascinations? What has become of our humility, my darling?'

She could not help smiling at herself, and when her grandfather lifted her from the saddle, she said to him:

'I know it; it is my weak side, it is true. But what shall I do? I cannot help it, I like myself so. When I am passing by your lake or the pools by the roadside, and see myself reflected in this array, I imagine that I am a little princess, elegant, unhappy, and interesting, and that is sweet to me.'

Monsieur de Ferias, moreover, with great complaisance lent his countenance to all the fancies which the growing fervor of her piety suggested to Sibylle; he allowed her the free use of his purse, only too happy to purchase at any price the repose of this beloved being. Although neat and disorder were unwelcome to him, he supported without complaint the influx of beggars, of cripples, and of ragabonds of every sort which the reputed beneficence of Sibylle brought to Ferias from many leagues around, and contented himself with saying gayly that she was making of his courtyard a court of miracles.

With not less kindness he seconded the plans which Sibylle, in council with the curate and Miss O'Neil, was always meditating for the exterior restoration and interior adornment of the church of Ferias.

The purest taste, moreover, directed these embellishments, and they were all of a nature to enhance the dignity of worship. It is impossible to give an idea of the glad joy the curate felt as he was transfigured, as if by miracle, the little church which was to him a home, a country, the whole universe. The first time he ascended the pulpit of sculptured oak which had replaced the tub-like contrivance he had it contemplated the new and splendid appearance of his church, the beautiful station-paintings that adorned its pillars, the gothic chandelier hanging in the nave, the inlaid wood work of the choir, the carpets about the altar, and the dim light which gorgeously-painted windows diffused over the whole solemn scene, he was dazed and bewildered, and burst into tears before his astonished flock.

'I thought myself,' he said afterward, 'in Saint Peter's at Rome.'

Sibylle had reserved for him other sources of delight. Four strong horses, harnessed to a heavy wagon, brought one morning to the door of the parsonage an enormous box containing one of those organs which modern invention has adapted to the dimensions of the modest churches. The Abbe Renaud, quite beside himself, stripped off his cassock and spent the whole day in unpacking his organ. The instrument was placed in the upper part of the nave, and the following Sunday, after some mysterious repetitions, Sibylle came blushing to seat herself before the key-board, and lavished upon the humble and visibly-affected audience all the resources of her rare talent.

Each successive Sunday she performed this pious office, and throughout the parish there was grateful joy. When the inspiring sounds of the organ rose with the smoke of incense toward the vaulted roof of the little church, and the pure and serious countenance of the young patroness was seen through this cloud of harmony and perfume, the modest hearts were opened to a vague feeling of consolation, of beauty, and of heavenly sweetness.

Mademoiselle de Ferias about this time conceived another design, destined to be followed by strange consequences. More and more interesting in her work, though in no wise exaggerating its religious merit, and considering it merely an innocent artistic distraction, she formed the idea of having the vaulted ceiling and the walls of her parish church painted in fresco. When she timidly broached to her grandfather this new fancy, the good old man began to laugh.

'Frescoes!' said he. 'Very well, I subscribe to the frescoes. But you must not think, my child, that the pastebo flows through my park! Let us see. I don't know any thing about the price of frescoes. Could you manage it with three or four thousand francs?'

'That won't be quite enough,' said Sibylle.

'Well, say eight then,' said the marquis; 'but you must not go beyond that, for you must leave something for the mosaic pavement I am coming.'

Since her return to Ferias, Sibylle had kept up a close correspondence with the young Duchess de Sauves, who was still ardently devoted to her. The name of the Count de Chalys never appeared in their letters, but, with this reservation, there was an entire confidence between them, and Blanche performed with tender assiduity all the little errands of her friend. As soon as Sibylle had acquired her eight thousand francs, she hastened to write the duchess, informed her of her plans, sent a measured description of the church, and begged her to find some young artist, who had no other wealth than that of talents, to whom the prize fixed by Monsieur de Ferias would be a piece of good fortune.

Blanche had been living in the Chateau de Sauves about a month when she received Sibylle's letter. After a few moments of reflection, she had a feminine idea that made her smile. She replaced the letter in its envelope, added a couple of lines, and addressed the whole to the Count de Chalys, who had established his summer residence near the forest of Fontainebleau, where he was living in retirement. Raoul recognized with some surprise the handwriting of the young duchess. Her note contained these words:

'My Dear Cousin: I am asking for something which you will know better than I how to accomplish. When you have found the young man, let me know.

BLANCHE.'

Two days later Blanche received from the count the following answer:

'My Dear Cousin: I have found the young man; he will leave in a fortnight.—Give directions to prepare the walls, the plaster, and all the work that does not appertain to the painter. Annexed are some instructions thereanent.

Respectfully yours,

'RAOUL.'

The instructions which the duchess transmitted to her, taking care not to betray their origin, were, however, superfluous; for hurried on by the impetuous ardor of her mind, Sibylle, in conjunction with the architect of the diocese, had been employed in the execution of all the preparatory work. It had been completely finished, and the walls were all ready for the brush of the painter, when one rainy evening in June, the Abbe Renaud heard a carriage stop before his gate. Soon a man of about thirty, in an elegant travelling dress, and strikingly pale, advanced toward him and said, saluting him with haughty grace:

'I am Monsieur le Cure of Ferias? I have the honor of addressing?'

'You monsieur.'

'You are expecting a painter for your church monsieur?'

'Yes, monsieur,' answered the cure, who was somewhat intimidated by the stranger appearance and slightly disdainful account of the stranger. 'We are expecting a young painter, a young artist from Paris.'

'The flower of youth,' replied the stranger with an icy smile, 'is not, I suppose, an essential condition. At all events, monsieur, I am he.'

THE JOSH BILLINGS PAPERS.

THE DISTRICT SKOOLMASTER.

There is one man in this benighted world, that I always look upon with most pleasing ov piety and respect.

Pitty and respekt, as a general matter, don't mix well.

You will find them both travelling around among folks, but not often growing on the same bush.

When they do hog each other, they mean sumthing.

Pitty, without respekt, hain't got much more vats in it than dogged hoss.

I had rather a man would hit me on the side ov the hed than tew pitty me.

But there is one man in this world to whom I always take pleshy in bat, and remain uncovered until he gets safely by, and that is the district skoolmaster.

When I meet him, I look upon him as a martyr just returned from the stake, or on his way there tew be cooked.

He leads a more lonesum and wegle life than an old bachelor, and a more anxious one than an old maid.

He is remembered just about as long and affektionately as a side board is by a travelling peak pedlar.

If he undertakes tew make his skollers tew him, the chances are he will neglekt their larning; and if he don't lick them now and then pretty often, they will soon lick him.

The district skoolmaster hain't got a friend on the flat side ov earth. The boys snowball him during recess; the girls put water in his hair oil; and the skool committee make him work for half the money a bartender gits, and board him around the neborhood, where they give him rye coffee, sweetened with molasses, tew drink, and codfish bawls 3 times a day for vittles.

And, with all this abuse, I never heard of a district skoolmaster swearing enny thing louder than—"Condem it."

Don't talk tew me about the pashunce ov enshent Job. Job had pretty plenty ov biles all over him, no doubt, but they were all ov one breed.

Every young one in a district skool is a bile of a different breed, and each one needs a different kind ov poultice to git a good head on them.

A district skoolmaster, who duz a square job and takes his endfish bawls reverently is a better man to-day tew hav living around loose than Solomon would be arrayed in all ov his glory.

Solomon was better at writing proverbs and managing a large family, than he would be tew navigate a district skoolhouse.

Enny man who has kept a district skool for ten years, and boarded around the neborhood, ought tew be made a major general, and have a pension for the rest ov his natral days, and a hoss and waggon tew do his going around in.

But, as a general consequence, a district skoolmaster hain't got enny more warm friends than an old blind foxhound has.

He is just about as welcum as a tax gatherer is.

He is respekted a good deal as a man in whom we owe a debt ov 50 dollars to and don't mean to pay.

He goes through life on a back road, as poor as a wood sled, and finally is missed—but what ever bekame ov him remains, I kant tell.

Fortunately he is not often a sensitive man; if he was, he couldn't enny more keep a distrikt skool than he could file a kross kut saw.

Whi is it that these men and wimmen, who pashently and with craned brain teach our remorseless brats the tejus meaning ov the alphabet, who take the fust welding heat on their destinys, who lay the stepping stones and ankerrage them tew mount upwards, who hav dun more hard and mean work than enny klass on the futatool, who hav prayed over the reprobate, strengthed the timid, restrained the outragious, and flattered the imbecile, who had lived on kodfish and vile koffee, and hain't been heard to swear—whi is it that they are treated like a vagrant fiddler, danced to for a night, paid eph in the morning, and eagerly forgotten?

I had rather burn a coal pit, or keep the flys out ov a butcher's shop in the month ov August, than meddle with the distrikt skool business.

DONKEYS AT DONCASTER.—The Doncaster St. Leger is not, as its locality might suggest to the ignorant a donkey race wherein the hindmost quadruped wins, though the favorite may come to last. It is no more a donkey race than the Derby or any other race which horses run that donkeys bet upon.

No girl ever made a happy union by flirtation, because no man capable of making a woman permanently happy was ever attracted by what is disgusting to persons of intelligence and refinement.

A lady advertizes for sale, one bedstead, two tabby cats and a parrot. She states that, being now married, she has no further use for them, because their admirable qualities are all combined in her husband.

Sir Francis Hincks' Address.

To the Electors of the North Riding of the County of Renfrew.

GENTLEMEN.—I beg to offer myself as a candidate for your suffrages, for the seat in the House of Commons which your late representative vacated, in order to afford you an opportunity of testifying at the hustings—if you should be pleased so to do—my recent appointment as Finance Minister of the Dominion.

I have never ceased to remember, with gratitude, that at a most important crisis in my political career the electors of the county of Renfrew returned me to the Legislative Assembly of Canada by a large majority, and without any solicitation on my part. Then, as now, I had few personal acquaintances among you, but I enjoyed the advantage of having been recommended to you by my lamented friend and countryman, the late Mr. Egan, who was well aware of the deep interest which I felt in the prosperity of the Valley of the Ottawa.

In the ensuing session of the Legislature it became my duty to resign office, owing to the state of political parties in Western Canada although I had the support of a greater number of members than any other leader in that section of the Province could claim. The necessary result of such a state of parties was the formation of a Coalition Government, of which the present Premier of the Dominion Government was a distinguished member, and to that Government I gave a cordial support during the remainder of the session. Soon after its formation I was very unexpectedly offered an important Government in the West Indies, on the express ground of the distinction which I had attained as a Canadian statesman, and from that Government I was transferred to another of still greater importance, where the responsibility for managing the finances, as well as other public affairs, devolved upon me.

I have the gratification of knowing that in the performance of the duties confided to me by her Majesty, I gave satisfaction both to my official superiors, and to the people of the Colonies.

I rely with confidence that you will in my case establish as a principle, that a Canadian statesman who may be selected by our Sovereign for honorable employment in other portions of Her Dominions, shall not be held to have forfeited by his acceptance of such high trust the confidence of his countrymen.

The important office which I have now the honour to hold was neither directly nor indirectly sought for by me, and those acquainted with the facts must be well aware that in accepting it, I have made a considerable personal sacrifice. When it was proposed to me by Sir John A. Macdonald to join his Government, I had to consider the offer on public grounds alone.

I was unemployed, and with no certainty, though with a fair prospect, of re-employment in the Imperial service. I considered, however, that if my adopted country desired my services, it had the strongest claim on me, and as I cordially approved of the manner in which Sir John A. Macdonald had constructed his Government, and as I should have considered it my duty to have supported that Government, had I entered Parliament without office; I felt that I could not properly refuse him my humble aid, in the position where he required it.

As I purpose visiting the Riding with as little delay as possible, I shall merely observe further that your late member, Mr Rankin has, by vacating his seat on this occasion conferred an obligation not merely on me personally, but on the entire party which supports the present Government Such sacrifices must occasionally be made under our system of Government, which renders it necessary that the responsible Ministers of the Crown should be largely represented in the House of Commons.—They have been frequently made in England, and are far from uncommon in this country, though here alone they subject individuals to such reproach from the opponents of the Government as to enhance the obligation on the part of those in whose favour they are made. I feel assured, therefore, that Mr. Rankin will be ratified in your estimation by the sacrifice which he has made in order to support the Government.

Hoping very soon to have an opportunity of addressing you in person,

I have the honour to be, Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
F. HINCKS.

HOW TO BE MISERABLE.—Think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay to you, what people think of, and then to yourself nothing will be pure. You will spoil everything you touch; you will make misery to yourself out of everything; you will be as wretched as you choose on earth, or in heaven either, I say; for that proud, self-seeking spirit would turn heaven into hell. It did turn heaven into hell, for the great devil himself. It was by pride, by seeking his own glory,—that he fell from heaven. He was not content to give up own will and do God's will, like the other angels. He would be a master himself, and rejoice in his own glory, and so when he wanted to make a private heaven of his own, he found he had made a hell.—Kingsley.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO.—We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and Lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Rheobocon Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those long diseases of the throat which improvidence and exposure have united to make so common.

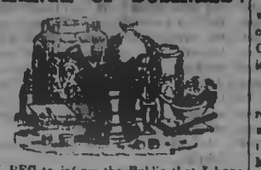
CHANGE OF BUSINESS!



BEG to inform the Public that I have retired from the active part of the business carried on by me as Druggist and Bookseller, and in doing so wish to return my sincere thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on me since the dissolution of the late firm of Ormond & Gilmour, and would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same to my sole successor, DOCTOR WILLIAM H. TAYLOR. I have much pleasure in introducing Dr. Taylor to my friends and the public of Peterboro' and vicinity as a thoroughly trained and experienced Druggist and Chemist, long connected with one of the best establishments in Montreal. This, together with his subsequent success as a medical practitioner of eleven years standing, will, I trust, ensure that confidence in him he so well merits

JOHN W. GILMOUR.

With reference to the above Circular of my esteemed predecessor, J. W. Gilmour, Esq., I beg to state that I come to Peterboro not as a medical practitioner, but as a Chemist and Druggist; and it shall be my aim to carry on a first-class establishment in every department of that business.

In asking a share of public patronage, I hope by strict and personal attention to business to secure the interests of those who may favor me with their commands

WM. H. TAYLOR, M.D.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1869.

The Rev. Donald Fraser, of Inverness, well known throughout Canada, has accepted a second call to the Presbyterian Church, Marylebone, London. The salary is about £600 sterling.

Mr. King, of the Bank of Montreal, has resigned his position as Manager, and is now President of the institution. It is said that he expects to be appointed Finance Minister, in case of Hincks' defeat.

In British Columbia there is a strong party in favor of annexation to Canada, and during a late tour of the Governor of the Province, the addresses of municipal bodies, expressed hopes that it would be brought about by him soon

A deputation of Indian Chiefs will shortly proceed to Albany, N. Y., to collect a debt of twenty thousand dollars due to the Iroquois tribe on account of land. The deputation will comprise in Chief from Two Mountains, Caughnawaga and from St. Regis.

Mason, the whiskey detective, has been found guilty at Toronto of perjury. The question still remains, by what means?—They wish to get rid of him, no doubt. The part the Leader and Telegraph have to play in favor of whiskey dealers cannot redound to their credit; it may to their gain.

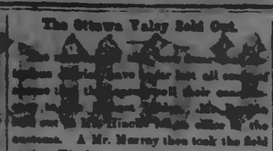
There has been a great Railway meeting at Orillia, in favor of the extension of the Port Hope and Lindsay road to that place. If Port Hope desires to retain the trade of the region of country north of Lindsay, an extension to Orillia is a necessity. A resolution was passed at the meeting asking the Council to submit a By-Law granting aid to the Port Hope Road, for the purpose of getting an extension.

The Buffalo Courier relates an experiment by which it was proved that telegraphic communications travels at the rate of 6,000 miles in less than 60 seconds. It was performed by forming a circle of 6,000 miles of telegraphic wire so that the tick of a clock at San Francisco passed over the circle and recorded itself in San Francisco again. The loss of time in doing so was less than a minute. This must be a close approximation to the rate at which the electric spark travels.

St. Andrew's Church (Presbyterian) Montreal, was consumed by fire on Saturday night last. It is believed to have been the work of an incendiary. It cost $64,000 and was insured for $40,000. The Unitarian church suffered to the amount of $10,000, insured. The Baptist church narrowly escaped destruction also. The Saint Patrick Society have tendered their Hall to the St. Andrew's church for religious services.—This really deserves to be noted and is very praiseworthy on their part.

The Leader tells us that although Mr. McDougall is gone to the far West, and is ipso facto Lieut. Governor, that he still holds his seat as representative of North Lanark, and that he will do so until the arrival of the Queen's proclamation, and then of course until it reaches Fort Garry, and answer returns resigning his seat in the Dominion and accepting the appointment. Is this a portion of his price for deserting his party and selling himself to the Coalition? He is several hundred miles from Ottawa—does not hope to return, does not intend to return, at least for three or four years, is no doubt drawing his salary as Governor from the time he left here, and at the same time his salary as a Minister of the Dominion Parliament.—Was there ever such a complete dedication of all our political influences to mercenary purposes, and then the meritorious of the Government comes out and defends all these sins. Not long since we were told that Sir Francis Hincks did not require a constituency, as he might retain his office as long as it suited him without being elected. Mr. Morrison did so contrary to all precedence for two years. Mr. Hincks found a pur-nosable article in the person of Mr. Rankin and he changes his mind. All right. Mr. McDougall goes up to North Lanark, bids them farewell, and starts for Red River.—And what of that? It suits John A's purposes that he should hold his seat till Hincks has brought off Murray, the Conservative Candidate who opposed him, and has offered to support Finlay for the Local House, if he retires from this contest, Mr. Finlay cannot be got out of the way. Sapple, of the Legal House, has resigned to allow Murray to run for that House. But a Mr. Deacon, a barrister, has been nominated to oppose him, and has accepted the nomination. Mr. Hincks will have a hard run for it. It is believed that he will be defeated. If his Financial abilities are present at, he will not be defeated. All well-wishers of their country earnestly desire his defeat.

The Ottawa Valley Sold Out.



The farmers of this fine Riding are now in different circumstances, their farms clear ed, with large and well-stored barns, and in fact in every respect splendid steadings. The young men are now endeavoring to emulate each other in the art of cultivating their soil, and for this end hold yearly ploughing matches and other liberal prizes, and all these things are producing first-class ploughmen.

Through the great kindness of Thomas Blezard, Esq., we have received the prize list. There were 18 ploughs on the field, 11 performing. The spectators were [illegible] Messrs. Wilkie, Thos. Barrie, James Cameron, Thomas Stewart, Paul Scott, David Henderson, A. B. Kidd, Richard Blezard, Robert Rowcliff, James Gillespie.

Boys—James McFee, John Henderson, Robert Wood, William Stewart, John Harris, John Gillespie, Duncan McFee.

Richard Elmhurst was first off the field by 45 minutes, and made excellent ploughing for such quick time.

Bishop Cameron, a champion ploughman, who has taken several first prizes, again carried off the first prize. It is believed that it would be difficult to beat him in the county.

Mr. Thomas Millar, son of Jas. Millar, Esq., closely contested the honors with Mr. Cameron. He is only one month over boy's age, this year. He took the first prize last year in the boy's class. During the present match it was thought he would outstrip his competitors, and only failed to do so in the finish, leaving Mr. Cameron the worthy winner of the first prize. The work on the whole was well done.

After the judges came to their decision, and short and interesting speeches on agriculture, railroads, telegraphs, &c., by P. M. Grover, and P. Pearce, Esqs., Mr. Scott entertained the ploughmen, judges and committee to a splendid dinner got up in excellent style, and attesting to the great hospitality of Mr. S. and to his interest in the improvement of agriculture. The parties then separated, we trust well pleased with the day's work and its reward.

The following is the list of successful competitors:

MEN'S MATCH.

1st prize. James Cameron, Plough, by Mr James Wilvie, Peterborough, value $14.

2nd prize. Thomas Millar, Plough, presented by Mr Whyte, value $12.

3rd prize. David Henderson, Cultivator, value $10.

4th prize. Robert Rewcwik, pair of Fancy Outlaps, value $6, half value given by Mr W H Mitchell, Peterborough, and a Shirt, value $2, from Mr E Boulough, Norwood.

5th prize, Paul Scott, Stove, half the value given by Mr J Stevenson, Peterboro', $6.

6th prize, Thomas Barrie, pair of Pants, value $3, from Messrs Campbell & McNeil, Keene, and a Cap from Mr Smith, Norwood, value $1.50.

7th prize, R Elmhirst, pair of Boots, from Mr G Evans, Keene, value $3.

8th prize, A R Kidd, Double Reined Bridle, given by Mr Wm Crist, Peterboro', value $2.50.

9th prize, Hugh McFee a Buggy Whip, from Mr Jas Barr, and money.

BOY'S MATCH.

1st prize. Wm Stewart, Plough, by Mr R Helm, Peterboro, value $12, and Flannel for a Shirt from Mr Griffin, Westwood, value $2.

2nd prize, John Harrison, Saddle, half the value given by Mr Wilson, Norwood, value $12.

3rd prize, Jas McFee, Plough, value $10.

4th prize, Henry Wood, Cultivator, $8.

5th prize, John Henderson, Violin, from Mr A Campbell, Keene, value $5, and a set of Rubber Cushions from Mr J B Pearce, Norwood, value $1.

6th prize, John Gillespie, Riding Bridle, from Mr J McLachlan, Keene, value $3, and a Buggy Whip from Mr J Gall, $1.

7th prize, Duncan McFee, Hookvoke, given by Wm Sharp, Westwood, value $1.75, and a pair of Clevises by Hargest, 75cts.

LIBERAL.—Mr. R. C. Hall, wishes us to give notice that he will give the use of the Music Hall free of charge to any party who will give an evening entertainment for the benefit of the House of the poor.

ESCAPED FROM JAIL AND BROUGHT BACK AGAIN.—On Thursday last a man named Humphries, who was undergoing his sentence for larceny, made his escape from the jail yard, where he was sent to do some thing. He was since taken in the neighborhood of Beaverton and brought back to his old home. The gates will be kept closer on him for the remainder of his term.

We believe we were in error in saying that the foreman of the office of our contemporary was dismissed. He tells us he left of his own accord, and we accordingly give his version in preference to that of our previous informant. There is a wheel within a wheel, however, but we are not machinists nor engineers, and of course are compelled to use the opinion of others.

THE next meeting of the Teachers' class will be held in the Union School on the first Saturday of November, at which all those that intend joining would do well to be present, as it is desirable to know whether the class shall be continued. Subjects for the next meeting:—Reading, from page 108 to page 120; Grammar, "Ballad of Roe"; Arithmetic, Geo. Progression; Algebra, Quadratics; Euclid, Book III., from page 1 to 18.

A correspondent from the Burleigh Road Settlement informs us that Mr. Atwood Brooks' shanty, Anstruther, was consumed by fire on the 13th instant It caught fire from the stove pipe coming in contact with the roof. There was no help near but Mrs. Brooks, and as she was in ill health, was unable to do anything towards saving the shanty, or anything in it. Our correspondent recommends something being done to assist Mr. B. The best way to do so is to call the neighbors together and raise another house, and then get a little aid towards furnishing it all. Canadians are not behind in this sort of work.

THANKSGIVING DAY.—The Town Council has wisely agreed to proclaim the 5th of November a holiday, in order that our people may have an opportunity of returning thanks to the Giver of all good, for the abundance with which He has blessed our land. This day was chosen to meet the wishes of the different churches which had already appointed it, in compliance with the request of synods and conferences. Thankfulness is always due to the bountiful Dispenser of all blessings, and a day set apart by our Legislature for the purpose of expressing it would meet the wishes of the majority of the people, and would tend to more humanity in its observance.

PRISON STATISTICS.

We have been supplied, through the kindness of Sheriff Hall, to give the following items from the last prison reports:—

Prisoners—Over 16 years: females 16, males 117. Under 16 years: females 0, males 1. Total 134.

Committed—1st time, 82; 2nd time, 24; 3 & time, 8; oftener, 20. One has been 18 times and another 15 times committed.

Married: females 4, males 41. Unmarried: females 12, males 77. Could not read, 67. Temperate, 40; intemperate, 66.

Nationalities—Canada, 69; England, 19; Ireland, 47; Scotland, 5; Nova Scotia, 3; other countries, 0.

Religious denominations—R. Catholics, 72; Church of England, 35; Presbyterians, 17; Methodists, 9; other denominations, 2.

97 labourers, 1 tailor, 4 music teachers, (four times), 4 carpenters, 3 blacksmiths, 2 shoemakers, 3 barbers, 2 painters, 10 vagrants, 3 others, 4 spinsters—total, 134.

Greatest number in jail at one time, 17; insane received during the year, 7; insane in jail, 3.

Cost of rations per day was about 13 cents each.

FIRE IN TORONTO.—The works of Gooderam & Worts, Toronto, were destroyed by fire on Tuesday evening about 6 o'clock. The fire was caused by the bursting of a cask of Benzine in the fermenting rooms of the distillery. The whole place was soon in flames. The loss is very heavy. The work cost $300,000. The stock and material destroyed will also be heavy They have 2,000 head of cattle in their sheds on which they will lose. And over 200 hands will be thrown out of employment. The property was insured, but it is believed that Messrs. Gooderham and Worts will lose over $50,000 above their insurance.

We have received a communication from a spectator anent the East Riding Ploughing Match, but inasmuch as we are fully persuaded that it would do mischief rather than good, we will retain it until we hear from the writer, whom we advise to withdraw it. Let him join the Society if he has not already done so, and then tender his advice in committee or at a meeting of the members. After due reflection we have every reason to believe that he will agree with us.

The next Show of the East Riding

We have good reason to believe that if the Village of Ashburnham exerted itself, the next Agricultural Show of the east riding might be held in that village. We have it on the authority of two directors that if a society were formed in the village, and a little aid extended to the Riding Society, that there is a strong leaning towards bringing the exhibition to our doors next year.

It is well known that we have as good a shed for a show as can be found anywhere, and we are certain that Capt. Rogers would be but too willing to open it for a show.

The cricket ground surpasses any ground almost in Canada for exhibiting animals of all kinds, and it could be obtained for a nominal sum. The village and town, too, are so near each other that there is abundant accommodation, and also a rare opportunity of attracting large crowds of visitors.

Another incentive to getting the show to the village is the probability of having the Show of the East Riding either the day before, or the day after, so that a comparison may be made between the productions and manufactures of each Riding.

We earnestly recommend the consideration of the matter to our villagers, and to the members; and we hope that whatever is necessary to ensure the Exhibition of 1870 for Ashburnham will be done. The expense would be trifling, as we have sheds, grounds well-fenced, and all accommodations.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening the following subject will be discussed: 'Would it be for the benefit of society that women should enjoy the same civil and political rights as men?' The sides will be taken by the following members: Aff—Messrs. J. E. Dixon, M. A., J. Burnham and Kidd. Neg—Messrs. Mason, Carnegie, and J. A. Hall. Readers—Messrs. Johnathan B. Dixon and Moore. Doors open to the public at 7½ p. m., who are respectfully invited to be present.

SNOW.—During Tuesday we had a considerable fall of snow, and a corresponding change in the atmosphere. It continued nearly all day. Yesterday the snow was still on the ground, but the weather was milder. This will cause a rush about the farms. Potatoes, turnips, carrots have to be secured, and general preparations made for winter; but there need be no alarm. We still have a month yet of favorable weather for out-door work.

The Rev. Mr. Schofield, Wesleyan Minister of Lakefield, died very suddenly above our last issue. He was just recovering from a fever, when a relapse or some other attack removed him from earth to a higher and nobler sphere. His remains were taken by railway to his friends, for interment. He leaves a wife and either one or two children to mourn their sudden bereavement.

The Toronto Telegraph says of the appointment of the Finance Minister: "We are convinced of that it is a mistake, as regards Mr. Francis' own future prospects; we are convinced it is a mistake, so far as concerns Sir John Macdonald. But the arrangement, we believe, will be carried out in spite of our protests. Government money and Government patronage will win more easily in Renfrew than anywhere else. The place is corrupt, beyond all question, and we gladly wash our hands of it. What a filthy place Renfrew must be.

R. T. of Good Templars

At the recent session, held in the city of Toronto, on Tuesday, the 19th instant, the following were elected Grand Lodge officers for the current year:—

G. W. C. T., W. Eastland, Esq., Peterborough.
do Councillor, S. Rose, Esq., Kingston.
do V. T., Agnes Carter, Clifton.
do Chaplain, Rev. W. Tindal Gorrie P. G.
do Secretary, E. Campbell, Esq., Mimico.
do Treasurer, T. Fairbairn, Esq., Cheesewater.
do Marshal, G. McLeod, Esq., Bridgeville.
do A. Marshal, T. Parnell, Esq., St Catharines.
do D. Guard, W. Baxter, Esq., West McGillivray.
do O. Guard, J. Summerville, Esq., Lochsaw.

By resolution of the Grand Lodge, the British American Good Templar was recognized as the official organ of the Order. Subscriptions forwarded to W. Eastland, Esq., G. W. C. T., Peterborough, Ontario.—Now is the time to subscribe for a good Temperance paper. The first issue under the sanction of the Grand Lodge will appear about the 10th of November next. 40 cents per annum.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—Permit me through your valuable paper to give a few items on matters in this settlement. A great many settlers are coming into Chandos and Cardiff this fall, and have taken up land; and there are several blocks of good hardwood lands not taken up yet. There is very good land in Cardiff near where the Burleigh road joins the Monck road, east of Bell's lake, east of Lemon lake and west of Talbot's lake. Our Land Agent, Mr. Armstrong, lives in Cardiff, and is very obliging and attentive to intending settlers; gives them all information, travels with them, showing them the lands and doing what he can for the settlement. Immigrants who want land on which to settle can still find good land here. The mode of access is by Peterboro. Mr. Thomas Eastland, the very attentive stage proprietor, will give all information.

But, Mr. Editor, should not the County Council do something towards getting this part of the county settled. There are really thousands of acres of land back here fit for cultivation, which if settled would pay taxes. From Peterboro we get our clothing, groceries, hardware, stoves, flour, pork, &c. Should the town not see its influence to increase the number of settlers on this road. Our live stock—horses, oxen, cows, pigs, sheep, poultry, &c—come from South and Dummer and hence their interest to increase the settlement.

A poor man can do better back here than hired out with a farmer, for, I assure you, we are not without the blessings of life. We have four post offices on the road, one grist mill, two saw mills, a church and four school houses, and we expect that Mr. James Colborne will put up another grist mill in Cardiff next spring. They also require a post office there. In regard to a poor man's prospects coming to here, I may say that I know one hired man who came in here a few years ago, and he has now about 40 acres cleared, 3 barns, 250 stooks of wheat, 180 of oats, 60 of hay, 10 loads of peas 10 tons of hay, 250 bushel of potatoes, 14 acres of turnips, and 30 head of cattle, besides pigs, poultry, &c. What hired man could make that much in a year?

But, Mr. Editor, we look one thing on the road, and that is a magistrate. There is not one on the 65 miles of road of the settlement. Our government should take this into consideration. Of course, we are a law-abiding people but even so, when small troubles arise, it is too bad to have to go to Lakefield. If this should meet the eye of Mr. Rose, we trust it will move him to consider our case.

I remain yours,

Anstruther, Oct. 23. A SETTLER.

Sir John A. Macdonald, Sir Geo. E. Cartier, C. B.s. ad nauseam, in the Cabinet.—Now comes Sir Francis Hincks. We have already too many tizies in Canada.—Toronto Telegraph.

Perfect Digestion means perfect health, and is secured by using Cuby's Pills.

A Pill for the Doctors.

It has often been alleged that Lawyers whose chosen legislature, ex- nunc to frame laws for the administration of which good and their own benefit, prescribing their remuneration. Such certainly cannot be said of the Doctors who tried their hand at law-making to regulate their own profession. During the last session of the Ontario Parliament they asked for "An Act to amend and consolidate the Acts relating to the Profession of Medicine and Surgery," and succeeded in getting one passed into law in which the following extraordinary clause is to be found, to which we ask the earnest attention of our medical friends:

"Any person who shall wilfully and falsely pretend to be a physician, doctor of medicine, licentiate in medicine or surgeon or general practitioner, or shall practice medicine, surgery or midwifery for higher, gain, or hope of reward, or shall falsely take or use any name, title, addition or description, implying, or calculated to lead people to infer that he is registered under this Act, or that he is recognized by law as a physician, surgeon or accoucheur, or a licentiate in medicine, or surgery, or midwifery, or a practitioner in medicine, shall upon a summary conviction before any Justice of the Peace, for any such offence, pay a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, nor less than twenty-five dollars."

The Napanee Standard thinks this is hard on the doctors, and believes they never intended to debar themselves by Act of Parliament from the practice of their profession. Yet as the law stands it is against them.

PRINCE ARTHUR'S GLOVES AND POCKET HANDKERCHIEF—THE GOVERNOR GENERAL'S WHITE HATS.—The eagerness with which a certain class of people seek after any thing in any way pertaining to any celebrated individual, has been especially noticeable throughout the whole tour of the Prince. Where he has stopped to dine, the remnants of wine and water have been eagerly drunk up, and in some cases the glasses themselves have been carried away. One of the servants gave satisfaction to a much larger number than could otherwise have had a sip, at each railway eating saloon, by changing the glass and then selling it as often as the credulous maidens desired it. When the Prince had turned the sod of the new railway, all the ladies in the vicinity of the sacred earth rushed for it and triumphantly exhibited small bits of the same wrapped in handkerchiefs. Colonel Elphin-tone very considerately wears nice new gloves when he travels, and the Prince usually wears a pair of soiled lavenders. The three gentlemen also wear hats exactly alike on all occasions. When they take off their coats and leave their gloves, every one thinks that the best gloves must belong to the Prince, and the consequence is that Colonel Elphinstone has lost seven right-hand gloves. The Prince's pocket handkerchief was snatched from his hand at the ball at London, and every effort to recover it proved ineffectual, but about a week afterward it was sent to him through some unknown source. The Governor-General, too, is a sufferer at the hands of the relic plunderers. He is accustomed to wear a white hunter's hat, and during his trip through Ontario he lost no less than six.—Gazette.

LORD DERBY AND MR. BRIGHT.—A correspondent of the Leeds Mercury tells the following story. During the cotton famine, Mr. Bright was severely censured for not contributing to the relief fund, and his niggardliness was contrasted with the munificent gift of 10,000*l.* made by Lord Derby. All that time Mr. Bright was keeping on his workmen on three quarters' time wages, and was sinking thousands upon thousands week after week, year after year, until by the time the war came to an end he had paid away a total sum compared with which Lord Derby's gift was a mere bagatelle. During all this time, while he was seeing the savings of a lifetime disappear, he said nothing to all the taunts that were uttered against him. At last Mr Garth, a lawyer, who was then a candidate for Guildford, made a charge against Mr. Bright as sweeping and so false that the member for Birmingham was bound to take notice of it, and to correct his calumniator in no very mild language. Even then he did not refer to what he had done for the men whom he was accused of oppressing. But a friend, unknown, I believe, to him, went to Lord Derby, laid before him the facts, and asked if, after this, he thought the organs of the Conservative party ought to continue their attacks upon Mr. Bright. "Good God! and he said nothing!" was Lord Derby's reply. Thenceforth the attacks ceased.

BREW CUSTARD.—To one quart of milk take four large eggs; set the milk on top of the stove in a clean vessel; then separate the eggs, beat the white into a stiff froth; when the milk is scalding hot skip the whites on top of the milk, turning them over gently so that they will cook; then lift out and whip up the yolks with two tablespoonfuls of sugar; pour into the milk, stirring rapidly all the time it is scalding. The very moment it comes to boiling point lift it off; if it boils it will curdle. When it cools sufficiently pour it into the flost dish with any kind of flavoring, then put the froth on top and it will be splendid.

CORN PUFFS.—Six heaping tablespoonfuls of flour, three of cornmeal, three eggs, one pint of milk and a little salt. Beat very light and bake in a quick oven fifteen minutes. Fill the cups half full.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for want of a market for coarse lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchase in the Province the past year, and being able to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our Lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, fever-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co. employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of these who find themselves rejuvenated by this process, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own.—[Boston Commercial.

AYER'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy never now has its use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of them whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, or Sore Throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

"WHO was that?"—It is with feelings of the most profound regret that we have this week to record the death of our townsman, Dr. Crawford. During a residence of ten years in this village (Dunbar), in the practice of his profession as a physician, he seemed for himself a reputation for skill in his calling which seldom falls to the lot of one so young. It is no disparagement to that one so eminently gifted should have become the victim of a propensity against which intelligence and experience does not appear to have a certain defence.—At a time when the prevailing sentiment is inspired by the conviction that in his death the profession has lost an ornament and society a member—who, had the qualities with which he was endowed been subjected to the control of reason and sobriety—to all appearance is of more than ordinary usefulness, it would ill become us to cast even a shadow of reflection upon his memory.—The counterpart of the injunction to "bear one another's burdens" is, "he not partakers in others sins more than your own." If these injunctions were not only understood but admitted to their full enough practical application, it would soon be made manifest that much of The Intemperance which prevails, and its consequences, should be debited to the account of those who, by their countenance, give responsibility to the traffic in intoxicating liquors, and whose opened doors beckon a snare and a stumbling block to many an unsuspecting youth. The victim is more frequently deserving of pity and sympathy than of blame.—Durham Chronicle.

J F Beswick, a piano tuner of Belleville lately hung himself in a cell, while in a state of delerium tremens. The Chronicle says:—He was put in a cell, and while there banged himself with his only brace, and was found dead. Beswick came to this country some years ago, and whenever he chose to work and abstain from drink, he made a very good living, saved money at his business to which he had no superior in this country. He came to this city towards the end of the past summer, well dressed and with money in his pocket, having abstained from drink for three months, and hopes were entertained that he would drink no more. One day however, he had some angry words with a person which seemed to throw him off his balance, and he took to whiskey with redoubled avidity; with what results we have seen—death by his own hand in a prison cell!

An individual the other day went to one of the drug stores in Boston and asked for a pint of whiskey, claiming that he wanted to put it upon some roots for medicine. He obtained the whiskey, and immediately raised the bottle to his lips and imbibed a grown person's dose of the ardent. The drug clerk remonstrated with the customer for his duplicity and was informed that it was for the roots of his tongue which he desired the whiskey.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can the head of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., lages each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

THE RECENT FAILURES

Of two of the Largest English Assurance Offices, naturally causing much anxiety to the minds of Assurers in all Companies, the Directors of the

CANADA LIFE

Have published a Report and met valuation of all its policy and annuity obligations, by an Actuary totally unconnected with it, the Hon. Elimer Wright, of Boston, late Insurance Commissioner for the State of Massachusetts.

It is believed that such a voluntary submission of the Company's position to an eminent and entirely independent Actuary of the Hon. Elimer Wright's well known high character and professional skill, will add to that public satisfaction and confidence which the "Canada Life Company" enjoys.

Copies of Mr. Wright's Report may be had at the Head Office, or at any of the Agencies throughout the Dominion.

Persons who may be assured in the Companies whose condition is most shattered, desiring to join the "Canada Life," will be dealt with upon such terms as are reasonable and fair.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are strong, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that the great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Connecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitating the passage of teething, by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. To almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

NOTICE.

THE next meeting of the Senior Board of Instruction of the Peterboro' Western District, for the examination of Teachers, will

A SISTER SALLY'S COMPLAINT.

Procrastination, fy! avaunt! stand back!
Nor dare look me to final number two;
I've slumbid my pen, and there who dare'st me check,
Shall when, and tremble twice to plead yonder!
My yellow locks slow, nor has this loving heart
Felt one heart's pause since long before October;
And all because (ah, friends, pen mustn't start!)
My husband's grown too sibbing and too subtle,
And trusts a dollous with th' W she were a rubber!

An anxious frown sits over on his brow—
A dismal gloom—which every day grows worse!
A second Daniel Dancer one can trace
Whene'er he fumbles in his heathern purse;
A rise on pennyroyal, potted-head, or cheese,
Or one knee farthing on the price of bread,
At once sends down his head heaviest his knees,
And, but for groaning, one would think him dead:
I never find at ease until he snores at bed!

My Sunday bonnet is a perfect fright;
I cannot walk abroad in open day;
And when a wedding only stirs at night,
You know right well what all the neighbors say.
With faded mauve silk dress in which I sit,
Those gutta percha boots I'm forced to wear,
For one like me are really quite unfit;
But no, husband (why so wilfully sheer?)
Keeps every shopbrook with most peculiar care.

Just hear him count: "Potatoes, blacking, beef
Marmalade, red herrings, chiffon, soap—
That comes to (woman, surely you are deaf?)
"No, no; but husband, mind the new clothes rope."
"Well, spot! those that's just five-and-three ounces!"
And down it goes, accompanied with a sigh;
While I, surprised-like, ask, "Is that a fact?"
Did never yet could hear my lord's reply,
Though oftimes I have thought a tear stood in his eye!

"Whose hat is this? whose petticoats? whose shoes?"
Again he questions, slowly turning o'er
The little things that Kate and Willie use,
Which now lie straggling on the kitchen floor.
"Umph!—ay! they'll soon require another stock!
It is not here that one need try to save!"
"Well, no—not fact," and pointing to the clock,
I gently whisper—like a common slave—
"The hour is getting late—you'd best begin to shave!

Precious wretch! where will his meanness stop?
To grasp and heap shall be for ever strain?
Must I confess that even in the shop,
The poor's "petition" comes to him in vain,
Excuse me, friends, if sometimes I do think
That I'd be happier in my humble sphere,
If now and then he'd take a drop of drink—
A pint or so—to keep him in good cheer
Till he incurred his life—then I'd have naught to fear!

RECIPES.

HOW TO CRYSTALLIZE BASKETS.—Form the basket of bonnet wire in any fanciful shape. Then wrap the wire neatly, but not closely, with white crewel or yarn, otherwise the alum will not crystallize on the wire. Make a solution of alum and rain-water, and boil it slowly a few minutes in a brass kettle, putting in enough alum to saturate the water; suspend the wire basket by a string tied to a stick laid across a wooden vessel large enough to contain the basket without touching any part of it.—Pour the boiling solution of alum over this in the wooden vessel, being careful to have a sufficient quantity to cover the basket entirely; set it in a cool place for twenty-four hours, where it will not be agitated to disturb the formation of the crystals. Blue crystals may be obtained by dissolving indigo in the alum water; yellow by a little turmeric or gamboge; purple by using extract of logwood; rose pink by adding a little poke-berry juice to the solution. Cool, frosty weather is the best time to crystallize.

A GOOD WASHING RECIPE.—Mix half a gallon soft soap with half a gill of alcohol; rub this mixture on the soiled clothes, and soak them three hours in moderately warm water; then rinse out nicely in clear water.

TO MAKE LEAVEN.—Stir cornmeal in a pint of fresh buttermilk; add an old yeast cake dissolved in water; make it about the consistence of batter-bread, and set it in a warm place to rise. When well risen, add more meal, make it into cakes, and dry in the shade.

TO CLEAN CORKS.—Dissolve glue as you would to mend furniture; spread it on the corks; place woollen rags over them to prevent the glue from sticking to the stocking; repeat the application a few times and the cure will be effectual.

SAUSAGE.—To fifty pounds of meat ground fine, add salt, pepper and sage to taste; mix well, and add half a pound brown sugar; this prevents the sausage from becoming strong. No water should be used on sausage at all; and a good deal of fat meat should be mixed in with the lean pieces in grinding to make the sausage rich enough to cook itself.

INDIAN LOAF.—To one quart of skimmed milk put one teaspoonful of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a cup of new milk, a pint of cornmeal, a large hand-ful of flour and a little salt. This must be well beaten; then pour it into pans to bake, which requires five hours. Serve hot, and bake just as mixed.

CHEAP RECIPE FOR DYING BLUE.—Procure two juice of ripe cider-berries by pressing them through a sieve. To two gallons of this juice add one ounce of copperas and two ounces of alum. Boil the article designed to be colored blue in this mixture in a copper kettle ten minutes; air, dry and rinse.

SYLLABUB.—Four quarts of nice, fresh cream, one pint of wine, the juice of three lemons, and two pints of loaf sugar; mix, beat it well, and as the froth rises put it into glasses to be served.

RICE PUDDING.—Boil half a pound of rice in new milk; when cold add half a pound of butter, half a pound of sugar, two eggs beaten well; flavor with cinnamon and nutmeg. Bake in a pudding dish one hour.

TEA CAKES.—Three eggs, three cups of sugar, one cup of butter, one quart of flour, tea-spoonful of soda, a little salt, and buttermilk enough to knead it well. Bake in a brisk oven.

CORN BREAD.—Beat two eggs, mix with them one pint of sour milk, one pint of cornmeal; warm one teaspoonful of butter; stir well, dissolve one teaspoonful bicarbonate of soda in a cup of milk; bake brown in shallow pan.

SPIRITUAL NOTIONS.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

"A FRIEND, therefore, unit of quality known for the last ten years, never failing in a single instance in permanent relief when directly used, and we now never hear a single note of dissatisfaction, where the directions have been properly followed out, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, paramount in the history of medical preparations. It utilizes forth its own Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach, Pimples or Acne, and reasons to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Dysentery, pains in the side, loins and limb, neuralgia, sprains, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast crowding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for measles, burns, bruises, sprains, chilblains, chapped nipples, bilious chills, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstructions from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, heaviness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, associated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes spasmodic fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 39

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious stimulants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form MANIFOLD CONCENTRATED CURES. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain readers of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the victims recorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

New Method of Washing Clothes Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot soda and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through it—chemicals, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes-washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used to any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the entire will be ready I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in these Counties that have ever received any where near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I secure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical motor used in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

Brunswick, Ohio, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may return wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make it change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gauge, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Peterboro, October 7th, 1868. -ly

To Messrs. CUMMINGS & SONS, Conway P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Wanee, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, [illegible]

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the stomach which gradually during [illegible] confined to my house, and on up to my bed, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. This almost two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical aid, employing, at different times, three doctors, and members of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Strengthening Remedy by reading the notice purchased, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Strengthening Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Strengthening Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEGG, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her gentleness to be free from anxiety particular. I know that while ill her case was considered hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Strengthening Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Sensitive Medicine.

Prepared on the principle that a remedy can be found to control disease, when the cause of disease is known, these Pills are the result of analysis, directed to the cause of complaints, the system. Their penetrating power, their searching and purifying properties, their safety and certainty, their sugar coating, their price, their universal use, their world-wide fame, their cures, their immense cures, their cures of real cases, their cures of real sufferers, their cures of real sufferers everywhere, their cures of real sufferers everywhere known, have rendered them the best and cheapest cathartic for every one to use who needs a purge. Their sugar coating preserves them perfectly fresh in any climate, and renders them pleasant to take. They are the best laxative for children, because they are mild as well as effectual. They are the best physic for travellers and for families, because they are portable, and do not quickly lose their power by keeping. They are the best remedy for the sick-headache, for foul stomach, for indigestion, for biliousness, for jaundice, for dyspepsia, for foul breath, for want of appetite, for dysentery, for colic, for rheumatism, for dropsy, for worms, for gout, for neuralgia, for erysipelas, for scrofula, for ulcers, for humors, for pimples, for blotches, for boils, for tetter, for salt rheum, for scald head, for ringworm, for sores, for cancers, for tumors, for all the various derangements of the internal organs. Containing neither calomel nor any other mineral substance, they are purely vegetable, and may be taken with perfect safety by any one. No family should be without them in the house, or use any other cathartic. Their sugar coating preserves them perfectly fresh in any climate, and renders them pleasant to take. Poetry.

BEAUTIFUL HANDS.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands,
They're neither white nor small,
And yet, I know, would scarcely think
That they were fair at all.
I've looked on hands whose form and hue
A sculptor's dream might be,
Yet are these wrinkled hands
Most beautiful to me.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands—
Though heart were weary and sad,
These patient hands kept toiling on
That the children might be glad.
I also see wasp, of toiling hands
To childhood's distant day,
I think how these hands rested not
When mine were at their play.

Such beautiful, beautiful hands,
They're growing feeble now;
For time and pain have left their mark
On hand, and heart, and brow.
Alas! alas! the soaring time,
And the sad, and day to me,
When 'neath the daisies, out of sight,
These hands will folded be.

But oh! beyond this shadow land,
Where all is bright and fair,
I know full well these dear old hands
Will palms of victory bear
Where crystal streams, through endless years,
Flow over golden sands,
And where the old grow young again,
I'll clap my mother's hands.

The Romance of a Rich Young Girl.

CHAPTER IF.

RAOUL AT THE PARSONAGE.

Raoul had passed two bitter months.—At any other time he would have found relief for his despondency in the affection and moral energy of Gaudrax, but Gaudrax was now completely engrossed by one of those furious passions which often break forth in middle life, especially in a virgin heart and blood. Accusing himself, as Christian Raoul abruptly quitted Paris. Like Sibylle, he sought for solitude, but it did not bring him the same consolation. Solitude for him was an empty as the heavens, and his wound, instead of healing then, gangrened. His work was powerless to divert his mind. Twenty times a day he threw aside his pencil with disgust, and sought to extinguish in the fumes of the cigar the thoughts which consumed him.

The image of Sibylle, ever present to his mind, called up within it a throng of ideas and feelings in which passion, regrets and anger were tumultuously confounded. He had seen for a moment in the love of this young girl, in their boundless union, and the future it opened before him, the accomplishment of one of those dreams of peace, of purity, and of moral tranquillization that are often so seductive to souls disturbed and discontented with themselves. The scruples that had caused Sibylle to break this dream and which he understood so imperfectly, seemed to him puerile, as unacceptable, and even criminal, and at the very instant when he was giving way to his irritation, the image of Mademoiselle de Ferias would rise before his eyes clothed with her singular grace, at once elegant and pure, chaste and passionate, and the blood burned in his veins. He cursed and adored, in the same breath, this charming and barbarous child.

The letter of his Cousin Blanche had reached him while he was in this mental condition. The young duchess had sent it to him from a caprice of feminine regularness, and had no idea of the strange design it would suggest to Raoul. He had not finished reading the letter of the duchess and the annexed communication when his determination was taken.

He immediately returned to Paris, spent a fortnight in collecting necessary material, and making some preliminary studies, and then set out for Ferias, a prey to a thousand contradictory feelings, among which a sort of ironical and malignant despair was generally predominant.

The malevolent disposition plainly appeared in his language at his first interview with the curate, but his native generosity quickly kindled before the timid and kindly countenance of the old man, and he soon won his good-will by the turn of polite and gentle deference which followed the heroic mess of his first address. The poor curate was then only the more embarrassed when this stranger of such lofty airs and such exquisite manners begged to be directed to a hotel in the village where he could find lodging and a table during the continuance of his work.

'A hotel, Monsieur? Bless me! Marianne! Monsieur is inquiring for a hotel!'

'If the gentleman wants a hotel,' said Marianne, 'let him build one!'

'Marianne! Let me see. Alas! Monsieur, the inns of the neighborhood are very wretched. Ah! how have I forgotten to think of this, but, Monsieur, I have here in the parsonage a little chamber—a very plain one, indeed, but it is clean. If you would be good enough to accept of it, with my simple table?'

'I am afraid, Monsieur le Curé,' said Raoul, 'that I shall be a burden to you; but I should be delighted with the prospect of a daily intercourse with you, and if you will consent to make my acquaintance by allowing me to contribute to the poor of your parish the money you bestow upon me.'

'Don't speak of it!' said the curate.—'May I ask your name, Monsieur?'

This question, so plain to foresee, was precisely one for which Raoul was not prepared. Of all the vices, falsehood was the most repugnant to his proud nature. He hesitated, blushed, and at last, lying a little as regards the form, but telling the truth in reality, he gave his title. 'Le Comte,' said he.

'Very well, Monsieur le Comte,' said the curate, 'be sure we shall get on very well together. Make ready the green chamber, Marianne. But perhaps you are hungry, Monsieur le Comte?'

'You have hit it exactly, Monsieur le Curé. I am hungry. You can what trouble I shall be to you—I am hungry already.'

'So much the better, so much the better, Monsieur le Comte. Marianne, you must make ready the chamber a little later. Kill a chicken.'

'No, I beg of you, Monsieur le Curé, don't kill anybody. You have some eggs, haven't you? I adore an omelet, and I [illegible] them incomparably.'

A few minutes later, the Count de Chalys was seated before the curate's little round table, and congratulated Marianne upon the excellence of her omelet. Some cold chicken, a bottle of old wine, and a savory cup of coffee completed the repast, during which Raoul, animated by a hidden fever, displayed a kind and playful flow of spirits, that completely won the heart of the Abbe Renaud, and ended by calling to the prim and [illegible] visage of Marianne the unheard-of phenomenon of a smile.—The result was not less [illegible] sympathy for the old man, as he heard him pronounce at each moment with enthusiastic predilection the name of Sibylle, and it was not without lively interest that he discovered under the caustic kindliness of his host those traits of nobleness and dignity which vouched for his spiritual affinity with Mademoiselle de Ferias.

'Monsieur le Curé,' said he, rising from the table, 'I am sure we shall be good friends, shall we not?'

'For my part, my dear sir,' replied the curate, 'the thing is accomplished already.'

'But, Monsieur le Curé, I don't wish to show any treachery. I am not very pious.'

'Ah! well, Monsieur le Comte, what shall I say? At your age, Saint Paul was less so than you.'

'That is true, Monsieur le Curé, but times have changed. And, will you allow me to sketch in your garden?'

'In my garden, in your chamber, in mine, wherever you like.'

'In my kitchen if you like,' added Marianne.

The night had fallen; the pure moon floated through the sky casting a silver shore upon the alleys of the garden, fringing the arbors with shadows, and framing with a snowy light the little steeple of the church whose triangular figure stood out in bold relief, upon the summit of the neighboring cliff. While Raoul was [illegible] his sight, [illegible] his mind, [illegible] the curate, [illegible] in his chamber, [illegible] in his watchman.

'Bertha, Monsieur l'Abbe!' said she; 'what sort of an animal do you call that? You told me a little young man was coming. He's an odd little young man! He's got all his teeth, this one!'

'I don't understand it at all, my daughter, but I shall be much astonished if he doesn't prove a great artist, a very great artist.'

'I don't know any thing about great artists,' said Marianne, 'but, faith, he's a lovely man, do you think I am a woman easy to be coaxed, Monsieur l'Abbe?'

'Oh! no, Marianne!'

'Well, he coaxes me. Faith, he is a lovely man, and so deuced apt. Old Peter said I have been arranging his things and his toilet traps in his chamber. Ah! monsieur, such pretty things I shall [illegible] nicety! small linge [illegible] for a senator, upon my word!'

'For shame, Marianne, he is calling me.'

And the Abbe Renaud ran to Raoul, who had just called to him.

'Monsieur le Curé, I beg your pardon; but I hear music. Are there any nixies about your shores? Listen!'

'Ah!' said he; 'yes, it is true; it is the organ in the church yonder; it's Mademoiselle Sibylle, she comes sometimes during the week to rehearse the pieces she is to perform the next Sunday. I am delighted that she has come this evening. I will go at once and announce to her your happy arrival.'

Raoul stopped him.

'No, no, I beg of you, Monsieur le Curé. Don't tell her that I am here. I prefer that she should not know of my arrival until she can judge of my work, since she is interested in it. I hope she will be the more agreeably surprised. You will oblige me very much, Monsieur le Curé.'

'Well, well, just as you please, Monsieur le Comte; but, you know, she will be at Sandrayo soon, of course.'

'Very well. To-day is Monday; by Sunday I shall have already sketched in something. And now, Monsieur le Curé, I am going to ask your permission to go and look at the sea from the top of the cliff. Good evening for the present, Monsieur le Curé.'

Raoul affected a careless manner as he left the curate, but as soon as he was out of the garden, he quickened his steps and began to climb rapidly the slope at the foot of which the parsonage stood. When he reached the top, he cast one uneasy glance about him. The cliff was deserted. He climbed over the wall of the churchyard, and, directing his steps toward the sound of the organ, soon reached one of the side-windows of the church. The window was quite low, and by reading himself of some grass in the masonry of a buttress, he gained sufficient height to enable him to look into the church; but his eyes, accustomed to the bright twilight which covered the cliff and the sea, could hardly penetrate the comparative obscurity within. He could only distinguish the feeble light of the sacramental lamp hanging from the vault, and some beads of white light projected through the windows upon the pavement of the nave. Suddenly one of these reflections, quickly changing its position, lighted up the wood-work of the organ, and the form of Sibylle emerged like a pale spectre from the shadow. Her drooping forehead, her listless attitude betrayed a touching melancholy. It was plain to see that she was improvising; her fingers flitted over the key-board with an uncertain inspiration, at times becoming a passionate cry, and then dying away in a languishing reverie. All at once, as the chords of the organ expressed some more fervent prayer, as some more dolorous regret, her head was thrown back, and her eyes fell on the window in front of her whence Raoul was watching her. The greater part of the window was occupied by a painting, and she could only perceive an indistinct form, but her head instantly quitted the key-board, and she stood erect as if suddenly [illegible], which the action of the organ [illegible] suddenly. Raoul slipped quickly to the ground. His heart [illegible] it in his bosom; his first thought was to fly like a child, but his pride restrained him, and concealing himself in the angle of the buttress, he waited.

After a few moments of [illegible] Raoul heard the door of the church close. Almost at the same moment the young girl appeared [illegible] the wounded gently as if to pass [illegible]

'Is it you, Jacques?' said she.

Receiving no answer, the young girl added [illegible]

'How foolish I am!'

Raoul heard her departing. Without leaving the protecting shadow of the buttress, he leaned cautiously forward and looked at her. She was walking slowly [illegible] her head, and with the other lifted the long skirts of her riding-habit. When she had reached the well which bounded the churchyard on the side of the sea, she stopped, and placing her hat, adorned with long plumes, upon her head, clasped over some stones which had fallen from the wall, mounted upon the gothic top, and stood there motionless, her eyes turned to seaward, while her elegant and somber profile was sharply and strongly drawn upon the limpid twilight of the horizon.

After some moments of contemplation, she leapt lightly to the ground and disappeared.

Raoul now quitted his shelter, and slowly approached the little wall which had tempted the young girl for a pedestral. He scaled the young girl for a pedestral. He followed along the cliff and saw her no more. Stopping himself upon the wall, he sought for the traces of her footsteps, picked upon a bit of trampled moss and pressed them to his lips. The brilliant expanse of ocean extended before him, darkening at the horizon and mingling with the sky. He gazed upon the tranquil scene.

'What! and can you there?' he interrupted himself. 'For God! who never [illegible] to mine!'

When he returned to the parsonage, the Abbe Renaud and Marianne were astonished at the harsh brevity of his language.

'These artists are capricious,' said the curate timidly to the old servant.

'Oh! I don't care for his caprices,' said Marianne; 'they ruining her trade. 'Eh! young man,' cried she, 'don't forget to put out your candle, after you have said your prayers, at supper.'

'Mademoiselle Marianne,' replied Raoul from the head of the stairs, 'you shall be obeyed—[illegible] [illegible]

When the Count de Chalys awoke the next morning, the sun was shining through the rose branches before his window, and made a bright mosaic pattern upon the varnished bricks of the floor. A feeling of gayety, of courage, and of hope warmed his veins. He rose hastily, opened his window, and smilingly saluted the Abbe Renaud, who was already coming his breviary in the shade of his fig tree. An instant later they entered the church together, and found there some laborers the curate had sent for, and who now erected, under the direction of the count, a scaffolding in the nave. Raoul commenced his work at once, and his first strokes showed so much mastery of his brush, that the countenance of the old curate beamed with delight.

His rapture was complete when Raoul explained the general of the composition he proposed. The chief episodes of the Gospel poem were to cover the parts of the side-walls enclosed between the pillars. The vault of the ceiling, filled with sacred allegories, would form, as it were, a mystic commentary of the lateral frescoes, and would be connected with each by the [illegible] bright tints, accordant with the character of the particular scene represented. At the upper part of the vault, above the entrance to the choir, would appear the triumphant ascension of Christ among the stars.

'My dear Monsieur le Comte,' said the curate, 'may God grant me length of life to see all this, and I will sing my Nunc dimittis with all my heart.'

The excellent old man, notwithstanding his impatience, endeavored several time during the day and those which followed to moderate the passionate ardor Raoul brought to his work. Monsieur de Chalys feared to see every instant the probable appearition of Sibylle, and without giving precise form to this childish hope, he fluttered himself that in advancing his work he should increase his chances of touching the heart of the young girl. The curate, from whom he could not conceal his anxiety, shared in it without understanding it, from the mere kindness of his heart, and employed the most Machiavelian craft to keep Mademoiselle de Ferias at a distance from the church and parsonage during the whole week. But all his diplomacy could not stifle the rumor that such an important event had opened through the parish, and the next Saturday in the forenoon, Sibylle, coming to the village to pay some charitable visits, heard from twenty different mouths, as she alighted from her carriage among the village gossips, that a painter from Paris had been at work for a week in the church, and was doing wonders. Somewhat astonished at the news, and very curious to ascertain its truth, Sibylle left to Miss O'Neil the charge of distributing her alms, and hastened toward the church.

The Count de Chalys was finishing at this moment a sketch of the Adoration of the Infant Jesus by the Magi. The Star in the East was shining in the sombre sky of the vault and casting a holy light upon the interior of the sacred stable, upon the Virgin mother and the kneeling kings. An angel, dimly perceived, held the star in the heavens like a golden lamp. Raoul had devoted to the execution of this composition all his skill, all his talent, and all his love; and he had imbued it with such sweet and striking mystery that it had that morning drawn from the old curate the homage of a tear.

The artist was gladly dreaming with a last touch of his pencil the pure countenance of the angel, when all at once the [illegible] door which leant against the scaffolding [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The London Press on the late Duke of Derby.

The Times, in its obituary article on the late Lord Derby, says: No one can be a statesman without statesmanship temperament; with this the Earl of Derby was never endowed. He was too impulsive to resist the temptation of making mischief on occasion, both in and out of season. His career at the Italian struggle will ever be remembered as a proof of his recklessness in speaking on foreign affairs. The Duke of Wellington bequeathed to him his influence in the House of Lords, but the bequest could not be executed. The monarchy of the Duke's soldier-like virtues, had not descended on his successor. Great as was his ascendency among the Conservative Peers, he never gained the confidence of his countrymen.

The Telegraph points to the fact that Lord Derby employed his latest breath in public to declaim with all the solemnity of a man hiding from the world against measures of justice and necessity like the Irish Church Bill, and adds that this shows how the age and country had gone beyond him.

The Standard predicts that while the present generation lives Lord Derby will be remembered throughout his own province, not only as an orator, scholar and statesman, of whom Lancashire may well be proud, but as a magistrate who in the direst trial took his place as leader in the work of relief and charity, as the rich man who cared for the sorrows of the poor, as the gentleman who respected the pride of the lowly, as the Premier of England, and as the kindly neighbor, generous friend, and Christian gentleman.

The News says that Lord Derby was not a great statesman, but was a great political personality. He will hold a place in the history of England, not for what he did, still less for what he failed to do, but for what he was. He was the last of the barons, the latest not the least—he was a perfect example of a properly aristocratic politician with the merits and virtues, dignity and fidelity of his order. When he consented to desert a principle, he did so under the influence of a strongly felt if erroneously interpreted obligation to the sovereign and his political comrades.

A satisfactory result of the late Fenian alarm from Lake Huron has been to demonstrate the high efficiency of our volunteer organization, as well as to offer another example of the cheerful alacrity with which we can rely upon our volunteers responding to the call of duty. Within thirty hours of receipt by the Adjutant-General here of the first intelligence of the contemplated Fenian movement every preparation had been made to meet it, and a point three hundred and fifty miles distant from the Capital placed in a condition of defence mob as to create the amplest feeling of security. Whatever grounds may have existed for the apprehensions entertained, and whether the information conveyed to headquarters shall prove to have been accurate or exaggerated, the prompt and decisive action which followed its receipt cannot be without satisfactory effect in the morning it conveys to the most reckless filibuster. This, the most recent instance of the energy with which the resources at its command can be handled by the department will leave little doubt as to the result of any desperate effort at imitation of O'Neil's farce at Fort Erie. The three years that have elapsed since then have been so well spent in perfecting our defences that any similar eruption to-day, from whatever quarter it might be attempted, could only result in the total destruction of the desperadoes beerayed into such folly, and must, in all probability, furnish the coup de grace to any lingering hopes which even Fenian ignorance can entertain of the possibility of immunity for their crime.

North Renfrew.—The News says that the readiness with which Mr. Supple resigned his seat in the Local House, to make way for Mr. Murray, surprised those who knew him best. An explanation of the singular instance of self-sacrifice is passing round that, perhaps, for the present it would be as well not to allude to. However we will watch its developments; and if Mr. Supple suddenly finds himself possessed of very extensive and yet unoccupied timber limits on the Kepawa or the Temiscaming, we hope he will be perfectly prepared with a full and particular explanation of how he came by it. Some of the friends of Hincks who returned to-night confess that, unless money is very freely used, there is now a poor chance for him, as great is the revulsion of feeling against the Government since the second resignation in the constituency. Murray is also likely to lose his way by a defect from Deacon.

The Contracts for a considerable portion of the work on the Nipissing Railway were awarded on Wednesday. Mr. Edward Wheeler has the contract for fencing the line and furnishing ties from Scarboro to Toronto. Messrs. John Gitty & Co., of Toronto, are contractors for the clearing, stone grubbing, grading culverts, bridges and cattle guards, on the line to Cobourg. The work is to be completed to Uxbridge by the 1st July, 1870; to Argyle in Eldon by 1st August, 1870, and to Cobourg by 1st September, 1870—that is provided that the bonuses of interested municipalities are forthcoming. We have no doubt the work will go bravely on to completion.

There is apprehension of some suffering this winter in many of the southern townships, where the grain was burnt at the end of October. The Stanford Mentor says people "at the front will hardly believe that in that section of the country the harvest is not yet over. Not such is the fact; in the newer settlements from 10 to 15 miles from the lake shore, there is still a good deal of wheat in the field, besides oats and peas, to say nothing of potatoes, turnips and other roots.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and costly that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Horse Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hord & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the Sacred Law; the discovery of the laws of Mother Nature has almost perfected Medical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeian by the Great Rheumatic Remedy, which has so often checked the torrent of those long diseases of the throat which ignorance and exposure have united to make so common.

A MYSTERY AT WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no one or nay was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shifted,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sen ence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none him

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!

'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.

So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them,
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness—
Seduced me thus to purchase

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1869.

NORTH RENFREW.

The nomination took place on Tuesday at Pembroke. There were about 500 persons present. A Mr. John Crawford nominated Mr. Hincks and Mr. A. Foster seconded him. Mr. Thomas Caswell nominated Mr. Findlay, and Mr. Thomas Deacon seconded the nomination.

Mr. Hincks used the same threadbare arguments of loyal subjects strengthening the hands of the government, supporting John A., saving the country, of John A. having always the best men irrespective of party, and all this fudge, perfect nonsense that we are tired listening to. Where are the annexationists and Independents of both past and present? They are the Tories,—Galt, Huntington and others.

Hon. Mr. Read, at the nomination, made a speech in favor of Sir Francis, and at its close is reported as saying that he considered Confederation was not near so good as Federal Union. What has that to do with the present. Sirs John, George and Francis are united to work out Confederation, not a Federal Union.

Sir Francis was very careful not to enter into the Toronto Debenture case, nor the Grand Trunk Jobs. The selling of his party by forming a coalition, and all the Kindred and one things held in the shade. The burden of his speech was his pension! and how to please Sir John.

[illegible] brought [illegible] $5,000 a year. Sir John hopes for the best in him, that he himself may have sweet dreams and indulgence. We only hope they may not get disappointed.

Mr. Findlay made a manly independent and telling speech, and thoroughly received by those present.

Money is strictly being strictly prohibited, and will be used as freely. Sir F. is an adept at managing these matters, and will do his best to succeed if the people of Renfrew do not spare him there, and send him to Barbadoes again.

Sheriff Powell was also present and opened on making a speech—even Sir F. could not restrain him from making a fool of himself. Is it not time that the Attorney-General should say he could spare him? Their services were not required! It is a lasting disgrace to the country that a government official should be allowed to act as Sheriff Powell is doing—stumping for Findlay for Hincks.

TOWN AFFAIRS.

There is all likelihood that pasture having fences or other obstructions on the streets will be compelled to remove them. It appears that the Street Inspector for both the men working opposite Dr. Gen. Burnham's new building, Brock street, to erect a fence that was only in line with other fences already up. Mr. Burnham cannot see why he should be prevented putting up a fence while others are allowed to build fences in equally objectionable places, and the result will be trouble for the Council, unless all are served alike. This is but just. All ratepayers should have equal privileges.

The gas men are at work, manufacturing some of this staple commodity for consumption while the mains are [illegible]. It was intended to have it ready for use the [illegible] session, but failing in this, a meter must have been engaged in Toronto to supply until Lloyd M. P. P. with enough of that cooling beverage while he makes his speeches. He lost his speech last session, but a detective being sent in pursuit, it was returned in time for that celebrated peroration that so much distinguished him, and induced one of his warmest supporters, who was in the house, to exclaim, "what a fool some men make of themselves." This session John Sandfield intends introducing gas for the particular benefit of Peterboro members; but as matters are not completely arranged, we must defer remarks till next week.

The Steamer Enterprise will make two excursion trips on Friday to Hales' Mills and return. The first will be at 9.30 a.m., the second at 1.30 o'clock, returning respectively at 12 and at 6 o'clock.

The daughter of a farmer of Emily lately eloped with a pedler. The old man fired a shot at them in the dark, as they vanished out of his sight, but missed both.

Board of School Trustees.—There was no meeting of the School Board on Tuesday evening. No quorum.

The rumor that Mr. Benson had been appointed a member of the Dominion Cabinet is contradicted.

There was no meeting of the Town Council on Monday evening. No quorum.

The Local Parliament was to open yesterday at Toronto.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

The British Canadian Port Hope takes [illegible] Monaghan [illegible] Monaghan [illegible] Monaghan

We invite the attention of our Irish Catholic citizens, to other Irish Catholic paper says on Politics.

THE REPEAL AGITATION.

The Irish Canadian says:—Our object in referring to the contest in progress in the North Riding of Renfrew is not so much to speculate on the chances of success of the several candidates, as to direct the attention of our readers to the infamous character of the schemes further by means of which it is sought to prevent a fair and free exercise of the franchise in that Riding. Not the least surprising feature in the scandalous contest is the fact that there is little if any attempt at concealment and the "high contracting parties" go about the matter as if the electors and their votes were legitimate subjects of ordinary trade and barter. The electors of North Renfrew must be a very tame lot indeed if they permit themselves to be thus bargained away in a lot like a cart load of cabbage, in order that the elevation of Sir Francis Hincks, to the post of finance minister, may be confirmed. The era of corruption in this country dates from his former incumbency of office; he imagined doubtless that the lapse of fifteen years had blotted from the memory of the tax-payers of Ontario, the recollection of his financial exploits, but in this he is mistaken.

SIR FRANCIS.

To Sir Francis Hincks may be traced the system by means of which our taxes have steadily increased, while our public debt is rapidly attaining colossal proportions. And to him also is due the credit of having introduced a system of corruption and debauchery of public men, previously unknown; but with which we are now unfortunately only too familiar. It cannot be surprising that his past misdeeds should be flung in the teeth of the new Finance Minister when it is considered that his very first act on arriving amongst us is a renewal of his former corrupt tactics, by an endeavor to reach a seat on the treasury benches by means of open, unblushing bribery, sufficient to arouse, even in these degenerate days, a storm of indignation throughout the country. The other parties to this nefarious bargain and sale are equally deserving of notoriety and will not soon be forgotten.

WHAT THE "IRISH CANADIAN" THINKS OF RANKIN, MURRAY, SUPPLE AND JOHN A.

It would be a fair retribution on the public men of the country to judge them by the conduct of the Sir Hankin, Supple and Murpay and North Renfrew owes it to herself to wipe out the disgrace of having elected the two former leaving Murray at home and sending Sir Francis Hincks back to the Windward Islands or elsewhere.—We desire, it is true, to see our body represented in Parliament but not by men of the Murray stamp, who seek election to serve their personal ends, and who are open for sale as soon as a purchaser offers. The Catholics of Ontario desire good government and are suffering in common with all others from the ruinous mal-administration of Sir John A. McDonald; and whether as Catholics or taxpayers it is neither wise nor politic on their part to contribute in any manner to the support of this tottering administration.

JOHN SANDFIELD.

Our objections to the Patent Combination are at least equally strong; there is no man in the Dominion less deserving of Catholic support than our Premier John S. MacDonald; he whip on the floor of the House alluded to Irish Catholics as being unfit to live in this country until whitewashed at "Green Isle," and who as a further proof of his hatred of that same class had to perpetrate the orange rabbit of Rebellion refused mercy to the innocent Aylwards and permitted their cruel execution. John Sandfield McDonald has always been, and is still a bitter foe of Irish Catholics, a fact which we hope our co-religionists in Renfrew and elsewhere will bear in mind. Had Mr. Murpay remained firm in his opposition to the rotten combination of Mr. Sandfield we would feel proud of his success, but as matters are we shall hail his defeat with pleasure. It is time the Soldiers and Corrydons of Ontario were made to feel the weight of a healthy Catholic opinion. Rankin was bought, Supple was bought and Murray was bought.—What an honorable and high minded lot! We hope the electors of North Renfrew will "wet blanket" their proceedings by refusing to ratify their nice little arrangement, and especially do we hope that our co-religionists in that Riding will show more intelligence and spirit than to permit themselves to be dragged through the mire at the heels of Mr. Murray and Mr. R. W. Scott. Fellow countrymen of Renfrew, when you go to the polls remember the execution of the Aylwards and vote from power the Premier who allowed them to be hanged.

Will the Catholics remember these words? And yet this is the combination, and these are the men that the Catholics of this County have supported for 16 years of misrule, and to the great injury of the country; men who hate them, who would use their influence to turn them out of office, did do it in this county. Let them think of these things, and see if they can continue their support to men whom their co-religionists consider their deadly enemies.

HARD TIMES OUT WEST.—The Western papers continue to write very "blue" on money and trade out there. The financial article of the Chicago "Tribune," of Monday, says:—"The report is not a satisfactory one. Throughout the Northwest the general prosperity depends so largely upon the grain crop, that the present low prices make everybody feel poor, and have a depressing effect upon all branches of business." Again: "It is probable that this fall's business will be done for very small profits, and, in many instances, no profits at all; but, with solvent merchants and sound banks, that is the worst that can result from the present condition of things. . . . . The demands from merchants for accommodations is larger, and some bankers are preparing for a season of activity by arrangements for funds to be used a few weeks hence. Such applications are met by bankers with moderate freedom, because they have expected and prepared for just this kind of a demand, but there is a disposition to confine all accommodations to short time. Money can be borrowed by responsible parties for thirty day at ten per cent which could not be borrowed by even the same applicants for sixty or ninety at 12. Borrowers who are not in the regular 'bank fashion'—casual borrowers, who want a few hundreds or a few thousands for five or six months—find perhaps the most difficulty in supply themselves; and these are paying from one and a half to two per cent. for money in the open market.

If your food distresses you, take a half teaspoonful of Jacobs' Rheumatic Liquid in the morning.

Perfect Digestion checks perfect health, and is secured by using Colby's Pills.

A new scandal has been drawing together the pulpits of New Jersey to large numbers. One Elijah O'Gorman, a lady who has lately given up convent life, and with it the name of sister Theresa, has been lecturing upon her sufferings. She says it is a mistake to suppose that the inmates of a convent have no desire for, nay but a spiritual husband. She has known "sex" to fall in love with one Jesus, and the most violent jealousies arising among them in consequence; while the priests, who are supposed to pass their time in holy offices, really employ it in making love with the sisters." She also details acts of cruelty, especially to children, which are common in the convents. If Sister Theresa's statements are true, she is doing a goodly service to the community in making them; and we have an additional reason for nothing, either the suppression, or a means of efficient supervision, of so-called religious houses. If these statements, however are false, Theresa deserves to be mobbed, as some of the New Jersey people threaten to either case the matter should be cleared up. The day has gone by when shams could exist, or scandalous untruths be told, with impunity.—Leader.

The fire at Belleville on Saturday destroyed the Club House, kept by Mr. Crane, who had his billiard tables insured in the "Home" for $2,000; the harness shop of Mr. W. Wright, no insurance; and the store of Mr. W. H. Scholes, insured for $2,000 in the "Commercial Union," and $800 in the "Phenix." The buildings belonged to Dr. Lister, and were insured for $1,400 in the "British American."

Sixteen sailors of Majesty's ship Charybdis while at Victoria went ashore with the launch, on the 20th October, under command of a midshipman, twelve of the men mutinied and overpowered the officer and the other four sailors and rowed to the port of Dungeness in Washington Territory, and escaped.

DESERTERS RECAPTURED.—Three Deserters who escaped from the Governor General's residence on Saturday night, were brought in Wednesday by assistant detective Davis. They were arrested at Spencerville, and gave the constable a good deal of trouble, and some rough usage, after which they made off as fast as legs could carry them, but they were recaptured and handed over to Davis, who went out for them.

The London Evening Advertiser says that John Martin, the celebrated Irish patriot, is at present staying with friends near that city, having come to this country for the benefit of his health. Mr. Martin was concerned in the Smith O'Brien troubles, sent to Botany Bay, and afterwards pardoned. He is now more reasonable, and has no sympathy with the Fenians.

Liberty is the right to do whatever you wish, without interfering with the rights of others.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to irritate the Irish or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, sholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bot.le

THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for want of a market for course lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchase in the Provinces the past year, and being able to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our Lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Medicine Dealers 1 25 cts per bottle.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Dyas's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

THE ECUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshonees Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

SETH'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and possessence (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

MRS. WINSLOW'S

SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound preserved after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Eracetown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Bovey, of Fapance, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SELLS, CONWAY P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

KINGSTON, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a "quick cure, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her cure was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performances of a miracle.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS!

I BEG to inform the Public that I have retired from the active part of the business carried on by me as Druggist and Seedsman, and in doing so wish to return my sincere thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on me—there the discontinuance of the same by my predecessor, DOCTOR WILLIAM H. TAYLOR. I have much pleasure in introducing Dr. Taylor to my friends and the public of Peterboro' and vicinity as a thoroughly trained and experienced Druggist and Chemist, long connected with one of the best establishments in Montreal. This, together with his subsequent success as a medical practitioner of eleven years standing, will, I trust, ensure that confidence in him he so well merits.

JOHN W. GILMOUR.

With reference to the above Circular of my esteemed predecessor, J. W. Gilmour, Esq., I beg to state that I come to Peterboro' not as a medical practitioner, but as a Chemist and Druggist; and it shall be my aim to carry on a first-class establishment in every department of that business.

In asking a share of public patronage, I hope by strict and personal attention to business to merit the interests of those who may favor me with their commands.

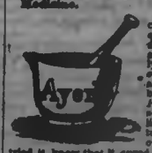
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.



Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, and we have no hesitancy in saying that it is better than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that is never fails through any fault, or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of the most remarkable cures of the following complaints, from nearly every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any mineral drug, they may be taken with safety by anyb

Poetry.

A SONG FROM THE SUDS.

Queen of my tub; merrily sing
While the white foam rises high;
And gaily wash, and rinse, and wring,
And fasten the clothes to dry;
Then out in the free, fresh air they swing,
Under the summer sky.

I wish we could wash from our hearts and soul
The stains of the week away;
And let water and air, by their magic make Ourselves as pure as they;
Then on earth there would be joy indeed,
A glorious washing day!

Along the path of a useful life
Will the heart's-ease ever bloom;
The busy mind has no time to think
Of sorrow, or care, or gloom;
And anxious thought may be swept away,
As we busily wield a broom.

I am glad a task to me is given
To labor at day by day;
For it brings me strength, and health, and hope,
And I cheerfully learn to say:
"Head, you may think; Heart, you may feel;
But Hand you shall work away."

Varieties.

The vessel that no woman objects to embarks in—A court ship.

What man presents the most striking appearance? A blacksmith.

Men slip on water when it is frozen, on whiskey when it isn't.

What part did the Sphinx take in ancient warfare?—It riddled the enemy.

Why are you more like a carpenter than a blacksmith? Because you're a good deal plainer.

A delicate parcel to be forwarded by rail—A young lady wrapped up in herself.

Preparing for the press—Taking off one's glove to say good-bye to one's beloved.

When was Ruth very rude to Boaz? When she pulled his ears and trod on his corn.

Why should a favorite hen be called Macduff? Because we wish her to "lay on."

We know a young man who is so lazy that he will not even labour under an impression.

The girls of the period—May their conversation not be so loose, nor their corsets so tight.

The bachelor's refrain—a lass! The maiden's refrain—ah, men! Let them no longer refrain.

What relation is that child to its father who is not the father's own son? His daughter.

The laws of natural philosophy are inviolable. You can't even pick up anything at auction unless it has been first knocked down.

Fools of Society—Fashionable society generally has but two faults—first, in being hollow-headed; and secondly, hollow-hearted.

A down-fall "swell," the other day, in soliciting charity, told us that he once used to drive his own carriage, and was highly indignant when we asked him if he was his own coachman?

A Large Ring—At a recent lecture Professor X——— stated that Saturn had a ring six thousand miles broad. "Be jabers!" exclaimed an Irishman who was present, "what a dinger he must have?"

Eureka! or words to that effect, for a man says that he has acquired the power of driving out the ugly in children, and replacing it with sweetness and goodness. Farewell, paregoric! farewell, spankings!

'Alas," said a moralising bachelor within earshot of a witty young lady of the company, "this world is at best but a gloomy prison!"—"Yes," sighed a merciless, man, especially to the poor creatures doomed to solitary confinement!"

'Do you know what I was thinking of all the time during the ceremony?' asked he. 'No, sir,—What?' 'Why, I was blessing my stars that I was not the bridegroom.' 'And I suppose the bride was doing the same thing,' rejoined his fair antagonist.

A clergyman in the country had a stranger preaching for him one day, and meeting his beadle he said to him, "Well, Saunders, how did you like the sermon to-day?" "I watna, sir, it was rather o'er plain and simple for me," replied the beadle. "I like the sermons that has jumbles the joodgement and confounds the sense; od, sir, I never saw ane that could come up to yersel' at that."

An African gentleman saw, over a grocery store, inscribed "Sugar cured hams." He entered the place and asked the price. He solicited and obtained permission to smell a shank. Having done this, he abruptly turned to leave. "Don't you want that ham?" said the grocer. "Well, no, boss," was the reply. "Der sign reads "sugar cured ham;" dat "ar ham's sick yet; my advice to you is to change de medicine."

The San Francisco News Letter gives the following in reply to a correspondent:—Young Mother—Your little poem upon "Baby" is a gem, and we regret that we have not space for so exquisite a bit-bit.—If you have a fault it is the trifling one common to all young writers, of sacrificing melody to hard sense. The third stanza is a striking instance:—

Dezery doodle-um dinkle-um dum.
Tum to its mommy mommery mum;
Timery imery bomery boo,
No baby so sweet and so pitty as oo.

Breaking the Nigger—While a boy of fourteen was fishing for trout in a deep brook, a stout darkey commenced teasing the lad by throwing mud at him. The boy, although very little, was smart, and, swinging the butt of his fishing-rod around, Cuffee found himself in deep water; struggling in which our friend left him, and ran home.—His dirty appearance attracted the attention of his mother, who was highly indignant to think that her son had been so treated by a black boy, and demanded, "Did you brock the outrage?" "No, mother," he spied, "I brocked the nigger."

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASES OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co. employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild bananas furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this produce, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own.—Boston Commercial.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give perfect satisfaction when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been strictly complied with, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifying, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Bad Stomach, Kidney Complaints, and Stomach Phthisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in fact surrounding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for colds, burns, br ises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious chills, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

The Great English Remedy!

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. $1 and six postage stamps enclosed to any authorised Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling, coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and or if administered to the child, drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N B—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. New Method of Washing Clothes

Without Labour.

"THE CONTINENTAL"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon entirely a scientific principle. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, passed upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the Finest Laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. The flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily fall them more or less. It is truly a labor and nightmare saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LAMBIE and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the Business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and in the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received any where near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory, as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Cuttle's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Mall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they can not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gearing, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Co., Counties F.W. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Kanata, County of Renfrew,
Province of Ontario, [illegible] 1868.

This is to certify that [illegible] in the year of 1866 I was taken with a swelling [illegible] which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my throat, and on up to my head, and I became so weak that I could not walk, and was confined to my chair. For [illegible] years, while this swelling was gaining on me, and afterwards, I employed medical advisers, employings at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1867, when I was induced to try the green Sarsaparilla. Hearing by reading the same spoken of, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Sheabonnee Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply took the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of others who may not [illegible] as mine, but believe to all my neighbors and friends, and would say that if afflicted as I was, I have only to try the Sheabonnee Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

Mary Ann Hammond.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. B. Wasteneys, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that the Sarsaparilla and Sheabonnee Remedy, have in my opinion saved her recovery, almost without her recovery to the Sheabonnee Remedy. Which may be the peculiar properties of the medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it was next almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair, with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair almost baldness. From turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. From those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

For many years we have in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind as has this combined remedy. For several years, during a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protection against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and those of all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be protected with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, with great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patients restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most desperate of them yield to it. When taken in time, and faithfully used, the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical, or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is harmless however any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the Fever and Ague districts are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in these and other cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unscrupulous persons, either ignorant of, or careless of the future health of those they advise, will sometimes recommend other medicines, when they are asked for the Ague Cure. Let the sufferer, arising from derangement of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, always restoring the Liver into healthy action.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold by all round the world.

Poetry.

THREE OLD SAWS.

If the world seems cold to you,
Kindle fires to warm it!
Let their comfort hide from view
Wintry cheer deform it.
Hearts as frozen as your own
To that radiance gather;
You will soon forget to moan,
"Ah! the cheerless weather!"

If the world's a wilderness,
Go, build houses in it!
Will it help your loneliness
On the winds to fling it?
Raise a hut, however slight;
Woods and brambles smother;
And to roof and mend invite
Some forlorn brother.

If the world's a vale of tears,
Smile till rainbows span it!
Breathe the love that life endears,
Glean from clouds to fan it.
Of your gladness lend a gleam
Unto a soul that shivers;
Show sharp how dark Sorrow's stream
Ripples with Hope's bright rivers.

CHAPTER III.

RAOUL AT THE CHATEAU OF PERIAC.

A short hour had passed when Count de Chalys, who had only taken time to change his working dress, was introduced into the large hall of the chateau of Feriac, where the marquis and marchioness were awaiting him. They received him with extreme gravity. After the exchange of salutations, there was a moment of silence, during which the count and his host observed each other with a reserved but professed interest. Monsieur and Madame de Feriac were secretly struck by the appearance of grace and of intelligence which prepossessed them at first sight in favor of Raoul. For him, the sight of these aged people, so dignified in gesture, and so sad, was at once decisive of the turn and manner of his address, with respect to which he had been hesitating.

'Madame la Marquise,' said he with a slight tremble in his voice, 'if I had not brought hither sentiments of the most absolute deference, I should find them here. You have been told that I should present myself at your house, but to receive your orders, and that I have submitted myself to them in advance, only claiming for myself the liberty of explaining my conduct.

'Monsieur le Comte,' said the Marquis de Feriac, 'we cannot refuse to you that liberty; but no explanation can possibly modify the nature—out of our orders, but of our request.'

'Monsieur le Marquis, I hope for the contrary. My arrival in this neighborhood has awakened the susceptibilities of Mademoiselle de Feriac and your own. I understand them. Nevertheless, allow me to declare to you that any idea of failing in respect to Mademoiselle de Feriac or to you was as far from my thoughts as can be from yours that of offending the God from whom you hope for salvation. 'You do not know me, Monsieur le Marquis, and the prejudice against me which you now entertain may not dispose you to trust implicitly to my word; but Truth has a language of her own, and I hope you will recognise her accents even from my mouth.' Raoul made a short pause. He continued: 'You do not know me, but you do know Mademoiselle de Feriac, and you can easily conceive the nature of the attachment she would inspire if ever she should meet with a man capable and worthy of appreciating her. Now, monsieur, I beg you to suppose for an instant that I am that man, that my natural disposition, that the particular direction given to my thoughts and to my life, have prepared me as completely as possible to fully comprehend the worth of Mademoiselle de Feriac, and to render to her the homage of admiration, of esteem, and of tenderness which she deserves, to have a full appreciation of that wealth of happiness with which so noble and perfect a creature would enrich the life of him with whose destinies she should condescend to unite her own. Remember that this dream was once permitted to me as a hope, that it has been suddenly broken in my heart, upon my lips, and I ask you—you, monsieur, to whom I am a stranger and almost an enemy—I ask you, if you have no pity for what I have suffered?'

At the last words, which the young man pronounced with manly emotion, the Marchioness turned away her head and slightly coughed.

'Monsieur,' said the old marquis, 'you express yourself with warmth, and I am willing to believe with sincerity; but I will ask you, in my turn, what possible advantage—if you have formed a just opinion of the character of my granddaughter—could you hope to result from an enterprise a proceeding which I am willing to qualify simply as romantic?'

'Monsieur le Marquis,' replied Raoul with a sad smile, 'there cannot be expected from a man struggling in agony to escape from utter shipwreck a perfect maturity of deliberation, he clutches at every thing.—An opportunity of coming nearer to Mademoiselle de Feriac, of again placing myself in her way presented itself. I embraced it. And yet, Monsieur le Marquis, my proceeding was not altogether without purpose. I had a hope that both reason and honor can avow. So far as I have been able to learn, it was because of her conscientious scruples that Mademoiselle de Feriac rejected the suit of which she was cognizant. I know that with Mademoiselle de Feriac a rigorous strictness—one rigorous perhaps—of principle did not exclude generosity of heart. It was to her heart that I wished to make appeal, it was her generosity that I hoped to touch by showing her beneath her feet a man who is not, as the latter, constrained to humiliation.'

'I appreciate, Monsieur le Comte, your explanations, and I avow that they have gained for you up to a certain point all consideration inferred; but that interest, you will understand, extends little into Margot what I owe to the dignity and to the welfare of my granddaughter. I can only then solicit from you the proof of that deference you have been good enough to promise us.'

'Be assured, monsieur, that I shall not refuse it, if, after reflection, you shall decide that, in destroying my hope, it is the only I who suffer, if you fully approve the principles to which Mademoiselle de Feriac sacrifices me, if you think the man who solicited you finally successfully to deliver his family, and to bring happiness to your child. At a moment for me so solemn, when I am risking at this instant my whole destiny, suffer me to speak with the most complete, the most unreserved frankness. Do not forbid me any argument however polemic.—Suffer me to attempt to engage in my interest that very solicitude for the future happiness of her you cherish so dearly, and with such reason. Let me recall to you—and Mademoiselle de Feriac will not deny it, for she only learns the language of truth—her heart did not reject me. It will be the pride, and perhaps the despair of my whole life that I have been for a moment honored with her sympathy, and this sympathy, that a heart like hers did not accord inconsiderately, bear here I test it? For a word, a single phrase—if not misunderstood, at least most rigorously interpreted? I respect and I admire the religious principles of Mademoiselle de Feriac; but have they not even to your eyes, monsieur, somewhat of the intolerance of early of early youth? Will they not have something of their inflexibility from contact with life and from experience? Will the resolution they have caused your granddaughter to adopt never be severely repented of? Do you believe it? Will she always think as she does to-day, that she is acted in separating, in dissolving two lives whose union she herself had thought presented more than one of the conditions of happiness?—And why? Because the man who so deeply loved her—him whom she had deemed worthy of a little love in return—was a man of his age—and of his time, and perhaps one of the best; for I am no adventurer, I am not impious—my incredulity is not aggressive nor triumphant, it is sad and respectful. I revere and envy those who possess the truth. For me, I wait after it in all the sincerity and all the bitterness of my soul. Such am I, monsieur. That Mademoiselle de Feriac, young as she is, reared at a distance from the world, should have thought that such a moral condition was not compatible with any virtue, with any honor, with any good faith, I understand, but I appeal, monsieur, to the experience and the charity of your age. Do you believe that she is not mistaken? Do you believe that unbelievers like me is really incapable of any honorable and loyal feeling, that there is nothing sacred in the soul that he can love nothing, respect nothing adore nothing in this world, neither his father, nor his wife, nor his child? Ah! if this is your belief, monsieur, I assure you, you do me wrong. I affirm to you, in the name of those very feelings which your presence excites, that the holiest reverence can dwell in an believing heart.'

Monsieur de Feriac exchanged a glance with the marchioness, and replied with a sort of abandonment:

'Admit for a moment, Monsieur le Comte, that the principles of my granddaughter, when made a practical rule of life, might be taxed with too much exaggeration, what can we do, Madame de Feriac and I, under the circumstances?—certainly do not pretend that we should make out of our authority! What then can we do? What can you you ask of us? I ask you the question with sincerity, for, recognizing the loyalty of your sentiments, and interested in your position, we are disposed, Madame de Feriac and myself, to show you, within the limits of our duty, any evidence of our sympathy.'

'Monsieur le Marquis,' said Raoul with his sweetest smile, 'do not drive me away—it is all I ask of you. Give time to discern, to diminish those scruples which you yourself think excessive. Let me, like Jacob of old, labor for seven years, if it is necessary, to gain the yeast and the hand of Rachel!'

'I beg pardon, my dear sir,' replied the old Marquis, also smiling, 'but you forget that the reputation of my granddaughter might be compromised by this experiment.'

'How could it be,' Monsieur le Marquis? It is plain that my wild enterprise, even if the world should penetrate the mystery to which it is concealed, could only compromise myself. A happy and successful issue does not force a man of my condition to the proceedings of an adventurer. I shall be laughed at. I shall be ridiculous, that is the worst that can happen.—Do you ask for any thing more? Do you undertake to promise upon my honor and to seek to meet with Mademoiselle de Feriac, to show her even until she herself shall bid me retire? I promise it. I promise, moreover, not to prolong my stay her longer than shall be necessary to finish conscientiously the work I am engaged in. Shall I avow to you the last succor to hope I attach to this work? If Mademoiselle de Feriac remains inflexible, if my silent, persevering devotion cannot shake her resolution, I shall at least bear away with me one consolation. I shall leave before her eyes the cross that my hands, my mind, and my heart shall have consecrated to her. When far away, I can say to myself that this work will sometimes recall to her how much she was beloved, that she mingles my name with her thoughts, with her prayers, that some day it may draw from her a tear of regret, a cry of tenderness, and that perhaps my life is not to be ever ruined. Now, monsieur, I await your orders. If you exact it, I will depart this very evening; but I shall depart in despair!'

The Marquis remained a moment silent. His eyes fixed upon the floor. Raoul believed he saw in the contraction of his features that he was collecting his strength for a demand of the respect. He rose and approached Madame de Feriac with a certain dignity.

'Madame la Marquise,' said he, 'do not suffer the name of the house of Sibylle formed about the young girl an horrendous framework of sad errors and grandeur an homicide.

He contemplated with a pleasing horror the spectacle of blood and tears which her pure spirit opened that sad and gloomy and enchanted place. For this perturbed spirit, for this weary heart, this dream, vivified by passion, possessed indescribable delight.

Not finding the curate at the parsonage, he proceeded to the church. The next day was Sunday, and the workmen had removed the scaffolding that encumbered the vault in preparation for religious services. [illegible] the Count de Chalys [illegible] under different perspectives the general effect of his works. Resting his elbow upon one of the stalls of the choir, his head supported upon his clasped hands, he heard the door of the church open and close again.

The Count de Chalys [illegible] the marquis. 'you will allow the marchioness and myself to submit unite anxiously upon this matter before coming to a decision. We so good then as to continue for us those feelings of deference to which—I do not conceal it from you—we shall probably be obliged to oppose ourselves in the [illegible] of your happiness. Until then, we will or resent to ignore it.'

At these words Raoul breathed heavily, and the blood ascended to his pale forehead.

'I thank you,' he said in an indistinct voice, and laying his hand upon his heart he bowed low before the two old people and withdrew.

The marquis and marchioness, left alone together, looked at each other for some time without speaking.

'My friend,' said at last the marchioness 'I like him so much!'

'Yes yes, doubtless,' said the marquis, shaking his head; 'but have a care, my dear he is very seductive.'

'Do you mean to say,' replied the marchioness, 'that you doubt his sincerity?'

'No, I don't say that, but he is very seductive. He has quite won me over. I avow it. I have been making for arguments in his favor. This young man—that in many respects I should be happy to call my son—has always lived in the evil current of the age. I have been asking myself whether some time passed in a new life, surrounded by wholesome influences, might not perhaps bring him back to that Being he seems so worthy to know.'

'You are thinking,' said the marchioness smiling, 'of Miss O'Neil converted, of Jacques Ferray consoled of our honest cousin sanctified; and you are hoping that the disturbed soul of this young man might be soothed and purified by the breath of the same angel.'

'Yes, my dear, but this is a very serious and delicate matter, and we must take counsel and reflect before we engage in it.'

Sibylle now entered the hall. She interrogated Monsieur de Feriac with eager and curious gaze.

'Well?' said she.

'Wait, my child,' said the marquis with an embarrassed smile, 'we have gone over to the enemy.'

'What!' cried Sibylle.

'No, don't be alarmed, only we have thought best to postpone our sentence of banishment. We will to think about it, and you must think about it too. He promises, moreover, to scrupulously respect your retirement, and really, it has seemed to us rather hard to treat so malefactor a man of good deportment and gentle [illegible] and so unhappy withal! We will think about it, my daughter.'

Sibylle received this communication with every exterior sign of habitual respect for her grandfather, but at heart she was utterly dismayed. She saw that Monsieur and Madame de Feriac had yielded to the personal fascination of Raoul, this triumph was a new cause of complaint against him. She thought she saw the weakness of increasing age in the want of firmness with which she secretly reproached her grandparents, and the consequence of which she contemplated with despair. She alone knew at the cost of what struggles, of what distress, of how many sleepless nights she had succeeded in stifling, and but particularly stifling, the passion her judgment condemned. The presence of Raoul, although invisible, would make her again a prey to those agitations she could hardly hope a second time to calm. She was firmly convinced that the most serious fault a human creature, and especially a woman, can commit, was to allow passion in the government of our destiny to usurp the place of reason and principle. She felt that the abandonment of her natural guardians would expose her to this danger. She shuddered at the thought, and at once determined to make in her own person a last effort to maintain in her own hands the control of her life. Leaving her grandparents to [illegible] with Miss O'Neil and the curate, who had just arrived at the chateau, she mounted her horse, under pretext of charitable excursion, and rode rapidly toward the church of Feriac.

IV.

THE EXPLANATION.

If we have succeeded in giving a just idea of Raoul's character, a character rich in qualities, but devoid at all moral foundation, whose passion and enthusiasm, rejecting supreme to place of principle, might turn toward good or evil with equal sincerity, the reader will have, perhaps, required the secret of many of the lines of the tense, which, in their contrasts and their changes, in their suddenness and their weakness, seem to be wanting in reason and in integrity, while they are wanting only in a rule of faith. It will, at all events, be understood with what honorable, tranquil and tender thoughts Raoul re-entered the parsonage after his interview with the aged grandparents of Sibylle. He told [illegible] them [illegible] even, and in spite of all the fleeting restrictions of the tolerance they had granted him, he felt they really sanctioned his pretensions and his suit. He was aware of Sibylle's respect and love for the old people, and assured of such powerful allies, he thought he could fully indulge his hopes.—These hopes [illegible] Raoul [illegible] more tender since he had penetrated within this patriarchal interior, and breathed its fragrant air of probity, of gentleness, and of dignity. The very repose of the chateau, the lawn, the arbor, and the silence which reigned about it, the great gardens in flower the glazed roofs of the hot-houses, the cattle and the woods—all that he had seen of the house of Sibylle formed about the young girl an horrendous framework of sad errors and grandeur an homicide.

He contemplated with a pleasing horror the spectacle of blood and tears which her pure spirit opened that sad and gloomy and enchanted place. For this perturbed spirit, for this weary heart, this dream, vivified by passion, possessed indescribable delight.

Not finding the curate at the parsonage, he proceeded to the church. The next day was Sunday, and the workmen had removed the scaffolding that encumbered the vault in preparation for religious services. [illegible] the Count de Chalys [illegible] under different perspectives the general effect of his works. Resting his elbow upon one of the stalls of the choir, his head supported upon his clasped hands, he heard the door of the church open and close again.

The hottest after. Mademoiselle de Feriac appeared in the nave; she stood still a few seconds, then perceiving Raoul, whose astonishment had rooted to the floor of the choir, she advanced toward him. As she approached, the servant-reparateur of his [illegible] [illegible] his haughty [illegible] her look caused a painful shiver to run through the veins of the young man, who paused in the midst of the transport of his love. He bowed.

'Shall I withdraw, mademoiselle?' said he.

'No, monsieur, I came to seek you.'

After another silence, she began:

'I have come myself, Monsieur le Comte, to beg you to restore to my life the liberty and the repose of which your presence here deprives it. You will excuse me if I base this at the choice of the [illegible] to employ to decide you to this course. Ought I to make appeal to your consciousness or to your honor? Your [illegible], monsieur, I fear, knows no other laws than your [illegible] inclination and your good pleasure, and you will allow me to expect from it but slender aid, since it has not itself forbidden you a course of conduct repugnant to the simplest dictates of propriety.'

The hard tone of Sibylle and her studied and lay language broke down so utterly all the hopes Raoul had been so fondly indulging that he felt his strength fail him. He raised one hand to his pale and livid forehead, and leaned with the other upon the back of the stall.

'My God!' he murmured.

'I hope,' continued the young girl with the same mournful accent, 'I hope more from your honor, from that sentiment of good-breeding, and delicacy that men least influenced by vulgar morality are forced to respect when they are gentlemen and desire to preserve that name. Permit me then, monsieur, to repeat to you that [illegible] above, in one incontestable and [illegible] law of honor, it is that which forbids a gentleman to persecute with persecution and intrigue a heart that rejects him.'

'My God!' repeated the count folding his arms with an air of wistful resignation.

'And if this is not enough to decide you, Monsieur le Comte, I will appeal to your reason, to your good sense. The enterprise, hardly honorable, in which you are persisting can only result—allow me to say it—in your confusion. You have acquired the good will of those persons whom I most deeply respect, and you flatter yourself that I shall some day succumb to their influence, Monsieur; I solemnly declare that you deceive yourself, for neither to-day, nor to-morrow, nor ever, will any deference I may feel for those persons turn me aside from the line of conduct I have prescribed for myself with respect to you, and I further solemnly declare that your perseverance, though even I should endure it for years, would only make your protestations more vain and useless by increasing in me the feelings of scorn and contempt which such proceedings inspire.'

The Count de Chalys raised his head and pointed to one of the angles of the altar.

'Mademoiselle,' said he, 'I am asking myself if it is you who are speaking, or one of those statues of marble.'

An angry flame darted from Sibylle's eyes.

'She who speaks to you,' said she with vehemence, 'is a young girl shamefully outraged, who surely would not have been subjected to such indignity if you had only beside her a single man capable of defending or avenging her.'

At these words a shuddering ran apart from the breast of Raoul. His head fell heavily upon the railing of the choir. He struck forward Sibylle and let her fall in the face.

'Leave me!' said he.

Stupefied by the frightful expression of his eyes, the young girl did not stir.

'Leave me!' repeated Raoul vehemently. 'You are mad, and you will make me lose my reason, as well as my patience and proper respect. What! these are then your virtues! This is your charity, your religion, Mademoiselle Sibylle! Good God! I am a man without conscience, without honor, without heart, without soul! And why? Is it because I love you tenderly, faithfully, madly, through all the humiliations, through all the contempt you heap upon me? No! It is because I am an unbeliever—is it not?—because I have no faith! This is the cause, is it not, which calls down on me so much reprobation and contempt? I do not accept your pardon—do you hear me? I do not! God, if he exists, does not mention it! And the climax of wrong and of iniquity, in whose does it consist? Shall the meanest among the old women who, for their only virtues, come each Sunday to sleep at the foot of yonder pulpit, be a saint in your eyes? And shall I who all my life have sought the truth, with all the force and energy of my mind, in the bitterest anguish of my heart, be a vile wretch? Ah! de-pise as much as you will what is worthy of despite, heedless and unwilling infidelity, but the relentless that suffers, that implores, that respects, do not despise this.'

The young girl, pale and as if petrified upon the pavement, looked at him and listened with a strange mingling of interest and terror. He walked about excitedly for a few moments, as if endeavoring to calm the violence of the passions that were raging within him; then stopped abruptly and pointed to the arbor above the altar.

'Take thence,' said he more subduedly, 'take thence, Mademoiselle Sibylle, a lesson of justice and of charity. Recall the cry of distress and weakness which ascended from that arbor. 'My God, why hast thou forsaken me?' That is the cry of my whole life, and of many others in this age. Is it vain or culpable? Ah! believe me, there are blasphemies more holy than prayers; there are attitudes that are prayers. Yes, I believe, I believe firmly that the sufferings of doubt are holy, that to wrestle upon God, to wish upon him always even when [illegible], to hear and to pierce him—I believe that in his eyes the only [illegible] to blindness and brutal adhesion upon the great mystery in which he conceals himself, but which surrounds us. Yes, to live [illegible] the truth. To see the heavens over our heads, the earth about our feet, and not to seek the truth that all our faculties, all our instincts, all our faculties, all our faculties, all our faculties

Hon. Jos. Elliot and a Fourth Body Buried.

The Hamilton Gazette says:—One of the most melancholy that ever occurred in Flamboro happened at the new gunhouse of the Peter Hamilton Co's Factory, in Upper Town, on Wednesday last by the explosion of the powder, of which the gun is made, and the instant death of three men, and the severe wounding of a fourth.

Shortly before noon the bells sounded the hours of five and the townspeople at once turned out and inquired in the causes of disaster. The engines were promptly on the ground, but owing to the crowd insufficiency, were behind in getting up their operating powers. The crowd needed no urging to work to all know that 3 human beings were lying in the midst of the roaring flames and that they must exert themselves to the utmost if they would rescue any alive; but it was of no avail; again and again was the attempt made to gain the inside, but the fierce flames drove all back, while all the more fierce by the water that was showered upon them. Explosions took place at intervals as the flames reached the vats containing the gunpowder.

The bodies could be seen as they were being devoured by the remorseless flames but no help could reach them and when the fire was got under and the remains taken out nothing but contracted bones and charred flesh was left of what a few minutes before were young and vigorous manhood.—Their names are—Robt. Brown, Joseph Crowther, and John A. Collins. Charles Bryant was badly injured.

Reciprocity.—At the last session of Congress a resolution was passed empowering the President to confer with the Canadian Government for the purpose of securing a new Reciprocity Treaty. The President authorized Secretary Fish to meet the representatives of the Canadian Government and act for the United States Government. Mr. Ross was delegated by the Canadians, and he and Mr. Fish have completed a treaty, which will be ready for submission to Congress on the assembling of that body. Judge Kelly of Philadelphia, arrived here to-day and had a long interview with the President to-night in relation to this new treaty. As a representative of Pennsylvania, he is strongly opposed to any reciprocity treaty with the Canadian Government. He claims that in cereals, flour, lumber and coal, alone, the government has collected $6,000,000 duty since the last reciprocity treaty was discontinued. The President will give his views on the subject in his forthcoming message. —Washington Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

The Boston Transcript's Washington special adds:—With regard to the tariff the President expressed himself in favor of putting all articles of raw material which we do not produce in the free list, and reducing the tariff on manufactured articles to which raw material is used, which does not come into competition with our productions.

The Gale on the Lakes.—The schooner "Ariel," from Meaford, loaded with flour, went ashore at nine o'clock on Friday night, a couple of miles from Collingwood, during a heavy wind. No lives were lost. Accounts from Port Colborne state that on Lake Erie the shipping suffered considerably:—The brig "Centaur" arrived with the loss of her sails, boat, and part of her deck-load of lumber. The schooner "Green Whitney" lost a boat.—Wallace Rider, mate on the schooner "Kearsage," was lost overboard yesterday coming down the Lake in the gale. The schooner "Agnes" is ashore at Grand River, loaded with pail-wood and hoops.—From Picton we learn that the schooner "Heather Bell" is ashore at Wellington. The schooner "Jesse McDonald" sprung a leak and sank at the dock, in Commeau harbor, while loading peas. She had 3,000 bushels on board when she went down.—The hull was insured in the Western Insurance Co., and the cargo in the Montreal Assurance Co.

General Conference of Protestants.—Among the recent arrivals from Europe was Rev. Dr. Schaff, of New York, delegate of the American branch of the Evangelical Alliance, who has successfully completed his preparations in Europe for a general conference of Protestants from all countries, to be held in New York in September next, and in which all denominations of Christians will take part.—The approaching Ecumenical Council of Rome will give the Protestant Conference an additional importance. It is understood that many of the leading theological celebrities of Great Britain, France, Germany and other countries have positively promised to visit New York on that occasion.

NORTH RENFREW ELECTION.

The polling commenced in this constituency yesterday, and it will be seen from the figure below that the contest is a close one:—

Another report gives Findlay seven majority in these places. North Algona is the only township not heard from. It has been considered a stronghold of Hincks', and we have little doubt yesterday gave him a majority; but how much we have no means of estimating.

A warning to Division Court clerks is given by an Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Observer, who hears that many of the Division Court clerks throughout the Provinces are not so strict in accounting to the Government for the fees on proceedings in these courts as they ought to be, by affixing the necessary law-stamps on the different proceedings, as the law requires. It appears there is such a wide difference between the amount of fees returned by some counties as compared with others, that the Government feels satisfied there is something wrong, and have resolved on sending an inspector to visit all the Division Court offices in the Province, and make personal examination into the manner in which the clerks discharge their duties in this respect.

The Grand Lodge of Good Templars commenced its sittings at Ottawa on Tuesday, the 9th instant. The address of the Grand Worthy Chief and the report of the Secretary were presented. There is a falling off in the number of lodges, but an increase in membership. The receipts amount to $2,253 and initiation $173. The expenses for the year ended 30th September last were $2,261.

The Hymns Establishment.—It is not too well known that while the British Government kept the native Church in Ireland comparatively unendowed, it endowed, and still endowments by endowments, a native pagan church in India—that is to say, it holds itself liable for the endowments of Hindoo temples existing at the time of the British Empire.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1869.

Sifton, who resigned for Murray, has got large timber limits in Lower Canada without money and without price.

Four car loads of French Canadian brickmakers from the States, passed through St. Johns last week, on their way home.

Gerrow Fraser, who has given so much money for the benefit of the London poor, and for the cause of education in his native land, the United States, is dead.

The Grand Trunk and Great Western Railways are laying down steel headed rails in some places. They are said to possess splendid resisting qualities.

The Lindsay Post comes to us greatly enlarged, and in an entirely new dress. The Post is now one of the largest of those papers published outside of the cities.

Ellis & Cob Woolen Mills, Brantford, were destroyed by fire on Thursday morning. Loss $20,000. Insured for about $10,000 to $12,000. About sixty hands are thus thrown out of employment.

The Courier gives an account of a robbery committed in Brantford on Friday last, by entering the office of J. H. Stratford. The parties are known, however, and may yet suffer for their dishonest practices.

Public notice has been given of application for a Charter to construct a Railway from Port Carry, West to the confines of British Columbia, and East, yet connect with some road in Canada. It is to be called the Pacific Railway.

The Hon. Mr. Vankoughnet, Chancellor of Ontario, died on Sunday night in Toronto, at the age of 67 years. Judge Mathieu, who had just opened the Assizes here, adjourned the Court on the reception of the intelligence from Monday till Tuesday morning at 9.30, out of respect to his memory.

Sir John A. felt the desperate condition of affairs in Renfrew to such a degree that he went about imploring private citizens of Ottawa to go to Renfrew, and do what they could for Hincks. A telegram two daily papers says he went three times to one man before he got him to start.

The Sherbrooke Gazette says that Mr. Cochrane, the celebrated importer of first class stock, has recently sold to a Western cattle trader six short horns, two being calves quite young, two yearling heifers, and two cows of four and seven years, paying an average of $1,200 for each of the six. He also purchased eleven Cotswold sheep, and four Berkshire swine. For the whole he paid the round sum of $9,000. Some other purchases at the same time made the amount over $10,000.

Toronto Items.—We understand that there will be a contest in Dummer at the coming municipal elections, Mr. T. G. Chesterton and Mr. David Ross being the aspirants to the Reeveship. In Otonabee, it is said that Mr. Laing, who has so often and ably represented the township in the County, intends retiring, and in consequence Mr. James Hiltz, Deputy Reeve, is likely to be elected by acclamation, but that, there will be a contest for the deputy's place. Messrs. J. Bimard and E. H. Burnham being the candidates. In Belmont Mr. Pearce and Mr. Armstrong are to have another trial of strength.

Agnesque will, in all likelihood, send Mr. Coughlin again, and North Monaghan will also be likely to send Mr. Gilmour. These are the correct reports, and will in all probability be verified in a short time. It is really unhealthy signs to find active enterprising men thinking the honor of representing the people in the township parliaments, and this will indicate a watchfulness that will prevent misdemeanor. Let the people see that their home affairs are wisely and economically managed and then they can demand the same from the superior parliament.

T. M. C. A.—We have been requested to state that a circular has been received from the Executive Committee of the Y. M. C. A. of the United States and British provinces suggesting that the second Sabbath of this month be observed as a day of special prayer for the blessing of Almighty God upon their associations throughout the world, and that reference be promised bearing on the subject. The circular, however, was not received in time to communicate with the ministers of the town; in consequence the suggestion will be on the following Sabbath to the different protestant churches, and on Sunday next at 10 o'clock, a. m., a prayer meeting will be held in the Good Templars' Hall, to which all are invited.

Mechanics' Institute.—We are invited to remind contributors to the exhibition of fine arts, &c., in connection with the Mechanics' Institute, to send contributions by Tuesday afternoon, so that all may be arranged neatly. Mr. Shepherd's excellent hand will also be present during the exhibition and lend his charms to the pleasures of the exhibition. We hope large crowds will patronize the Institute, and encourage the managers by their presence and their aids.

The Legislature of Ontario has met, but beyond the reading of the address of Lieut.-Gov. Archibald, and the Speaker elect, very little has yet been done. We hear, since Speaker of the members taking to work.

THE ASSIZES.

The Court of Assizes and General Jail Delivery was commenced here on Monday, before Judge Hughes.

The following gentlemen constituted the Grand Jury:—

Wm. Dyde, Esq., Sovereign, and Messrs. Joseph Gerrow, Wm. Dunlop, Hugh Goodall, Jas. John Kimball, Peter McNeil, Geo. Hilliker, David Paget, Thomas Proctor, I. Robinson, Robert Sloan, N. Shaw, Lawrence Dolan and John Hilliar.

The Judge, in his address to the Grand Jury, remarked that the business likely to come before them was light, only one case of a criminal nature, that of common assault. He also was a matter worthy of note that only three persons were undergoing punishment in the jail, and he was glad to see that this was one of the counties that were very free from crime. He referred to one case, that of obtaining money or valuable security under false pretences, that of one Beardsley who sentenced selling a fright to use a wagon broadly, and he recommended the jury that if they had a doubt in their mind, they had better, in this case, send it up for trial.

The daily paper being at this point, placed in the Judge's hand, containing the death of Chancellor Vankoughnet, he passed a tribute of praise to the deceased, and adjourned the Court for the day.

On Tuesday the Court opened at 9.30. The first case was that of REGINA VS. CROZIER.

This was an action concerning the boundary line between Dunn's fifty and fifty of Grosier, in the 6th or 7th concession of the Township of Ennelon. The case was brought to the Court because of want of time to hear it at Lindsay. The whole lot in dispute does not contain more than 17 acres, being a broken lot on Sturgeon lake.

Mr. Perrin, of Matipona, who was chainbearer on the original survey, gave evidence that the original post was planted in the marsh 30 or 40 rods from what is now the shore, but did not fix the point where placed. Several other witnesses testified to having seen the original post where Crozier claims it ought to be.

Mr. Dean, P. L. S., and Mr. Dickinson, P. L. S., were both placed in the witness box, but neither gave satisfactory evidence as to the place of the original post, and both divided the intervening lots from different posts, Mr. Dean grouping the lake to an established post, and Mr. Dickson taking evidence that established Crozier's post.

The Judge charged the jury rather in favor of this survey of Mr. Dickson's, and the jury brought in a verdict in favor of defendant, Crozier.

H. Cameron, Q. C., for plf., Dunn. Mr. Bethune for defendant, Crozier.

CAMPBELL VS. BIRNEY.

This was an action brought by Wm. Campbell, of North Monaghan, against Jas. Birney, of the same place, for the seduction of plaintiff's daughter, claiming damages at $1,000.

The young woman was placed in the witness box, and proved the seduction by Birney, about 2 years ago, and in consequence the birth of a child.

The def. Birney offered no evidence, but sought through his counsel, Mr. E. Bagshaw, to produce a diversion in the minds of the jury by insinuating that there were other associates in the criminality, and by endeavoring to persuade the jury that the unfortunate girl was the seducer as much as the seducer. He made the best he could of the case in the cause of morality, and never expected to get even his fee for his trouble.

The plf's. counsel, Mr. Sidney Smith, merely reminded the jury of the baseness of the def. in these not only causing shame to the girl and her family, but in adding to the baseness by endeavoring to damn her in the eyes of all present by insinuations of such a nature, and added that the jury should on this account increase the damages largely.

The Judge also leaned strongly to the side of plaintiff on having suffered the injury and in consequence should have a verdict, and added that as this was the only legal way in which the parent could seek redress for the seduction of his child; it was right that men should be taught that they cannot outrage society with impunity, and that for this purpose alone damages should be awarded. The Judge also remarked that the action of the def. through his counsel in endeavouring to further injure plaintiff and his family, should justly induce the jury to increase their damages, as no man had a right to seek to add a double injury by insinuations unless he offered evidence. Here the Judge was deafened with the entire assent of all present by continued stamping of the feet and other signs of approval of the principles enunciated. The Jury returned a verdict of $200 damages.

S. Smith, Q. C., for plf.; E. Bagshaw, Esq., for def.

MACKENZIE VS. LASHER.

This was an action to recover amount of a promissory note, made by Lasher, in favor of one Jape Jones, for whom Mr. Mansell transacts business. From the evidence it would appear that Mr. Lasher made a compromise with his creditors to "51, 52, 53 and on the dollar. At the time Mansell held two notes for about $400 in all. Mr. Mansell received a note at the time of compromise for $215. This note Mansell urged me to execute a note for a similar amount made previously by A. W. Lasher. Mr. Lasher contended that this note was in consideration of the debt in full as per compromise. There being no jury on this case the Judge decided in favor of plf. Mansell, for amount of note, $215.

SPRY VS. KINCAID.

This was an action brought by Louis Spry, of this Town, against Dr. Kincaid, for alleged mal practice, or want of skill, in treating said Spry, for a tumor on the wrist.

John Drake, sworn—Knew Spry for 25 or 26 years, plf. is a tinsmith by trade, recollected seeing him on the 24th of April opposite Chisco's Hotel, Spry was then under the influence of liquor, Dr. Kincaid came past hotel, asked Spry if lump was still on hand, removed the cancer, saw, and Dr. Spry's hand better up and got it out cut. Spry said if it would do him an injury he would not have it done, but that he would wait till Monday, this being Saturday. The Dr. assured Spry such a bit of cancer, and it would not hurt him more than a scratch of a pin, and that nothing. Witness told the cancer that Spry to Dr. Spry to call and that nothing. Witness told the cancer that he [illegible] Dr. Spry to call and that the Doctor can do it quickly, three seconds, take the lump in his fingers and take it out by cutting cancer, the lump was about size of a marrow fat pea. He bandaged up the arm, and they went away together, took him to his boarder's that evening saw him next day, it was then much swelled, appeared to suffer much.

To Mr. Patterson,—cross examination—Nearly the same evidence was given. except that it was added that they had both drank a little on that day, thought it was before the operation.

To Mr. Cameron,—Knows what pleurae are, didn't see Dr. Kincaid use anything but a cutting instrument.

Jas. Spry, sworn—Was brother of Plf., had heard of the lump, it never did Plf. any harm, but he just done nothing about the operation, was present, also at Dr. Kincaid's office on Sunday; the Dr. dressed the wound, and laughed at having put the sign of [illegible] on Plf. Spry; gentlemanly that it would be all right soon.

To Mr. South—Did not drink liquor at my house on Sunday, had some there; did not drink after operation on Saturday, was pretty well drunk all day.

Wm. Simpson, sworn—but knew as little about the affair that nothing was elicited from him.

Mr. Jas. Stevenson, sworn—Testified to Mr. Spry being a good workman, often earning $1.50 a day, but was [illegible] considered him best workman in Peterboro; thought he could not work at his trade because of the loss of the power of his hand. Cross-examined by Mr. O'Reily, but nothing further elicited.

Mr. Adam Thompson, sworn, but could not give any evidence on the case, other than that he and plf. had a drink together on a Saturday, but did not give the date.

Ann Adamson, sworn—Saw plf. at his house with head greatly swollen, resting on table; knew he was bad for 5 or 6 weeks; did not know that he got any liquor during this time except as medicine.

Mrs. Jas. Spry testified to having seen plf. on the Saturday, he was then after the operation, was very drunk.

To Mr. Riely—Poured Whiskey out for, but could not say he drank it, was very drunk. Drake only drunk, but not so bad as plf.

Jas. Spry was called, but nothing further was elicited.

Jos. Speak, sworn, but knew nothing of the matter.

Wm. Rowsomcombe, sworn—Was with Spry in a bathing party, about the middle of October, Spry could not then use his hand.

Dr. Harvey, sworn—Spry had consulted him; said he believed it was a ganglion on the tendon, about size of a quarter; asked Spry if it pained him, said it did not; advised him then to let it alone. Had treated several for similar tumors, successfully, did not think an operation was necessary at the time, and if he had operated it would have been by puncture and absorption.

The Dr. entered into descriptions of the cases that would not benefit our readers, hence we will omit this part.

He believed that it was not a proper time for an operation while Mr Spry was under the influence of liquor. In the cross examination by Mr. Patterson, he said, that rupture by striking was better than incision.

We did not hear the evidence of Dr. Burnham or Dr. Benson, and only part of the evidence of the witness, Mr. Rook. The last part of this evidence contradicted the evidence of Drake, in almost every particular, of the Dr. asking Spry to come and get it cut out, and of Drake holding the hand, and also of Spry being drunk.

Mr. Fred. Hall, sworn—Saw the operation performed by Dr. Kincaid; the lump was hard; saw the Dr. take it out with the bone handle of the knife; examined afterwards and it against side of basin, it was hard; Spry did not appear as if he was drunk.

Sydney Johnston sworn—Saw the whole operation, took in a basin of water to the Dr.; saw the Dr. make a longitudinal cut and then a small incision across, then remove the lump with forceps, dress the wound, and heard the Dr. give directions to go home immediately and apply cold water to it. Heard Spry say he had consulted Dr. Harvey, and that the Dr. advised striking it with a book, which he did; on going away heard him say, the Dr. knows his business.

Cross-examined by Mr. Cameron, and answered very intelligently to the same effect.

Thomas Green, grocer, sworn, said—Spry was in his shop on the evening of the operation and drank liquor, he afterwards refused him whisky, this was after 7 o'clock in the evening of a Saturday; he did not remember the date, but heard them talk of the operation.

Dr. Lizars, Toronto, was then sworn—Was a Graduate of Edinburgh University, and Member of the College of Surgeons, London, England. Heard the evidence carefully, and from that evidence was satisfied the operation was perfectly correct. Said the [illegible] sequent causes, inflamation, &c. Intemperance would certainly cause erysipelas in the arm—either nettlerash or even occasional intemperance. He considered it a hard tumor, not a ganglion, and attributed the difference of opinion to an error of judgment in respect to the lump. He based his opinion on the evidence that represented the lump as hard. If a hard lump or fibrous tumor, Dr. Kincaid had performed the operation skillfully.

To Mr. Cameron—If a ganglion, he would not remove by cutting. He thought it was not a ganglion and hence that Drs. Harvey and Benson were mistaken in regard to what it was. He thought Dr. K's treatment the proper method.

Dr. Dewar, Port Hope sworn—Was a Surgeon of 13 or 14 years practice in England, Italy and Canada; heard the evidence, correct form any opinion, but that the tumor was a hard one, and that hence the treatment of Dr. Kincaid was proper. To Mr. Cameron—Could not tell what he would have done in this case, unless he saw the patient. If a ganglion the best method of cure, is by absorption. If he had been consulted and no pain, he would have recommended procrastination. And on account of the frequency of such action, he might have advised carefulness on his own part.

Dr. Newcombe, Toronto, sworn—To Mr. O'Reily—I heard evidence in great part, and conclude it was a hard tumor, and consequently cautious was the proper treatment, the only right method. In his opinion the treatment of Dr. Kincaid was skilful and scientific, Drs. Benson would not prevent the speedy death of a person. If a ganglion there is no danger in leaving it. Spry was in his office on a three weeks' visit.

Dr. Gilkerson sworn, and hearing medical [illegible] for his day's pay, said he first knew called in to attend to Mr. Spry, on the 26th of April; found his arm greatly swollen and afterwards found the cut on the wrist, and then first learned of the operation by Dr. Kincaid; he advised calling in Dr. E., and left. Found the wound gaping because of the swelling; was called in next day by Spry's wife, and went, and attended to him for 4 or 5 weeks.

To the Counsel—The inflammation of the tendon might cause its destruction, in part; did everything to persuade the plf. not to continue this treat; could not tell whether a hard or soft tumor. Witness would not remove a tumor if it caused no pain or inconvenience, except at risk of patient; was of opinion that a ganglion might become solid, [illegible] could avoid, if possible, cancerous.

Mr. [illegible]—Could not tell if cut was deep, does not think the transverse cut goes as deep as the other, the swelling made it gape, could not tell. In case of an operation would think it right to inform the patient of the risk that danger.

The reason assigned for sending for him was, Dr. Kincaid had taken away the lump twice and did not get the plf. send very strong language of the the Dr. Believes the strong extensor tendon of the thumb is perfectly useless, and the others injured, Spry he will never be able to use the hand.

Dr. Harvey recalled—To Mr. Cameron—Never advised Spry to use the hook or striking would have done it, instead of telling plaintiff the evidence, a sympathetic cure of which we gave the credit of cure.

The hearing of there completed the whole evidence on the case.

We learn, as we go to press, that the jury rendered a verdict for the Defendant, Dr. Kincaid. D. W. Dumble, Esq., and Harold Cameron for the plaintiff. Smith, Patterson and O'Reilly for the Defendant.

This is one of those cases that are calculated to annoy Doctors very much, and will tend to make them place the risk on the patient ere they undertake operations that might cause danger, no matter how skillfully performed.

"THE PARSON ABROAD."

The distinguished, eloquent, pious, learned, and redoubtable Parson of Lakefield is not satisfied with the laurels he has already won, over the mooted de pilsens, D. D., but appears again in the Review of the 4th instant, on the immortal "beer question," and that wonderful man, the Editor of the Examiner.

He intimates that a reference to his letter of the 15th ult., will show that he was not desirous of distinguishing himself on the "beer question," believing that he was renowned already on that topic. Now, we will concede to his fulsome egotism will show that he did distinguish himself by saying that "beer was drank out to a certain limit" in his premises. He did not tell the limit, whether by the pint, quart, gallon or barrel. Is this not fib No. one, for the Parson; but then it is neatly concealed.

Further on he says, we "have been convicted of propagating a malicious slander regarding the Volunteers." This is fib No. 2 for the Parson, and he knew when he wrote it that he was penning a falsehood, and was thus breaking the 9th commandment. We can prove "not guilty" by over 100 witnesses, and he knows this well. So much for the—the—Parson. He says we have been compelled to admit certain things. Poor creature! he is ready to propagate a falsehood against his neighbours. Did the Rev. B. A. read the whole of the admission in reference to the Review affair? If he did not, he should have done so, before he published another falsehood. This is fib No. 3 How many more? What a Messenger of Truth, truly! This Rev'd exclusman on "Beer to a certain limit;" this preacher of "Peace on earth and good will to men" on Sunday, and the President of a Society for learning to wheel men on Monday, this model parson, next favors the Review readers with a critique on nonsense, supposed to be the result of a disordered mind, under the influence of something stronger than beer, in which state nonsense and incoherency prevailed; and this is what our illustrious Lakefield Parson criticises; [illegible] words put in the mouths of [illegible] purpose. Noble critic! learned critic! profound thinker! "O, noble!"—"what a sorry figure he cuts? Just about in the position of the Dean on the Queen's English. We are content, B. A., to occupy the place of Mr. Mack. Mr. Mack handled the Dean and his English severely, and we doubt not that the Lakefield Incumbent winces under our lash.

B. A. wishes to leave the impression that ex-schoolmasters are incompetents; then so was Bishop Strachan and others in the church to which B. A. is attached; and some of our most eminent lawyers; for our own part we believe few will be able to see the pre-eminence of the son of an organ grinder over school masters. Of course they are not so pompous, so full of vanity, or so well acquainted with endless genealogies, and cannot ape snobbery so well. They do not pretend to reason with such an illustrious successor of the apostles as B. A.; to do so would be arrant nonsense. But as the good book teaches that of those who receive little, little will be required. we are not inclined to find fault with the measure meted out to B. A. We are so lenient as to believe that he will not have a large account against him at the last reckoning. The Judge will be just, and of course will credit B. A. with overseeing the "cups of beer, for cold water." Perhaps he will then be able to prove to the satisfaction of the court that Peterboro beer consisted of pure water. Some of the ways wonder whether B. A. will inform the Judge that under the cover of "pop bottles" even whiskey and brandy were dealt out; Officers not caring to see these things. Of course B. A. will say, I was down two days at camp, but—his, I—I—I didn't see anything but "beer to a certain limit."

Evidently B. A. was intended for the church, for he is a man of truth—one mark of a successor of the apostles—yes he is like a personage who here a certain character from the beginning. He was also designed for the army, for he is great on the "rifle question," and on shooting sentries. B. A. has varied the apostles' mission. He reads "go and teach men to shoot every creature." He must cut out for a scapegoat shortly, I see, and can condescend to malign an enemy for the sake of a friend. Newspaper men are timid for that is these corrupt times. He was intended for the senate office, for he is great on the "limit of beer," and how much below proof it is. He ought to have been appointed to some Philologeant shanty, he is great on words; see his critique on "paraphrase" and "parody." Dryden says: "In paraphrase or translation the authors' words are not strictly followed as the sense." Who is right, B. A.?

Sunday.—"A kind of calling it which the words of an author, or his thoughts, are by some slight exposition adapted to a different purpose."—Johnson. Was this not what was done, B. A.?

Rabbi-like, while with Lords, at Rideau and Johnson.

The Lakefield Examen, well-famous for any want of opposition of all questions, is a virulent gentleman. It was time of a Parish Minister was put an symbol, as he will please maintain the whole of Christ's sense differences between a School Master and the son of a "reputed organ [illegible]." And when he takes a view of our Pastor and Paul's benevolent of a Minister of Christ, he will, no doubt, be constrained to exclaim, "Inconsistent of Lakefield steward," but in his deep sorrow, leave that the spiritual monitor will know. Reading, rollicking Romans ought not trouble themselves about us, we doubt.

[illegible] with. They need not send Mr. Lizars, "a kind friend," as a question against the Methodists for no one cares for him. They need not few articles on tanning calf skins Romans. They need not make a "fuss" with [illegible] don't gamble; nor need they challenge us, we won't fight. The last is, they may as well not as others, and turn their attention to more spiritual subjects.

TORONTO CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The event of this week here was the opening of Parliament, which for the time swoon took place on Wednesday. There was considerable effort to display on the part of the Lieutenant Governor and Ministry, but they had the show nearly all to themselves; confidence is fatted to drown, and the few loungers who were to be drawn around the Parliament buildings were anything but favorably impressed, judging by their remarks, with the style of aristocratic airs, which formed a prominent feature in the ceremony. It was announced some days previously that the ladies who were to be favored with seats on the floor of the House, should appear in full dress, which in this instance meant a dress voluminous, and of extraordinary length at one end, and quite as remarkable for its brevity at the other end.—Lady Heritage, was the "Empress" of fashion on the occasion, and with these who followed her example afforded the contrasts which gave a very clear view of more of the subsequent "belles" of Toronto than usually meets the gaze of the prize eyes. The fashion in this respect, it is said, was not followed by all the ladies present, however, as there were some whose style would much more readily commend itself to fathers and brothers. The Premier was on hand, of course, and sported the inevitable [illegible] child which does duty on all important occasions. The other members of the government were also on hand with the exception of the Commissioner, which showed it to need was overcome with the perfection attacks of illness.

The Assembly Room has undergone a great improvement since last session and presents a fresh and agreeable appearance, and in the way of ventilation and light, the improvement is quite appreciable. A visit to the government buildings here brings forcibly to mind the [illegible] of Ottawagence and folly exposed in Ottawa. Buildings similar in style to [illegible] and costing about one-sixth the expense of the Ottawa buildings, would have been amply sufficient; but then there would not have been the same opportunity for plundering the hard-working taxpayers of Ontario for the benefit of unscrupulous political partizans.

Friday being a holiday there has been no sitting of the House since Thursday and consequently no business has been done, only hearing the reading of the address and the reply thereto. The address is very lengthy, and Mr. Sandfield has a cautious dislike for much legislation, and believes that by doing as little as possible in this line that he will best escape the breakers and secure a longer tenure of office. He is equally cautious not to commit himself for or against any measure until he first ascertains the opinions of the opposition, when he prudently adopts his policy to meet their views. Although entirely separated now from the Reform party, and doing his best to injure it, he carefully avoids the introduction of measures antagonistic to Reform principles, and, therefore, occupies a position at once unexceptible and without precedent in this or any other country. He is head of a government, but does not associate a distinct policy, and relies on adopting the principles of the opponents to secure a temporary retention of power.

During the debate on the address, spirited and excellent speeches were delivered by Messrs. McKellar and Boyd. The latter referred to the course of his speech, to the ungrinding policy of the Premier, who placed under the parliament he represented, and became so wrathy as a trod badger. He frequently interrupted the member for Prescott, by appealing to the speaker on frivolous points of order, which points were decided against him. There are few even among the most cherish apologists who will venture to defend the Premier in the Hamilton Asylum job, and the speech of South Ontario. The [illegible] was seized upon however, by poor little Dr. McGill to further distinguish himself in some way, and was very bad indeed, forgot the Honorable member for South Ontario to express an opinion as to what would or would not raise a man to popular estimation. Cyc would imagine, that he of all men, would be more on such a subject, knowing that he had fortified the affections of his constituents, and that he is personally holds his seat in opposition to the wishes expressed at a public meeting of those who elected him. The grovelling and contemptible conduct of the Premier in the expenditure of public money meets with general reprobation. It is a monstrous doctrine certainly that money is not to be expended for the benefit of the public generally, but in order to keep members in power. To Sandfield McDonald belongs the credit of being the first to publish and openly practice such a doctrine; and there can be but little doubt that when the public has an opportunity to express an opinion on his conduct, in this respect that may be readily anticipated.

Poor Richards is to be translated at last.—I have it on good authority that his resignation is arranged, and that it is to take place at the close of the session. Those disposed to be interest to him, say it is altogether voluntary on his part, that he is weary of the duties of the office which he finds very laborious, and that he is discouraged and disgusted with the treatment he is receiving from an unappreciating public. Others, (and they claim to speak by the book,) say that Sandfield is ejecting him at the command of certain of his supporters, and that he now seeks to free himself from the unpopularity that attaches to the administration of the affairs of the Crown Lands Department, by charging Richards with the entire responsibility. This will hardly go down however, as it is well known that Richards from the house was little more than a mere Clerk in the Department, and that no business of importance was transacted in which the Premier was not dictator. Apropos of his anxiety to conciliate parties here, I may mention that for some time back he has been assiduous in his efforts to get into the good graces of the Orphelins. Soirees and pic-nics were mooted his assistance, and a short time since when it was proposed to present Bishop Lynch with an address and sum of money before leaving for Rome, Sandfield attended a meeting held for that purpose, and professed from his perfect willingness to [illegible] ready filled and signed, and with which amount he handed the [illegible]. It [illegible] Thos. McMahon in the penitentiary cell, "the right man in the right place," no less a man elsewhere, perhaps. At a [illegible] meeting promptly held in Philadelphia, the Reverend Father appeared as a spectator.—He acknowledged that he was present at Ridgeway, not as a priest but as a Fenian. He strongly advocated another attack on Canada, and promised that whenever it was made he would be found among the "boys in green." Gen. O'Neil also addressed the meeting, praying a high officer to the "courage and patriotism" of McMahon, who, he said, had made good use of his rifle against the Queen's Own. After this no one can doubt the renegade priest's guilt. He deserved the penitentiary, and has relapsed therefrom was a mistake.—Telegraph.

On Tuesday last the Indians at Brantford feasted themselves upon an ox presented by Prince Arthur in consideration of his having been made a chief of the Six Nations. There was quite a jolly gathering of five hundred braves, squaws and papooses, and a number of speeches were made by Chief John Smoke Johnston, Chief John Buck, Chief Jacob General, Mr. J. T. Gilkerson, Indian superintendent, and others, in praise of the Queen and the Prince, whose name, it appears, is "Karakoudge" or "Flying Sun."

LARGE YIELD OF PEASE.—We are informed that Joseph Stapleton Esq., of Bexley, brought from three bushels of seed imported last year from London, Seventy five and a half bushels, and were it not that the crop was somewhat injured by bugs there is no doubt that the yield would have reached 80 bushels. This would be about 54 bushels to the acre.

In Dakotah territory nearly a million acres of land have been taken up by actual settlers, under the pre-emption and homestead laws, since last spring. Immigration continues, and among the late arrivals is a colony of farmers from Wisconsin.

The St. John, N. B., News, says the American steamer one day last week brought a large number of passengers, among whom were some twenty mechanics who were forced to return to their homes, being unable to obtain work in the States.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror, and even the "inexorable archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and at times overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

A CLERGYMAN writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of the Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the hoed Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILLMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE in almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most sceptical that the Great Medicinal Compound prepared after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Anderson Wood, of Cameron, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and in new well-known of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

CHANGE OF BUSINESS!

I BEG to inform the Public that I have retired from the active part of the business carried on by me as Druggist and Needleman, and in doing so wish to return my sincere thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on me since the dissolution of the late firm of Ormond & Gilmour, and would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same to my late successor, DOCTOR WILLIAM H. TAYLOR. I have much pleasure in introducing Dr. Taylor to my friends and the public of Peterboro' and vicinity as a thoroughly trained and experienced Druggist and Chemist, long connected with one of the best establishments in Montreal. This, together with his subsequent success as a medical practitioner of eleven years standing, will, I trust, ensure that confidence to him he so well merits

JOHN W. GILMOUR.

With reference to the above Circular of my esteemed predecessor, J. W. Gilmour, Esq., I beg to state that I came to Peterboro' not as a medical practitioner, but as a Chemist and Druggist; and it shall be my aim to carry on a first-class establishment in every department of that business.

In asking a share of public patronage, I hope by strict and personal attention to business to secure the interests of those who may favor me with their commands.

New Method of Washing Clothes

Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes-washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily fill them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

JAS. McFADDEN,
THOS. GREEN.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria, in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done, I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

Poetry.

Beautiful in Old Age.

How to be beautiful when old?
I can tell you, maiden fair—
Not by lotions, dyes and pigments,
Not by washes for your hair.
While you're young be pure and gentle,
Keep your passions well controll'd,
Walk, and work, and do your duty,
You'll be handsome when you're old.

Snow white locks are fair as golden,
Grey as lovely as the brown,
And the smile of age more pleasant
Than a youthful beauty's frown.
'Tis the soul that shapes the features,
Fires the eye, attunes the voice;
Sweet sixteen! be these your maxims,
When you're sixty you'll rejoice!

Varieties.

The Way Smithson Got married.

Mr. Smithson (an improvement on the celebrated name of Smith) wished to take Miss Brownly (another improvement) to the opera. He had been on terms of intimacy with the family for about five years, but never spoke of love, on the contrary, he had frequently declared his intention of leading a bachelor's life. One morning he called, and was admitted.

Oh, James! exclaimed Miss Jane, where have you kept yourself so long?

This took Smithson a little aback, for he had spent the preceding evening with the family. Before he could answer it, however, Jane's brothers and sisters (ten in number) had gathered about him. Summoning all his courage, he said, I have come to ask you—

Not here, James—now—now—eh!

That is, stammered Smithson, if you are not engaged?

Oh, oh! water—quick!

What's that? inquired her father; who says she is engaged?

I didn't mean ——— said Smithson, in confusion.

Of course not, continued Mr. Brownly, you've always been our favorite!

Then advancing and taking poor Smithson's hand, said 'Take her,' she is a good girl, and loves you to distraction. May you both be as happy as the day is long.

Thereupon, father, mother, children crowded around Smithson and wished him joy; and company coming in at the moment, the affair was told to them as a perfect secret. So Smithson got a wife without popping the question, almost before he knew it himself. But we cannot help thinking he was hurried into matrimony.

DENOMINATIONAL OXEN.—A Funny Stroke at all Religious Faiths.—A gentleman traveling in Texas, met on the road a wagon drawn by four oxen, driven by a countryman who in addition to the skillful flourish and crack of whip was vociferously encouraging his horned horses after this fashion—"Haw, Presbyterian!" "Gee, Baptist!" "Whoah, Episcopalian!"—"Get up, Methodist!" The traveller stopped the driver, remarking to him that he had strange names for his oxen, and he would like to know why he thus called them. Said the driver—"I call this ox Presbyterian, because he is true blue and never fails, pulls through difficulties and holds out to the end; beside, he knows more than the rest. I call this Baptist because he is always after water, and seems as though he'd never drink enough; then again he won't eat with the others. I call this ox Episcopalian, because he has a mighty way of holding his head up, and if the yoke gets a little tight, he tries to kick and clear out of the traces. I call this ox Methodist because he puffs, and blows, and bellows as he goes along, and you'd think he was pulling all creation; but he don't pull a pound unless you continually stir him up.

GETTING OVER THE DIFFICULTY.—An enterprising correspondent very nicely gets over a difficulty in this way: "The Princess de Metternich is to retire from society for a little while, and is buying lots of edgings, insertions, muslins, and so on, which she is making up into little garments, too large for a doll and too small for herself."

An old lady put on her specks, and taking a village newspaper, the first thing which caught her eyes was the heading of political article, which read—"Illinois moving."

Bless my soul!" said the good old dame, "I hope it won't move on my son William's farm on the border of Indiana."

Some people don't believe in advertising because they say, nobody reads the papers But let them get into a scrape, and you will find them flying round to the newspaper office with the request, please don't mention that little affair, it's a mistake, I don't want my name published all over the country

BLACK-EYED ladies are said to be pessionate and jealous. Blue-eyed—soulful, truthful, affectionate, and confiding. Grey eyed—philosophical, literary, resolute; and cold-hearted. Hazel-eyed—quick-eyed, quick-tempered, and fickle

'My boy,' said a clergyman to a boy who was fishing off a pier, 'don't you know that it is wicked to catch fish on Sunday?' 'Guess I haint sinned much yet,' said the boy without taking his eye from the cork, 'ain't got a nibble.'

Artemus Ward was fond of telegraphing and studied it for amusement, He was a very good "sender." To the telegram of a California Lecture Committee, 'What will you take for one hundred nights?' Artemus promptly replied 'Brandy and water.'

Mme. X. told her servant to wake her next morning at 6, as she had something important to do at that early hour. "Certainly, Madame; I won't fail. You have only to ring the bell, and I'll be down in a minute."

Carry O'Lenus favors the entrance of women into the political arena, on the ground that every woman is bound to do a certain amount of scalding, and if she does a good deal in public, she won't do so much at home.

Credit is like chastity: they both of them has stand temptation better than they has suppished.—Josh Billings.

The poorest boy, if he be industrious, honest and saving, may reach the highest honor in the land.

Never be cruel to a dumb animal; remember that it has no power to tell how much it suffers.

Intemperance is the cause of nearly all the trouble in this world: beware of strong drink.

Save your money and you will find it one of the most useful friends.

Take care of your pennies and they will grow to be dollars.

Never give trouble to your mother or father.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, commending by a single instance to the afflicted a relief when timely used, and by its merits known a single case of objectionable origin the discretion here been properly exercised; but on the contrary, all have delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pimples or Sallow, and restores to that activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in fact superseding all other preparations of the kind

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for cholic, worms, bowel fever, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS.

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, weakness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

N. B. If one six postage stamps enclosed to any authorized Agent will ensure a bottle, containing Pills, by return mail.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES
ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

BARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, rendering the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one EQUAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may promote and beautify it. Those who are losing it may stay the loss arrested. IN THE AUTUMN.

Best when the [illegible]
And before [illegible]
When nature [illegible]
Ashes with a [illegible]
That ripple the brightness of Spring
Their [illegible]
Then comes [illegible]

Some spirit skin to the rainbow,
Then becomes the general dress;
And mention the fire spending landscape
In hues that bewilder the eyes.
The tree from my cheek-pilfered shadow
Smiles soft on a vision so gay,
And dreams that his favorite children,
The feathers, have not yet passed away.

[illegible]
A light, spare haze in the air,
As if angels, while heavenward soaring,
Had left their bright robes glinting there;
[illegible]
[illegible]
And [illegible]
From some [illegible]
[illegible]
Awaken a dreamy delight—
A calmness, tasteful enjoyment,
Like rich bursts of music at night;
We fancy they're fading and fleeting,
That quickly, too quickly, they'll end,
And we watch them with a yearning reflection,
As at parting we watch a dear friend.

Oh! beautiful Indian Summer!
Thou favorite child of the year,
[illegible]
With gifts and adornments no doubt
How fain would we bid thee to linger
On mountain and meadow awhile,
For our hearts, like the sweet haunts of Nature,
Hail and grow young in thy smile.

Not silent as the old fields of Autumn
Dost thou a lost brightness restore,
But fillest bringest a world-weary spirit
Sweet dreams of its childhood once more.
[illegible]
Of all that was brightest and best—
Thy peace and serenity offer
A foretaste of heavenly rest.

WONDERFUL—IT IS TRUE.—Mr. Alexander Nicoll, 26 Dundas's Land, Upper Pleasance, writes to the Dundee Advertiser as follows:—

One day lately I had occasion to call at the house of a friend, and during our conversation I was told what I considered by very curious and singular discovery of Nature's works. The mistress of the house was cleaning a large cod-fish, when to her astonishment an exact representation of a Bible was to be seen in the eye of the fish. The rest of the inmates were soon attracted, and they all declared it to be the greatest curiosity ever they had seen. It was a very distinct miniature likeness of a fisherman, with his sou'-wester on, and fully equipped in the act of hauling the fish into the boat.

The Committee of a moral association in England has reported that "women are fast being drawn into the vice of Intemperance and drunkenness, and that men go to public houses more to get away from their wives than from any other cause."—But may not the proposition be reversed? Do not wrongs become demoralized and addicted to drunkenness because their husbands go to public houses, and leave their wives to loneliness and discontent? We are inclined to think both assertions are correct, and the causes mentioned mutually contribute to bring about the results alluded to.

Wood casks are now rendered almost as impervious as glass by Mr. Scully's process of steeping the staves, before the cask is put together, in hot paraffine wax. This material permeates the pores of the wood, and [illegible] spirit, acid or water. For preserving vinegar in casks the invention is most useful.

Clover plowed in has three effects. It gives vegetable mould. The roots bring to the soil plant food out of the subsoil. And the acid produced when the decay is going on aids in dissolving the mineral parts of the soil. In gravelly lands this last is of as much importance as either of the others.

A gentleman at an eating-house, asked the person next to him if he would please to pass the mustard. "Sir," said the man "do you mistake me for a waiter?" "Oh, no, sir" was the reply; "I mistook you for a gentleman."

The late Bishop of Exeter has left to the County of Cornwall his valuable ecclesiastical library, on condition that a separate building to contain it be erected at Truro within three years.

If the [illegible] you, take a bill [illegible] in the morning.

Perfect Digestion means perfect health, and is secured by using Colby's Pills.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the Fenians, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," One bottle of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co. employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the [illegible] Mexicans, who, [illegible] death for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lost their own. [Boston Commercial.

The Ecclesiastical Council lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature consisting representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shaftesbury Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those who live and breath they have pronounced) to be a pure, harmless, and reliably sanitary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

(This cut represents Mr. S. A. Colby's Mill, in Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.)

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may rent the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gears, Hand-cutting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Mulay Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pumps.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

To Messrs. Cummings & Bain, Shefford P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Kingston, County of Frontenac,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 25th, 1868.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the stomach, which gradually during the spring of 1867 increased to my knees, and on up to my hips and shoulders. I became so weak that I could not walk, and was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, using physic, at different times, three doctors and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I constantly got worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shakespearean Remedy by reading the same professionally in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; to them I was confined almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shakespearean Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply from the gratitude as a man of feelings I have for the cure of mine was not a private one, but hoping to all my neighbors and friends, and in case any afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shakespearean Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN HAMMOND.

Sworn to before me at Kingston, County of Frontenac, this ninth day of February, 1868.

A. P. WOOD, J. P. for the County of Frontenac.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Dunphy for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of humility and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was pronounced hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shakespearean Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of the medicine, you are at liberty to refer to me, that in her case it acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

They were painfully afflicting, but have proved of great benefit to such [illegible] have used them. Some of these cases have been of many years' standing, and had become chronic, while others were of recent origin, and had not become fully established. In all, the system was thoroughly infected with disease, and the blood was filled with impurities. Under the use of these pills, the system throws off the infection, and the blood is purified, and the patient recovers health. Besides the cases mentioned above, we have many others in which these pills have done wonderful cures, but which are not sufficiently distinct to publish. Indeed, there are few communities in any part of the country, and few families in any neighborhood, in which some one has not been benefited by the use of these pills.

Sarsaparilla points to one of the most important of the organic functions of the human economy. It assists to bring into healthy action the digestive, assimilative, and excretive functions, without exciting a suspicion of the fact in the mind of the patient

CHANGE OF BUSINESS!

I BEG to inform the Public that I have retired from the active part of the business carried on by me as Druggist and Seedsman, and in doing so wish to return my sincere thanks for the liberal patronage bestowed on me since the dissolution of the late firm of Ormond & Gilmour, and would respectfully solicit a continuance of the same to my sole successor, DOCTOR WILLIAM H. TAYLOR. I have much pleasure in introducing Dr. Taylor to my friends and the public of Peterboro' and vicinity as a thoroughly trained and experienced Druggist and Chemist, long connected with one of the best establishments in Montreal. This, together with his subsequent success as a medical practitioner of eleven years standing, will, I trust, ensure that confidence to him he so well merits.
JOHN W. GILMOUR.

With reference to the above Circular of my esteemed predecessor, J. W. Gilmour, Esq., I beg to state that I come to Peterboro' not as a medical practitioner, but as a Chemist and Druggist; and it shall be my aim to carry on a first-class establishment in every department of that business.
In asking a share of public patronage, I hope by strict and personal attention to business to secure the interests of those who may favor me with their commands.

New Method of Washing Clothes
Without Labor.
"THE DOMINION"
Steam Washing Boiler.
THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes-washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest linens to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.
☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.
The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

Poetry.

The Sunshine of the Past.

The sunshine of the past,
It fills the balmy air—
Lies glinting in our pathway—
'Tis round us everywhere.
Its many days of gladness
Rejuvenate the soul,
As memories bright and radiant,
Across the vision roll.

We hear again the laughter,
We see the sparkling eye,
We grasp the hand of friendship,
As happy hearts fit by.
The present lies forgotten,
A garment thrown aside,
As clothed in thoughts transporting,
We now roll back the tide.

There are hours we fondly cherish,
And thoughts we cannot hide,
Whose sweet and holy cadence,
Chimes aye in memory's well.
The past has made the present,
Its glowing rays of light
Now bathes in hallowed splendor
The scenes that lie in sight.

The present bears the impress,
Beyond the power of change,
Of scenes not dead, but living,
On memory's shelves they range.
Keep ever fresh and fragrant,
These leaves of fadeless green,
Unruffled and untarnished,
Their gladsome, golden sheen.

CHAPTER V.

SIBYLLE'S LOVE.

On her way back to the chateau, Sibylle was in a state of enthusiastic elation. She could not conceal from herself that the agreement in which her interview with Raoul had ended was one of three equivocal and suspicious compromises which patience suggests, and that she had succumbed to that very weakness she had so much derided. Nevertheless, she did not reproach herself. She said to herself—and we are far from blaming her for it—that too much strength of will and a too rigid virtue are akin to the harshness of egotism; that the impulses of the soul, the tender weakness of the heart, at some of the crises of life, give noble counsels than the laws of unbending reason. She comprehended, without dissembling them, all the delicate difficulties, all the hidden dangers, all the painful trials of the task she had undertaken, but she was ready henceforward to face them with a secret joy. All her tenderness was awakened and even increased by contact with the passion of Raoul. She had learned, moreover, to do him more justice, to esteem him more highly, and from that moment, in place of obedience to the rigid principles which had thus far actuated her, a nobler and a sweeter duty seemed to be before her, that of devoting herself to the salvation of the soul she adored, and of hazarding in this generous enterprise her repose, her reputation, and, if need were, her life.

It is plain that the strictly logical consequence of her resolution would have been the unconditional acceptance of the heart and hand of the count; but if Mademoiselle de Ferias had this idea, she repelled it, either because she could not conquer so completely the proud obstinacy of her nature and the settled convictions of her mind, or because she felt a vague fear that the heart of Raoul would not so readily yield to the miracle she invoked for him, if she should no longer be held before him as a reward.

Some minutes later, the marquis and marchioness heard from Sibylle's mouth the history of her campaign, in which, as she said, laughing, she had won no glory. She ended by submitting for their approbation the treaty of peace and friendship she had thought it her duty to conclude with Monsieur de Chalys, on the express condition that he should abandon all pretensions to her hand. This restriction no more deceived Monsieur and Madame de Ferias than it had deceived Sibylle herself. They did not even doubt that Sibylle had really decided in her own mind in favor of her union with the count, and the tone of irritation upon him was simply, as the old marquis expressed it, a means of securing an honorable surrender. Their conversation with Miss O'Neil and with the curate had, moreover, predisposed them in favor of the count, for whom the curate especially had manifested very great predilection. His soul, he said, was doubtless disturbed, but it was not perverse, it might yet be touched by grace, and it would be cruel to drive it to despair. Nevertheless, Monsieur and Madame de Ferias still felt that Sibylle had followed with rather too much ardor the road in which they themselves had led the way. The Marquis gently chided her for the expedition, but did not refuse to ratify the preliminaries she had signed with Raoul, and consented to treat him as a distinguished man and an eminent artist, who chanced to be in the neighborhood, with whom it would be agreeable to meet from time to time. 'But you will understand, my daughter,' added the old man, with an ironical smile, 'how great reserve must preside over relative the object of which is still so mysterious.'

Apparently for the purpose of establishing this desirable reserve, Monsieur de Ferias on the following Monday accompanied his grand-daughter and Miss O'Neil in an excursion to the village, where all three surprised Monsieur de Chalys at work on his scaffolding. Raoul had passed the Sunday at his window, listening with emotion to the distant sound of the organ mingling in the breeze with the low murmurs of the ocean. The apparition of the marquis and Sibylle seemed to him an omen of no good augury, that his head-ache features were lighted up with joyous brilliancy.

Monsieur de Ferias, after having intimated praises upon the frescoes, informed Monsieur de Chalys that if he had an hour of leisure in the afternoon, and should chance to be passing by the chateau, Madame de Ferias would be most happy to see him. It will be readily believed that it was not long before the change occurred. But Raoul used great discretion in availing himself of the polite offer of the marquis.—He had perceived its limitations, and felt, moreover, a strange shame in the sort of romantic novitiate he was undergoing, and seemed to fear to abridge it. He nevertheless dared to touch the happiness which grew around him. The season was delightful. While the sea was encroaching with burning rays the cold cement of the cliffs, and rejoicing in the withered grass the little blue locusts that frequent these shores, he was cloistered in the shade and cool freshness of the church, and, alone with his art and his dreams, enjoyed the sweetest hours he had ever known. The curate did not fail to come each day and gaze with ecstacy upon his work, bringing with him the fruits of his garden, which the priest devoured with the appetite of a school-boy, to the great delight of the old man. Or when Raoul would rest for a few minutes and smoke his cigar under the shadow of the church-wall, the curate would come and sit down beside him on the turf or on a tombstone, and engage in friendly chat, while the murmur of the tranquil sea beating idly on the beach resounded in their ears.

The count had a companion still more assiduous, and not less dear, for he bore as well as the curate the mark of Sibylle. If not a nose, he had lived beside one. This was Jacques Feray. Jacques, in his occasional vagabondage, had once discovered the wonderful work that was going on in the church of Ferias. He began by lurking timidly about the church-door, and at last had made bold to mount upon the scaffolding where he stood amazed at the radiant world that was little by little taking form upon the walls and vaulted roof. Raoul had learned from Sibylle herself a part of the poor man's story, and the curate had completed the tale. From natural kindliness and from a sort of innocent diplomacy, he had given Jacques an encouraging reception and had found no difficulty in taming him by talking to him of Sibylle, with an accent of sympathy the sincerity of which the mason understood. From this day, Jacques thought it proper to come every morning and take his station upon the edge of the platform, whence he watched Raoul's work with interest, generally in silence. Soon he began to reply with good humor to the questions the count addressed to him with that frank and easy good nature peculiar to artists. Sibylle was the usual theme of these whimsical dialogues.

'You love her well, my lad, don't you?' said Raoul one day.

'And you too,' replied Jacques Feray, with a cunning and roguish smile. 'You mustn't hurt her,' he added immediately in a severe tone.

Jacque's confidence in his new friend became so great that he communicated to him secret sorrow which cruelly tormented him. The wife and child of the poor wretch reposed in the churchyard under two grassy mounds, which still kept their form after the lapse of so many years.—Since the pious interest of Sibylle had brought a new peace and light to his disordered brain, Jacques had been accustomed to adorn these graves with wild flowers, carefully renewing them as fast as they became faded. According to the usage of the country, the time was soon to arrive when the right to occupancy of this ground would lapse, and the two graves again become part of the common domain. Jacques had been informed of this by some of the villagers in ferocious and cruel sport.—He knew that one day his grassy mounds would be levelled and obliterated, and all that they contained scattered to the winds. This idea presented itself to the disturbed brain of the idiot with a surrounding of sinister and distressing images.

At the same time, he communicated his alarm with so much mystery and circumlocution, that the real cause of his torments had escaped even the penetration of Sibylle. Raoul only succeeded in guessing it by dint of patience, and in consequence of the daily and prolonged visits of the madman. Just as he had made the discovery, the Abbe Renaud entered the church, and in few words he told him the story.

'Monsieur le Cure,' added he in a low tone, 'I wish to buy this ground. Attend to it if you please, and keep it a secret, I beg of you.'

Then addressing Jacques Feray, he said:

'Don't torment yourself any more; they won't touch your graves, they belong to you; it is all arranged.'

An instant after, as he was busy at his work, he heard a rustling that made him turn; it was crazy Feray, who had taken hold of the skirt of his blouse, and was pressing it to his lips. A tear dropped suddenly from Raoul's eye, but perceiving the curate a few steps away, motionless and attentive, he blushed, stamped with his foot, and repelling Jacques Feray with some violence, 'Leave me alone,' he said; 'stupid fool!'

The Abbe Renaud had made it a duty to watch Raoul, and to observe in his character and conduct any traits which could serve to justify the hopes in which he shared, and he did not fail, notwithstanding the counts request, to report that very evening at the chateau the morning's incident. The hearts of the excellent old people were so much touched by it that they lost what formal prudence they still preserved, and the next morning Raoul received an invitation to dine at the chateau. Monsieur and Madame de Ferias dined at six o'clock, a concession recently made to Sibylle's Parisian habits. It was the first time that Raoul had been admitted to so great a degree of intimacy. He was surprised at the life and gayety of Sibylle. Her joyous disposition, hitherto concealed under the constraint of fashionable etiquette, gave to the severe grace of the young girl a charm that was to him perfectly delightful. But in the course of this happy evening, there was one critical moment, that in which the servants entered the hall, according to the family custom, to join in the evening prayer. A few minutes before, Sibylle had warned the count with a smile of the coming ceremony.

'Shall you take a walk in the garden?' she will allow you,' she added. 'It will not be long.'

'No,' replied Raoul in the same tone. 'I do not wish to [illegible] of a moment's tête-à-tête.'

He took a place a little retired, in the bewildering upon the back of a chair in a sufficiently discreet attitude, and thought himself abundantly recompensed for a simple act of good taste by the grateful glance which Sibylle directed toward him when she crossed herself at the close of the ceremony.

From this time, Raoul's intercourse with the inhabitants of the chateau became more familiar, and this pious scene took place more than once in his presence. It always caused him a sort of undefined emotion, which he likewise experienced in his daily associations with the ascetic life of the curate, and in the atmosphere of the church, and the vague perfume of the sanctuary that he now constantly breathed. The strange framework in which his life was set sometimes made him smile with a kind of disdainful bitterness, but it was not really displeasing to him. The practices of piety when imbued with [illegible] superstition and mean bigotry generally disturb and disgust the [illegible] they represent to only [illegible] ing piety, the observances of a [illegible] worship, the religious discipline of life, doubtless because they respond to the noblest and most powerful instinct of our nature, have an extraordinary charm which seems to be contagious. Who among us all, even the most intelligent, entering at some troubled hour of his moral life one of those ancestral family circles where a calm and cheerful piety directs and sanctifies every daily habit, has not felt an impulse of emotion, of yearning, and of regret? It was not thus without reason that Sibylle's grandparents, and Sibylle herself, had hoped that Raoul would not escape the influence of the wholesome atmosphere that surrounded him.

In this atmosphere, in the apostolic simplicity of the parsonage, and the patriarchal mobility of the chateau, there was nothing to offend his taste or intelligence; all was pleasing to his imagination and soothing to his heart. It may perhaps be said with truth that the factitious and tumultuous life of the world, contact with a depraved society, the fearful effects of violence and evil upon the earth, contribute more largely than all the arguments and pride of modern reason to whelm the intelligence in the abyss of doubt. If there were a spot in the universe where man would love only before his eyes the majestic beauties of nature, and the sight of upright and honest hearts, his soul, however disturbed and troubled, should hardly fail of regaining some peace and confidence.

It was in some degree to such an ideal spot that Raoul had been transported, and he was sometimes amazed at the new color with which his thoughts were imbued under these unknown skies.

Doubtless there existed a wide interval between these soft emotions, these poetic aspirations, and a fundamental moral change, a positive faith. Thus, the logical mind of Sibylle did not fail to apprehend. Without knowledge of the numerous and complex objections which sustain and support the skepticism of the day, and which it would be superfluous to indicate to the reader, she understood that they could not yield at once to a vague and undefined emotion. The Abbe Renaud reassured her.

'God is [illegible] he said, 'but it is not proved. If only the heart can be more widely opened, the rooted objections of the mind will fall and lose themselves in it.—Let him but believe in God, and I am sure of the rest.'

Sibylle nevertheless seemed to have made it a rule to avoid with every one, and above all, with Raoul, the subject of conversation. She even showed, in the course of their familiar relations, so much peaceful serenity, that he was disturbed by it, thinking it resulted from indifference. He feared lest she had accepted literally and without ulterior hopes the fleeting friendship she had permitted him. To the mysterious trial upon which the future of their love had appeared to depend, she made no allusion, and it seemed as if she never thought of it. She did think of it, however, continually, sometimes with mortal discouragements, sometimes with raptures that melted her heart.

'Alas!' said she to the curate one day, 'is it not madness to hope that so hard a heart should be softened in such a little time and by such slender means? Some sudden shock might effect it.' After a pause she added with a sad smile: 'It seems to me sometimes, father, that if I were to die he would believe.'

The old man's eyes filled with tears, and he could only motion with his hand that she should banish such thoughts.

Another day she thought she saw in the expression or the words of the count a favorable symptom.

'Ah! father,' she said to the old priest 'what a dream is mine! Is it not too blissful for this earth? To save from evil and to bring back to God the man I love—I love so madly!' and she gave to this word an accent of unrepressible passion.

'Ah! what a dream!' she repeated, and burst into tears, covering her face with her beautiful hands. About two months of this strange life had now passed, when one evening at nightfall, Monsieur de Chalys, who had dined at the chateau, gave his arm to Sibylle and led her gently down the vaulted avenue before the gate.

'Mademoiselle,' said he, 'am I mistaken? It seems to me that you no longer care for my conversion.'

'Why, monsieur? Because I do not catechise you? Beside being a poor theologian, I fear to appear in an unbecoming part. I have a great desire to convert you, but I have also a great desire not to be displeasing to you.'

'I hardly know in what part you could be displeasing,' said Raoul in the same tone. 'Would you like to know the condition of my mind, Mademoiselle Sibylle?'

'Yes, if it is better than before.'

'It is better,' said Raoul.

'Truly?' said she eagerly.

And he felt the young girl's arm trembling on his own.

'It must be true for me to speak of it,' said he, 'for nothing could seem to me more cruel than to deceive myself, or more wrong than to deceive you upon such a subject.

Yes, you, and those about you, you make me doubtful of my doubts. It is so [illegible] it is so revolting, to behold [illegible] who have their only origin in matter, and will all return to it again! [illegible] day the thought is strengthened within me that there is in truth a purer source whence souls descend and whither they ascend [illegible] like the angels of Jacob's vision. Yes, [illegible] lately sweep a prospect of mind so wider that they embrace [illegible] this [illegible] not yet your God, doubtless; but tell me, Mademoiselle Sibylle, that you are content.'

'Content?' said she, in a grave and tender voice. 'No, I am not content, but I have a heaven in my heart.'

They walked for a time in silence through the gloomy arches of the grange. Sibylle suddenly stretched her hand [illegible]

'My friend!' she murmured.

He took her hand [illegible] in his own. She parted from him, and her shadowy figure disappeared in the garden. After the happiest eight-and-forty hours [illegible] Mademoiselle de Ferias had a [illegible] which [illegible] to leave [illegible] for Paris. [illegible] in a few days. He had begged [illegible] to deliver to Mademoiselle [illegible] the despatch which had caused his departure. It contained these four words:

'Come at once! —GANDRAX.'

[illegible] read the signature, Sibylle [illegible] pale.

[illegible] SIBYLLE'S LOVE.

At the very hour when Sibylle let fall her head and her heart into the hand of Raoul under the arching trees at Ferias, a very different scene of love was passing in the parlor of one of those elegant summer residences which hang on the hillsides of Lucienes, not far from Paris. The baron of Val-Chesney had that day to dinner a friend he had lately acquired he hardly knew how or why. It was Louis Gandrax. The young baron, notwithstanding the hitherto irreproachable and blameless conduct of his wife, was too much in love with her not to feel some jealousy, and as had been with secret satisfaction that he had seen her directing her thoughts toward the speculations of science, under the [illegible] tionship of the young savant; for his intimacy with her he considered rather a protection than a danger, as that [illegible] of Gandrax's life was not less notorious than his [illegible] talents. [illegible] Clotilde, the Oriental charm of Sibylle had been the reflection into friendship for Raoul had cast upon him. Little by little his personal magnetism, his [illegible] and the celebrity he had begun to [illegible] on Clotilde a strong fascination. Nevertheless it was not without curiosity and zeal that this young woman strove to initiate herself into the serious studies which Gandrax pursued. She hoped in this way to give to the [illegible] a character of elevation that would redeem it in her own eyes for thoughtlessness with strong passions Clotilde had not a guiding soul and upon [illegible] faults [illegible] exercised the signs of an original nobleness that had been stifled by a wretched education.

[illegible] Gandrax in [illegible] youth. Assisted by [illegible] by an avenging love, he had made with his pride [illegible] imagined that he should [illegible] an overmastering superiority in imposing it upon Clotilde, and thus succeeded in [illegible] into a triumph of his will what was in fact its weakness. The triumph he fancied he had attained intoxicated him. From the moment the young materialist [illegible] with sovereign pride upon this earth which seemed to belong to him, and repeated to himself his favorite axiom: 'There is a God. He is the man who knows and who wills.'

But he did not know all; and this very evening when we have found him between Madame de Val-Chesney and her husband, he was to be convinced of it.

He had passed the day at her house, engaged in some scientific experiments, in a little laboratory that Clotilde had fitted up in her villa. When he departed [illegible] she showed him a letter she had just received from her aunt, in which Madame de Rosny mentioned Raoul's presence at Perins, and indulged in some venomous remarks upon his person, his mode of life, and his relations with Sybille. Madame de Val-Chesney had made much sport of the Count de Chalys, transformed into a hermit and an assistant at mass. Gandrax contented himself with shrugging his shoulders and avoiding the subject of conversation. Clotilde seemed averse [illegible] the rest of the day, and at dinner [illegible] treated G

UPPER CANADA COLLEGE.

For some time the question of the very existence of Upper Canada College has been before the people and the Legislature of Ontario. Two or three years ago, the newly-organized Grammar School Masters' Association took up in real earnest the question of the relations of Upper Canada College to the Grammar Schools and the University of this Province. Under their auspices, Mr. Hunter, Head Master of the Dundas Grammar School, wrote a very able pamphlet on the "Upper Canada College Question in which he considered, with ample and accurate reference to the Journals of the House, three points:

1. How Upper Canada College came to be established in defiance of the Legislature.

2. How Upper Canada College has contrived to absorb more than one-half of the Endowment of the Provincial University.

3. Why Upper Canada College has been so long permitted to remain a charge on the Grammar School Endowment.

Whether Mr. Hunter succeeded in accomplishing all he undertook or not, no one has been able in any degree to justify the enormous expenditure of the Institution.—Instead of justifying such a terrible waste of public money, attempts have been made to show the necessity for its existence on the ground of its superiority as a High School, accompanied by an open or tacit admission of financial mismanagement in the days gone by. The Toronto papers, and the Toronto papers alone, have tried hard to impress upon the public mind the idea that Upper Canada College is not a Grammar School at all—in fact, that it occupies a position altogether superior to Grammar Schools, and fills a place between them and University College. We were, at one time, gravely and pompously informed by the City Press that Upper Canada College has no equivalent in America. We were told to turn our eyes to Germany and look at her celebrated Gymnasia, and we would find the class of Educational Institutions to which Upper Canada College belongs. Upper Canada College was no longer a Grammar School, but a Gymnasium in the German sense! Well, what are German Gymnasia? Something very great and very profound no doubt; but when stripped of all technicality, only Intermediate Schools filling up the place between German Common Schools and German Universities, just as our Grammar Schools fill up the place between our Common Schools and our Universities. German Gymnasia and Canadian Grammar Schools perform the same functions precisely; but of course the German are more thorough and complete than the Canadian could be expected to be. If we take into consideration the amount of work done, and the mental training given, then the German Gymnasia are not simply the equals of Upper Canada College or our Grammar Schools, but of our Universities. Upper Canada College, or The Royal Grammar School as it is sometimes called, is not a College at all in the true sense of the term. It merely prepares boys to enter College; it simply fits pupils for the University of Toronto and nothing more. Nor is it a "Royal Grammar School," in any special sense, except it be that of "lavish expenditure," and in that respect it is "royal" enough for a young country. The special work of Upper Canada College is to prepare boys for the Junior Matriculation Examination of the University of Toronto; but such preparation represents only a small part of the work done by Grammar Schools. Some Grammar Schools prepare pupils altogether for other Colleges, and others part for the University, and part for other similar Institutions. Victoria College Grammar School prepares her pupils principally to enter Victoria College. The Kingston Grammar School sends her pupils to Queen's College, and so does the Newburg Academy (or Gr. School). Our own Grammar School this year sent three pupils to University College; two to Victoria College, and one to Columbia College. The main strength of Upper Canada College is represented by what she does at Matriculation into University College; but such matriculation only tests the strength of Grammar Schools in so far as they are feeders for the Universities. But again, many Grammar Schools prepare wholly or partially most of the Teachers for the Common Schools and for Assistants in Grammar Schools in the counties in which they are located. Further, the Grammar Schools often conduct the education of young men through a portion of their University course even after they have matriculated at some University with honors. This is the case at present here, and in some other Grammar Schools. Moreover, many of the best pupils never proceed from the Grammar Schools at all to College, but leave school to enter on the active duties of life, either as merchants, mechanics or farmers; and many pass the examinations prescribed by the Law Society and become lawyers without any further scientific or literary training, than what they get at these Schools. Finally, an immense number of young ladies get at these Schools a better education than they could ever get at a Ladies' Boarding School or other Institution now open to their competition. How compare the work of U. C. College in this way—and it is the only fair way—with that of the Grammar Schools, it must appear small indeed. How later does she stand at the University Examinations when compared with the Grammar Schools? We find this year that Upper Canada College sent up only 8 students out of 65, and that the Grammar Schools sent nearly all the rest. We find too that out of 51 first class honors, the Royal Grammar School obtained 16, or a little over one-fourth; and out of 63 second class honors, 16 fell to her, that is, out of 124 honors, Upper Canada College obtained 26; while one Grammar School, Galt, obtained 18. Of the Scholarships, The Royal Grammar School got 3, and Galt 12. We must remember also, to make deductions from the honors gained by boys claimed by Upper Canada College on account of attendance there for times varying from one term or less to one year, but who really belong to and were prepared by the Grammar Schools. Of the eight pupils of Upper Canada College, F. H. Wallace, had been educated at Drummondville Grammar School, John Craig at Port Hope, H. McFayden at Manilla, Robt. Roger at Peterboro, and J. H. Long and Colin Fletcher entered U. C. C at the 5th. Form. Wallace who spent the shortest time there, actually did the best of the eight, and the boy who passed through the whole six forms and spent 6 years in preparation the worst!—The best scholar at the recent examinations was not an Upper Canada College boy, but a pupil of the Port Hope Grammar School. No matter then how we test the question, we find Upper Canada College fairly beaten—beaten even on her own ground, and presenting no special claims to be considered a "Gymnasium" in the German sense. At the last annual Convocation of the University of Toronto, Dr. McCaul, the President of University College said:—"The results of the examination have borne unquestionable testimony to the usefulness of the Grammar Schools. When we consider what has been done, and the wide-spread feeling with respect to education in this country, we cannot but feel the greatest anxiety about them and trust the Legislature will show the utmost care in dealing with the question." If we examine the last I have given, we shall find that Port Hope stands first. Why then, we ask in the name of common sense, should Upper Canada College receive $12,500 a year besides the use of buildings and property belonging to the Grammar Schools? while Galt Grammar School, for example, gets but a paltry fraction of that amount, and has to purchase her own grounds and erect her own buildings. The thing is manifestly unjust, and we hope the Legislature will remove this excrescence from our Education System. Let us hear no more about the great Gymnasium in Toronto! What then ought to be done with Upper Canada College? Ought it to be swept away or destroyed? No! but it ought to be properly managed. We say to the Legislature, treat it like other similar Institutions, and pay it according to the work done and certified by the Grammar School Inspector. Toronto is large enough and important enough to have two or three Grammar Schools or Collegiate Institutes such as the New High School Bill proposes to create. What we complain of is not that Toronto has too many Schools, or Colleges, but of the palpable injustice of making a single Grammar School an exception, of pampering one School and starving one hundred. We say again, make Upper Canada College a Collegiate Institute on the same terms as other Institutes in the chief centres of population, and then let Toronto endow it as richly, as amply and generously as she chooses, and the country will never complain; but till justice is done, we will agitate and cry down with monopoly. The question will soon be brought up in the Legislature, and we hope such action will be taken throughout the country, by holding public meetings and other means, as will show the members of the Legislative Assembly that the people are determined to endure this injustice no longer. What the Grammar Schools need, is more material aid, so as to enable them to enlarge their staff of Teachers. If that could be obtained, Upper Canada College would have very little to boast of indeed. If our Grammar Schools do so well with one or two masters, they certainly would do far better with three or four.

The Late North Renfrew Election.

We give in this issue an article clipped from the Irish Canadian, a paper published in the interests of the Catholic body, which we hope will be read and carefully digested by our Catholic readers in this county.—The writer in the Canadian evidently speaks from conviction, when he says that "it is time there was an end to Tory rule in this country," and the reason he cites ought certainly be considered sufficient. He also feels keenly the insult put upon the body by Sir Francis and Sir John, in refusing the Catholic vote to the character of an article of ordinary barter, and in vigorous terms denounces the "brothers" who make a living by selling the votes of their co-religionists. We are glad to observe that the signs of returning reason among our Catholic fellow subjects are numerous, and that at length they feel the necessity for a more pure and honest Government.

Retribution has not been long in overtaking Murray. He was to have been elected for the Local House through the aid of ministerial support, but no sooner was the election of Sir Francis secured than the protestations of Murray were "pooh poohed," and the Tory press of Renfrew now treat his candidature as an absurdity, and urge him to retire and save the county the expense and annoyance of a contest, which can only result in failure to him. In Mr. Murray's case, therefore, the seller has been nicely sold.

FATAL ACCIDENT BY SHOOTING.—We learn that one of those melancholy cases that are becoming too frequent from the momentary forgetfulness of danger while handling loaded firearms, occurred in Smith near Lakefield, on Saturday last. A young man named John Ray, was shot through the heart by his gun going off accidentally. It appears that the young man was in some way arousing himself with his dog, with the gun in his hand, when either by means of the dog stepping on the trigger or something unperceived touching it, the charge went off, and passing in the region of the heart killed him instantly. This painful accident should lead to greater caution in the use of fire arms, for, although sometimes it appears impossible to avoid danger, greater care would lessen the risk of it. Our sincere sympathies are with the friends in their sudden and trying bereavement.

SELLING LIQUOR to the Indians in British Columbia is punished by a fine of $100 or four months' hard labour in gaol

The Pigeon Creek Bridge.

Messrs. S. S. Fish, F. Pearce, I. Garbutt and Jos. Millen, in company with Mr. G. A. Stewart, County Engineer, visited the new bridges across Chemong Lake and Pigeon Creek on the 16th instant, and passed the following resolution respecting those bridges:

"Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Miller,—That the County Engineer be directed to make an examination of the bridges, and estimate the probable cost to complete the same, in accordance with the contract, and also his opinion of the work so far as completed; and further to report the probable cost of eight posts, and also an estimate of the cost of piles and slugs for the Mud Lake bridge."

"Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That the full amount of Trenam's contract less double the sum estimated by the Engineer as being required to complete the contract, be paid Mr. Trenam, on his finishing the railing on both bridges by such time as the commissioners may appoint next spring."

After a careful inspection the committee are satisfied that when the bridges are complete that they will amply answer the purpose for which they are intended.

At a pro re nata meeting of the Presbytery of Cobourg, which took place in the Canada Presbyterian Church, Peterboro, the moderator put into the hands of the Rev. Wm. Blain, of Springville, a call from the congregation of Inverness, in the Province of Quebec, to become their pastor. Rev. Mr. Gillis, from Montreal, and Mr. A. McKillop, Inverness, were heard on behalf of the Presbytery and congregation; also delegates from Springville and Lakevale. The members of the Presbytery then gave expression to their views on the matter, after which Mr. Blain, being asked for his decision, craved further time to consider the subject before giving his decision. The Presbytery granted the request, and appointed to meet at Springville to receive Mr. Blain's decision on Tuesday, 7th of December. The call to Mr. Blain is numerously signed, and very hearty.

It is gratifying to the many friends of the Rev. Mr. Blain to know that his efforts in the cause of religion are so highly appreciated, and that he is the recipient of a call of the importance of that with which he has been favored. Yet it will, no doubt, be a subject of reflection with him, that his connection with Springville has been attended with happy results, and that his ministrations are as highly appreciated there as they can be elsewhere. In fact we are aware that his congregation is much attached to him, and that a separation would be much regretted by them. Under the circumstances, therefore, we hope the Rev. Gentleman will find it in accordance with his duties to remain with his Springville congregation.

CONCERT IN AID OF THE PROTESTANT HOME.—Mr. Hill having generously offered the use of the Music Hall for an entertainment in aid of the funds of the Protestant Home, the ladies connected with that institution intend holding a concert on Tuesday evening next. The performance will be taken part in by most of the leading amateurs of the Town and neighborhood, and the programme is an exceedingly attractive one.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Famine and Pestilence in India during the past summer carried off one hundred thousand victims. Advices say that there was not sufficient medical skill to meet the demands in the different towns and other places.

LONDON SOCIETY for November has been received, and will be found a very interesting number. It can be obtained from Messrs. Copp and Clark, Toronto, and Kidd's Book Store, Peterboro, where all the current Literature can be obtained.

We have been requested to state that the unfortunate man Tye who was drowned in Gull Lake about two weeks ago, was intoxicated at the time. His body was not found at last intelligence to his friends. This is from his relatives who received their information from Mr. Edmunds, the man who was with him at the time of the melancholy accident.

A man pretending to be a Baptist Preacher in Missouri, named Richard Hovey, married a Miss Holliday of Trenton in October. Shortly after he went to Danville and got drunk. On sobering off he left that part of the State; but on enquiry it was found that he had eight wives Hovey is about 40 years of age, and hailed from the State of New York.

BALLOU'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.—We are in receipt of this marvellously cheap and handsome Magazine for December. Its table of contents is varied and charming, embracing the usual fine variety of serials, sketches stories, poems and attractive engravings. The publishers announce in the prospectus for the coming year, a serial story for adults, by the popular Magazine writer, JAMES FRANKLIN FITTS, and a juvenile serial by the young people's favorite, HORATIO ALGER, JR. The price of this periodical is a marvel to everybody—a hundred page first-class illustrated Magazine for fifteen cents, or $1.50 per year, is indeed wonderfully cheap. Elliott, Thomas & Talbot Publishers, Boston, Mass.

RED RIVER.—Intelligence is received from the Red River that the french half breeds not understanding the ins and outs of the annexation of the Territory to the Dominion, and fearing that by Canadian taxation and rule they would lose all they had, they have taken up arms with the intention of intercepting Mr. McDougall, and forcing him to entertain their demands. After enquiry it was found, says the Nor-Wester.—That each of them as took an active part in the uprising were adopting every precaution to intercept Mr. McDougall on his way in. They were fully organized and were sufficiently under military discipline to throw out scouts upon all the approaches to the Settlement from the South; and to post pickets and sentries at night. These fellows had billeted themselves upon the inhabitants at their various places of rendezvous. They were divided into three parties of about twenty or thirty in each. These parties being stationed at Stinking river, Scratching river, and near Pembina severally. Upon Friday last they threw a barricade across the road at Stinking river, and would allow no one to pass until they had undergone an examination. Upon the arrival of this news considerable excitement was manifested, but no steps of any kind have been taken by our people, as they depend upon a call from our authorities.

Col. Dennis at once laid the matter before Dr. Cowan, J. P., the chief magistrate, and counselling with him it was thought best, under the peculiar circumstances at present existing, to endeavour by persuasion rather than by force to remove any further opposition to the survey being proceeded with.

Dr. Cowan, accordingly, with Mr. Goulet as associate, had the leader of the gang brought before them, but found it impossible, after repeated endeavours, to get the party to listen to reason. The aid of Governor McTavish was then sought and rendered, and finally even that of the authorities of St. Boniface, but all without avail.

Thus the matter stands till the arrival of the Lieut-Governor from Canada, who is expected in a few days.

MORAWETZ vs. SMITH.

This was an action of slander brought by J. McMorawetz and his wife against S. Smith, of Otonabee, because of Smith having charged McMartin's wife with milking his (Smith's) cows, and having done so for 8 or 9 years.

James Mathewson sworn.—He knows the plaintiff, McMartin, and also defendant, Smith. Witness lives about a quarter of a mile from McMartin's. Heard Smith talk about McMartin's wife milking his cows. Smith was at witnesses' place at the time. Time suit was then commenced. Witness wanted Smith to settle it, and he said he would settle it if McMartin would pay his (defendant's) costs. Defendant reparked that it was an old trick of McMartin's, and that if he, defendant, gained the case, he would sue McMartin for the better, for he (also witnesses to prove all this, and that if he could he would rent the dogans out of that.

To Mr. Smith.—Said he would rent them out; witness was not a Roman Catholic. Smith had his little daughter with him at the time; did not say how he would rent them out.

W. Lynch sworn—Remembered meeting Mr. Smith in the Spring in Town opposite Mr. Beatty's store. Mr. McMartin was present and others. Mr. Smith said for 3 or 9 years McMartin's wife had been milking his cows, and he could prove it. Mr. Martin asked Mr. Beatty to be witness to the words, but Mr. Beatty said he did not hear them, as he was in the yard; witness never heard anything before.

To Mr. Smith.—Could not say that Mr. Smith was drunk; it was about 3 o'clock in the afternoon; witness lives in Ashburnham; lived once near Mr. Smith's. Mr. Smith came up the street; McMartin first addressed him, and asked him about the milking of the cows. Said nothing about butter, only about milking.

Michael Sheehan sworn.—Heard the defendant accuse McMartin's wife of milking the cows. McMartin asked him if he could prove it; Mr. Smith said he could find a man who would prove it.

To Mr. Smith.—Did not know who commenced. Mr. Smith did not appear to be drunk; defendant said nothing about butter.

Robert Tully sworn.—Was present when the conversation referred to took place; heard the whole, but did not pay much attention. Heard Smith accuse McMartin's wife of milking the cows; seemed a little offensive. Heard McMarun ask Smith if he could prove it; he said his frenchman could. McMartin was violent; heard Mr. McMartin mention Mrs. Smith's name, and Mr. Smith's brother said he could not stand that.

J. C. Crosier sworn—Knows both plaintiff and defendant, and heard the dispute; heard Smith accuse McMartin's wife of milking his cows, and that if the law would allow him he would sue McMartin. Did not hear him say anything about butter, nor about proving it.

James Haggart sworn.—Knew Mr. Smith and had a conversation about the suit and advised him to settle it. Met him at Mr. Calcutt's brewery a second time and advised him to settle it. Said he would if McMartin would pay his costs; said he had got into the trouble and must get out as best he could. Saw him again at Mr. Waddell's store, told him again to settle; did not hear him say anything about butter.

Defendant's counsel held that the charge was not proved. It was allowed to go to the jury; and a verdict was rendered in favor of defendant.

Counsel for plaintiff, Messrs. Edmison, Cameron and O'Reilly; for defendant, Mr. S. Smith.

DUNBAR vs. MILLBURN.

This was a case brought by Sarah Ann Dunbar against one —— Millburn for seduction and breach of promise of marriage. The Court House was crowded during this trial.

The jury rendered a verdict for plaintiff, and $500 damages.

Some of the young lads who gave evidence in this case received a severe reprimand from the Judge for the part they had taken and for their conduct throughout.

MCGREGOR ET. AL. VS. LARUSH.

An action of ejectment. The Plaintiff claimed the east half of 17 in the 2nd concession of Otonabee, under conveyance from heir at law of patentee of crown. The defendant claimed by virtue of an adverse possession for over twenty years. There being some doubt as to the sufficiency of the possession, a verdict was rendered for the defendant, with leave to the plaintiffs to move in term to enter a verdict for themselves. Scott and Cameron for plaintiff; Mr. Dennistoun for defendant.

THE CROWN VS. W. H. BEARDSLEY.

This was an action brought against one Beardsley, who, in company with one Benjamin Crandall, went about selling a patent "waggon brake." Crandall and Beardsley had peddled the brake in the States, and then coming to Canada, Benjamin Crandall had changed one suit, and got it patented here in his own name.

Thomas Bradbara, Merchant, Peterboro, sworn—Knew Benjamin Crandall and W. E. Beardsley. Witness did purchase a share of a self-acting patent wagon brake about the 14th of October last; said the agreement produced was the one he signed. Beardsley and Crandall were acting together; they both assisted in the bargain-making; did not pay anything on the agreement. Witness was asked to buy the right, but would not buy it, as he had already bought it for the Township of Smith. Witness did not promise to give anything or to go with Beardsley and Crandall more than a day or so, if he had time. Never agreed to pay money.

To Mr. Cameron—There was a writing to show what he was to do, but will not swear whether he signed it or not. Went twice with the defendant and Crandall; went to Jackson's and to Deyell's; did not try to induce them to into "break business," but it was talked over; never was present at bargains. Witness paid $100 for the right for the County—$50 in silver, the balance was paid in bills; thought if trouble had not arisen, money could have been made out of the brake; sixty shares were sold in Smith.

To Mr. O'Reily—Went to Deyell's; did not tell him it was a swindle; told Deyell, when he refused to take a right, not to, when he did not wish it; did not give any money on the agreement for the $1000 share, never intended to give any.

To Mr. Cameron—Insisted that a receipt should be given on the back of the agreement; never sold a township right; offered to sell Monaghan to Mr. [illegible] but did not do it.

The Clerk of the Crown [illegible] produced [illegible] Peterboro. The grand jury [illegible] to Wednesday; handed them to constable Crandall, of Orillia, and Constable Bankhead there in the court at Lindsay for collection.

Samuel Jackson sworn—Travelled to Crandall and Beardsley going to lunch and his brother and selling them a one-fifteenth provincial share for $1000, taking their notes for the amount; that they would not have done so but that they saw Mr. Bradburn's name down for a share and as having paid $1000 for each for it; that they had been down to town by invitation to a lobster supper; had several drinks, and finally signed the notes, but were induced wholly because of Mr. Bradburn's name being already in their books as a purchaser, and he being a shrewd business man, led them into it.

Ephriam Jackson's evidence was a reiteration of Samuel's, as to facts, but went more fully into the means used to induce them to buy the share, Mr. Bradburn's name and the drinks having no small share in the work, and Mr. Bradburn appearing to have paid the money down made them think that the adventure would prove a good one.

Mr. James McWilliams was also sworn on this case, as to Beardsley's part in the business.

This ended the evidence.

Mr. Cameron, on behalf of the defendant Beardsley, urged that no false pretence was proved; that Jackson got all he ever was to get, and that if it was a bargain that was his look out.

Mr. O'Riely, for the Crown, urged that the use of Mr. Bradburn's name in the matter constituted a false pretence, as otherwise the Jackson's would not have gone into it.

The Judge ruled that there was no false pretence, nothing more than what is common every day in puffing goods, and in consequence the jury was directed to give a verdict for Beardsley.

This being the last case the Judge remarked that as the jurors had been kept so close and late at work, that they would get pay for Friday, and that the Sheriff, for that purpose, would open the court and pay them.

THE QUEEN VS. CODE, FOR ARSON.

Code is only a lad, and appears to be of weak intellect, and in consequence was acquitted, and the Sheriff was to be directed in reference to getting him into an Asylum

PRISON STATISTICS.

From the last Prison Report we gather the following items:—

The number committed to the common gaols of the Province of Ontario was 5,655.

In eight gaols, the officials provide rations at costs varying from 16 cents to 25 cents. In the other counties the average cost of rations is 12 cents per head.

The expense of prisoners is $100,739.55. The prisoners earned about $700.

In Toronto gaol the cost of rations per head per day is 7½ cts. This is the lowest. In Chatham, L'Original, Pembroke and St. Thomas it is 25 cents—the highest. In some places it is 22 cts. per head, and in not a few, 15 cts. to 20 cts. per head.

Of the 5,655 prisoners, 1,792 were in for "drunk and disorderly;" to which may be added, inmates of houses of ill-fame, 29; keeping of houses of ill-fame, 56; selling liquor without license, 24; and vagrants, 1869; making in all 3,591 connected directly or indirectly with the traffic in liquor.

Of religious denominations—R. C., 2146; Church of England, 1,988; Presbyterians 631; Methodists, 635; other denominations, 285.

Professing to be temperate, 2212; intemperate, 3443.

In Toronto, prisoners earned $632.84; in Ontario, $81.09; in Walkerton, $11.40; in other gaols nothing.

Several of the gaols are reported in a filthy state, some requiring repairs, and in a dilapidated state. The Peterborough gaol is reported "very clean and orderly," and all repairs required attended to. The only change necessary, is a different classification of prisoners. The cost of rations in Peterboro is about as low as in any of the jails, except in Toronto and one or two other places; it is 13 cents per head per day.

The nationalities of the prisoners are—Canada, 2,145; England, 730; Ireland, 1,952; Scotland, 333; U. S., 364; other countries, 96.

The London Asylum it is supposed will cost about at the rate of $500 for every patient that can be accommodated. The total cost of the different asylums is put down at $142,698.25. Dr. Workman reports: The crops raised—hay, 97 tons; green feed from lawn, 140 cart loads; oats, 900 bushels; oat straw, 42 tons; potatoes, 5,417 bushels; mangold wurtzel, 210 tons; field carrots, 14 tons; valued at about $6,000.

From the Malden Lunatic Asylum report The labor performed—2,000 days of 6 hours each, at 50 cents per day. The produce of labor connected with the asylum, $4,962.99.

The Orillia Lunatic Asylum: Patients during the year, 126. The value of the labor connected with this Asylum is not given. We will give an extract from Dr. Workman's report, next week, on the state of the patients.

In the report of the Warden of the Reformatory at Penetanguishene, 170 is given as the average convicts during the year.

From these reports it will be seen how far our prison arrangements fail in coming up to the arrangement of our lunatic asylums. It will also be seen that something ought to be done to enforce as much labor, at least, from prisoners as is performed by unfortunate lunatics. That $100,739 a year should be paid by the industrious and law-abiding portion of the community to maintain the lawless and drunken portion, is enough to demand such a change, as well as compel prisoners to earn their own living while in custody. The Prison Inspector says:—"Enter the corridors of any of our gaols, but more particularly, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Kingston, and those in the large towns or more populous localities, and the first thing that strikes an observer is the utter idleness that prevails throughout the prison. Not the weary, weary, silent idleness consequent to solitary confinement—but the vitiating associated idleness that is so much coveted and sought after by certain criminals and pests of society while at large, and so fully realized when they enter the doors of our common gaols, and from which can be traced all the vicious and demoralizing effects of our Common Gaol system." He further says: "That the labor of criminals can be turned to profitable account, there can be no reasonable doubt. During the past year I visited the Detroit House of Correction, similar to our common gaols. The number of commitments for the last 7 years has been 4,024. The discharged during the 7 years was—current, $97,243.56; which after deducting debits for the first 3 years, of $11,620.14, leaves a balance of clear profits of $85,623.42." Surely we should learn something from our neighbors in this respect.

The report concludes by recommending the erection of Provincial Prisons in a central place where prison labor could be utilized, as in the British Houses of Correction, when a marked improvement in finances and discipline would soon be realized.

TOWN COUNCIL.

No. 13, N. E. corner of Aylmer and Simcoe streets, pump factory.

No. 14, S. E. corner of Aylmer and Hunter streets, Mrs. Tobin's.

No. 15, N. E. corner of Almer and Charlotte streets, M. Lane's.

No. 16, on the South of Hunter street, half way between Chambers' and the Bridge.

No. 17, on the south side of Simcoe street, half way between George and Aylmer streets.

No. 18, North side of Hunter street, half ways between George and Aylmer streets.

No. 19, N. W. corner of Brock and Rabridge streets, near St. Andrew's church.

OLD FRANCIS HINCKS TRADING ON CATHOLIC VOTES.

When commencing last week on the Scandalous proceedings in connection with the election contest at North Renfrew, we gave out extract of a draft framed over the wine shortly afterwards, and which has now become notorious—namely, that the two Knights, Scotsmen and Catholics, sought to buy off opposition by employing a tenor to bear testimony to the position and influence of Mr. Daniel, of the native Catholic vote of the Riding. We would gladly discredit this report, calculated as it is to bring our body into contempt, but the evidence in support of it leaves no room for doubt. Mr. Deacon openly stated, in presence of Hincks and Murray at a public meeting, that he was offered the entire Catholic vote by Hincks on condition of withdrawing his support from Findlay and enabling the former, and naturally read to the meeting a letter from Sir Francis in which the offer was distinctly made

Now, considering that this involved throwing Murray, who is a Catholic, overboard, the proposition was as cool as it was insulting to the body who were to be thus summarily disposed of. A similar offer was made to Mr. Deacon, by the honorable and virtuous Knight the member for Kingston. It is not for a moment to be supposed that the Catholic electors of the Riding consented to an arrangement by which it was proposed to dump them like so many Mexican mummies into the arms of whoever might contribute most to the success of the Mysterious immigrant from the Wigwam Isles. It is probable, on the contrary, that they were not consulted at all, and that it was through the agency of the system of brokerage which obtains among Catholics in certain quarters during elections that Messrs. Hincks and Macdonald were enabled to make an offer so characteristic of them, and insulting to Catholics as a body.

In Ireland there are Judases who do not hesitate to trade in the blood of their fellowmen, and in Ontario we are cursed with a brood similar in character, who, in their eagerness to be patronized to pabble at the public orib, can at all times ready to barter away the honor and independence of their co-religionists, without shame or compunction. These jackals are all scarcely during election times, sleek and courteous, and bristled of hypocritical piety and anxiety for the interests of "Holy Religion," and generally experience a sudden and violent attack of "Brown on the brain." These symptoms subside, however, as soon as the elections are over, and the jackals then contentedly gnaw the bones dropped them from Ministerial tables. We shall always feel it our duty to warn our readers to beware of these vampires. If we are, to-day, unrepresented in either House of Parliament, and are society and politically without that degree of influence in the affairs of the country to which our numbers, wealth, and intelligence entitle us, it may in all fairness be said that they at least contributed to this end.

Hear Mr. Murray feels, in view of the unconsciousness and cavalier manner in which it was proposed to cut him aside, we are not aware; we earnestly hope, however, that some, if not all, of the Catholic electors in North Renfrew will resent the insult put upon them by John A. and his Finance Minister, and teach both one and the other that Catholics are not to be treated as if they had neither brains nor principles. Besides, it must be obvious to all who are not blinded by senseless and suicidal prejudice that it is absolutely necessary to the prosperity of this country that there should be an end to Tory rule in Canada, and that Sir John and Sir Francis should not be permitted less or to guide its destinies. Through bribery both first obtained power; through the same means John A. retained power, and through bribery, glaring and infamous, Hincks now seeks to regain power.

In 1854 the public debt amounted to about $20,000,000—which sum had been accumulating for many years, and which included the expense of all the great public works constructed and owned by the country. But in sixteen years, under the system inaugurated by Sir Francis Hincks, and adhered to and improved on by Sir John A. Macdonald, the debt has become nearly $100,000,000, with little or nothing to show for the increase. The money, in fact, has been expended in bribing electors and elected, until a state of political immorality has been induced that threatens to prove a blight and a drag on the future prosperity of the country. This is progress with a vengeance and affects all alike both Protestant and Catholic. How long will people submit to be deluded by false cries, and pile up burdens to be borne by their own backs by electing to Parliament selfish tricksters, and broken-down hacks deficient in honor and principle, and only bent on securing a share in the general plunder?

"Where the Treasure is," &c.

There have been several serious fires in Canada of late, that of the St. Andrew's Church of Montreal among the number—and a mind properly imbued with the doctrines of the christian religion would naturally seek to express sympathy for so heavy a calamity as the loss of a church.

There is a true saying, that "where the treasure is, there will the heart be." So Sir A. McDonald, caring nothing for the loss of a church, telegraphs as follows respecting the burning of a distillery in Toronto. Sir John's telegram is as follows:—

"Please to assure Messrs Gooderham & Worts of the deep regret that is felt here at the great calamity that has befallen them The great respect in which those gentlemen are universally held has aroused the profound sympathies of the community, and of no one more than yours faithfully"

Sir John has no sympathy for a Christian congregation burnt out, but the moment a whiskey manufactory is destroyed, he coe sympathises more profoundly. Where the Treasure is there will the heart be.

PECUNIARY ACCIDENT.—A daughter of David Campbell, of Bocotia, four years of age, was burned so severely on Friday last that she died in a few hours afterwards. Her father and mother were outside at the time, her little brother only being present, a lad of six years old. The little girl was putting chips into the cooking stove by one of the lid-holes on top, when the flame, catching a loose part of her dress, was allowed to play its fearful ravages before any one was present to rescue her.—Perth Courier.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours. they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "in time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it, by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and acknowledge that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

SWAIN'S WARMER.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronch'al affections. Only fair trial will convince the most sceptical.

A CHANCE.—A writing to a friend says: "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of the Peruvian Syrup removed me from the fangs of the fiend Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few malcontents, who have been refused an invitation to take position at banquets and demonstrations, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that those deserving worth invariably accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or inventions. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has this highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have otherwise leaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a superstition, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified effects of man's genius is three persons, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impenetrable. The malignity of pestilential diseases is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "lancetists arabus," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing observations are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of its great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and to fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has exceeded to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

CANADA LIFE

Have published a Report and not valuation of all its policy and annuity obligations, by an Actuary totally unconnected with it, the Hon. Elisar Wright, of Boston, late Insurance Commissioner for the State of Massachusetts.

It is believed that such a voluntary submission of the Company's position to an eminent and entirely independent Actuary of the Hon. Elisar Wright's well known high character and professional skill, will add to that public satisfaction and confidence which the "Canada Life Company" enjoys.

Copies of Mr. Wright's Report may be had at the Head Office, or at any of the Agencies throughout the Dominion.

Persons who may be assured in the Companies whose condition is unsatisfactory, desiring to join the "Canada Life," will be dealt with upon such terms as are reasonable and fair.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverence combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; it stops the grive, cures to core, and cash in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

A MYSTERY

AT

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shitted,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'

'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them,
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me thus to purchase

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Matchless Boots and Shoes.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Linaments to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues ascribed to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one equal. Beware of Counterfeits.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Brenstown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cameron, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Heavy, of Fergus, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and so now well-known of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh. Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr Bell.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

DR. A. TRASK'S

MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Bingham, of Utica, New York, says:—"I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and am now with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test fair, and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in quieting the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Bolding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Sporadic Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. In the country, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPU

The New Common School Bill.

An Act to amend the Common School Laws of the Province of Ontario.—[Hon. Mr. Cameron.]

Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, enacts as follows:

1. The Office of Local Superintendent of Schools in Townships, Cities, Towns and Villages, is hereby abolished, except as hereinafter provided by this Act.

2. In each County or Union of Counties there shall be one Superintendent of Schools to be called County Superintendent except where there are more than sixty Common Schools in a County or Union of Counties in which case it shall be lawful to appoint an additional County Superintendent for every fifty Common Schools over one hundred, no additional Superintendent.

3. Each City or Town shall be a County for the purposes of this Act, and the Superintendent shall be called the city or town Superintendent, and shall possess all the powers of a County Superintendent in such city or town, except such as relate to investigating and decided on School Trustee election cases; [unto. which now by law devolve on the County Judge.

4. The qualifications of County City and Town Superintendents shall from time to time be prescribed by the Council of Public Instruction, which shall determine the time and manner of examination of candidates for certificates of qualification, and grant certificates of qualification; and no one not holding such certificate of qualification, shall be eligible to be appointed a Superintendent.

5. Each County Council and each Board of Public School Trustees in a city or town shall appoint from among those holding the necessary certificate of qualification one person to be Superintendent of Common Schools in such County, City or Town and in Counties where there are or shall be more than sixty Common Schools, the County Council may appoint two or more persons, according to the number of schools holding such certificates, to be Superintendents, and prescribe and number the territorial limits of each; Provided nevertheless, that any County, City or Town Superintendent shall be subject to dismissal for misconduct or inefficiency, by the Council or Board appointing him, or by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, who shall have authority to fill up the vacancy thus caused by the appointment of a Superintendent from the list of those legally qualified, until the next ensuing meeting of the Council or Board authorized to appoint such Superintendent; provided, likewise, that no Superintendent dismissed shall be reappointed, without the concurrence of the party who has dismissed him; and provided furthermore that in a County where there are two or more County Superintendents, the Council of such County may from time to time change or remove such Superintendents from one circuit of the County to another.

6. Each Superintendent so appointed shall have the oversight of all Common Schools in the Townships and Villages within the County or Union of Counties, or part of the County or Union of Counties for which he shall be appointed, and shall have all the powers in each Municipality within his jurisdiction, and be subject to all the obligations now conferred or imposed by law upon "Local Superintendents," and which are conferred or imposed by the Act, according to such instructions as may be given to him from time to time by the Chief Superintendent of Education.

7. The remuneration of each city or town Superintendent of Schools shall be determined and provided for by the Board appointing him; the remuneration of County Superintendent shall not be less than five dollars per school per annum, to be paid quarterly by the County Council, who shall also determine and provide for the allowance for travelling expenses; provided also that it shall be lawful for the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to direct the payment out of the Consolidated Revenue of a sum not exceeding five dollars per school per annum to each County Superintendent.

8. The County Superintendent shall have authority to decide upon the adequacy and suitableness of school accommodation in conformity with regulations which shall be prepared according to law; and should any School Corporation not provide satisfactory accommodations within six months after they have been notified by the County Superintendent of the inadequacy or unsuitableness of the School accommodation, provided such School Corporation shall not be entitled to share in the Legislative School Grant; Provided always, that in every such case there shall be right of appeal from the decision of the County Superintendent to the Chief Superintendent of Education.

9. Each County and City Council shall appoint a County or City Board of Examiners, for the examination and licensing of Teachers, consisting of the County Superintendent or Superintendents, and two other competent persons whose qualifications shall from time to time be prescribed by the Council of Public Instruction; provided always, that no such County or City Board of Examiners shall exceed the number of five, three of whom shall be a quorum for the transaction of business.

10. The minimum salary of a first class male teacher shall not be less than at the rate of Three hundred dollars per annum, and of a second class male teacher not less than at the rate of Two hundred and fifty dollars per annum and of a third class male teacher not less than at the rate of two hundred dollars per annum. The minimum salary of a first-class female teacher shall not be less than at the rate of two hundred dollars per annum, of a second class female teacher not less than at the rate of one hundred and sixty dollars per annum, and of a third class female teacher not less than at the rate of one hundred and twenty-five dollars per annum; provided also, that all after the word 'salaries' in the eighth clause of the twenty-seventh section of the Consolidated School Act, 22 Vic, chap 64, is hereby repealed.

11. No School section shall be entitled to aid from the appropriation annually voted by the Legislature for special aid to Poor Schools, unless an amount has been levied and collected by taxation within such section, which amount when added to the equal apportionment from the Common School Grant, shall be equal to a rate of five mills or half a cent on the dollar of the assessed value of taxable property, and applied in payment of the Teachers' salary. And every school section in which the minimum salary of the teacher, provided by this Act, would exceed an amount equal to a rate of five mills or a half a cent on the dollar of the assessed value of taxable property in such section in any year, shall be entitled to additional aid from special Legislative Grant, to the extent required to complete the said minimum salary.

12. The Municipal Council of any Township, shall have authority to establish a Township Board of Common School Trustees, as now provided by law, at the request of the majority of the school sections of such Township, expressed at the annual school meeting or at a special school meeting of such sections.

13. No school section shall be formed or re-organized, altered or enlarged, which shall contain less than [illegible] nor more than between the ages of [illegible] years, unless the area of such section shall contain more than four square miles; Provided likewise, that if the Councillors of a Township Council shall refuse or neglect to form the whole of the Township or union of Townships under their jurisdiction into school sections (except such parts as are included in union school sections) the members so refusing or neglecting shall each be fined not less than five or more than twenty dollars for each offence, on the complaint of any ratepayer, before a magistrate and the amount of such fine or fines shall be added to the School Fund for the Common School purposes of the Township or union of Townships.

14. The majority of the Trustees, or any three ratepayers of a School Section, shall have the right of appeal or complaint to their County Council against any by-law or resolution which has been passed or may be passed by their Township Council for the formation or alteration of their School Section; and it may and shall be lawful for such County Council to appoint a Committee of not more than five or less than three competent persons (one of whom shall be a County Superintendent, and a majority of whom shall form a quorum) to investigate the matter of such appeal or complaint, and confirm or disallow the by-law or resolution complained of; and on the representation and petition of the majority of the Trustees or rate-payers of two or more School Sections in a Township present at special meetings called for that purpose, the County Council shall have authority to appoint a Committee of not less than five competent persons, (of whom a County Superintendent shall be one, and a majority of whom shall form a quorum) to revise and alter the boundaries of the School Sections of such Township, as far as such committee shall judge expedient; no such committee shall be competent to act on either of the Committees mentioned in this clause of this Act, who was a member of the Township Council that passed the By-law or resolution complained of; and provided also, that the alterations made in the boundaries of any School Section, by such committee, shall not take effect before the end of the year during which they shall be made, and of which alterations due notice shall be given by the Superintendent to the Clerk of the Township, and to the Trustees of the School Sections concerned.

15. On the selection of land as provided by law for a school site, for the erection of a school house and necessary buildings, or for enlarging school premises, if the owner of such land shall refuse to sell the same, or shall demand therefor a price deemed unreasonable by the Trustees, the proprietor of such land and the Trustees shall each forthwith select an arbitrator; and the arbitrators thus chosen, and the County Superintendent, or any two of them, shall appraise the damages to the owner of such land, and upon the tender of payment of the amount of such damages to the owner by the School Trustees, the land shall be taken, and used for the purpose aforesaid.

16. On the formation or alteration of a Union School Section or Division, under the authority of the fifth section of the School Law Amendment Act of eighteen hundred and sixty, it shall be the duty of the County Superintendent concerned, forthwith to transmit a copy of the resolution, by which the formation or alteration was made to the Clerk of the Municipality affected by such resolution; provided also that it shall be competent for any County Superintendent to call a meeting of the parties authorized to form and alter Union School Sections, and it shall be lawful for the Trustees of any Union School Section to fix and determine what portion of the amount to be raised in any such section for the purposes thereof, shall be levied and raised in the part or parts of such section in the different municipalities out of which the union is formed, notwithstanding any law requiring rates to be levied equally on all real and personal property.

17. Should such Clerks neglect or refuse to prepare and furnish the map of the School Divisions of his Municipality, as required by the forty-ninth section of the Consolidated School Act; he shall render himself liable to a penalty not exceeding ten dollars, to be recovered before a magistrate for the school purposes of the municipality, at the instance of any ratepayer thereof.

18. All the Common Schools shall be Free Schools; and the Trustees of School Sections, or Township Councils, and the Municipal Councils of cities, towns and villages, shall, in the manner now provided by law, levy and collect a rate upon all the taxable property of the School Division or Municipality, to defray the expenses of such Schools, as determined by the trustees thereof.

19. Every child, from the age of seven to twelve years, inclusive, shall have the right to attend some school for six months in each year; and any parent or guardian who does not provide that each child under his care shall attend some school, as thus of right declared, shall be subject to the penalties hereinafter provided by this Act; provided always, that the absolute right of selecting either a public or private school, for the attendance of any child, shall be with the parent or guardian of such child.

20. It shall be competent for the Police Magistrate of any city or town, and for any Magistrate in any village, or township, or town, where there is no Police Magistrate, to investigate and decide upon any complaint made by the Trustees or any person authorized by them, against any parent or guardian for the violation of the foregoing clause of the Act, and to impose a fine not exceeding dollars, and imprisonment until paid, for the first wilful offence, and double that penalty for each subsequent offence, which fine and penalty shall be enforced as provided in the hundred and fortieth section of the Consolidated School Act; provided always, that it shall be the duty of such Magistrate to ascertain, so far as may be, the circumstances of any party complained of, and whether such alleged violation has been wilful, or has been caused by extreme poverty, or too great a distance from any school, or the child is being otherwise adequately, and in either of the latter cases the magistrate shall not award punishment but shall report the circumstances to the Trustees of the division in which the offence has occurred.

21. If a parent or guardian refuses or neglects to procure the requisite text-book or text-books for his child, the Trustees shall authorize the purchase of the same, and add the amount, together with fifty per cent to defray expenses, to the school rates of such parent or guardian, unless the Trustees shall judge it expedient to exempt such parent or guardian from the payment of such rate on the ground of indigence, as authorized by the thirteenth clause of the twenty-seventh section of the Consolidated School Act, 22 Vic. chap. 64.

22. The Trustees of any School Section or Municipality shall have the same authority [illegible] provided aforesaid.

23. The report of the School Trustees required by law to be laid before the general annual meeting, shall include a summary of their proceedings and state of the school during the year, together with a detailed statement of receipts and expenditure, signed by either or both of the Trustees and Auditors of the section, and in case of difference of opinion between the Auditors on any matter in the accounts, it shall be referred to and decided by the County Superintendent.

24. Should the Secretary of a Trustee Corporation neglect or refuse at any time to give notice of a School Trustee meeting, it shall be lawful for any Trustee to do so, by giving notice of such meeting to his colleagues.

25. All moneys collected in any School Section by the Trustee Corporation shall be paid into the hands of the Secretary-Treasurer thereof; and should the Trustees refuse or neglect to take proper security from such Secretary-Treasurer, they shall be held to be personally responsible for such moneys; and the provisions of the one hundred and thirty-seventh section of the Consolidated School Act, shall apply to them.

26. Any chairman of a School meeting, who may be selected School Trustee at such meeting, shall make the declaration of office now required of Trustees by law in presence of the Secretary of such meeting.

27. Should the majority of the School Trustees, or the majority of a Public School meeting, neglect or refuse, in a case of difference in regard to a school site, to appoint an arbitrator, as provided in the thirtieth section of the Consolidated School Act, it shall be competent for the County Superintendent, with the Arbitrator appointed, to meet and determine the matter, and the County Superintendent shall have a second or casting vote in case they should not agree.

28. In matters of difference between Trustees and Teachers authorized and required by the 84th, 85th, and 86th and 87th sections of the Consolidated School Act, 22 Vic., chap. 64, and the ninth section of the Grammar School Improvement Act of 1865, 29th Vic., chap. 23, to be by Arbitration, shall hereafter be brought and decided in the Division Court by the Judge of the County Court in each County, and the said clauses of the said Acts are hereby repealed; Provided always, that the decision of any County Judge in such cases may be appealed from as provided in the hundred and eighth and following clauses of the said Consolidated Common School Act.

30. Any Division Court Judge, receiving any intimation of appeal from his decision, under the authority of the one hundred and eighth, and five following sections of the Consolidated School Act, shall thereupon certify under his hand to the Chief Superintendent of Education, the statement of claim and other proceedings in the case, together with the evidence and his own judgment thereon, and all objections made thereto.

31. The summer vacations of all the Public Schools shall be from the 15th of July to the 15th of August, inclusive.

32. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, as far as they shall affect this Act, but not to any greater extent, are hereby repealed.

A preacher not long since, discovering in the boys in New Hampshire State Reform School, upon the fact that the good were respected while the bad were shunned, attempted to illustrate by saying:—"Now, boys, when I walk on the street I speak to some and not to others; what now makes the difference?" supposing of course, they would say, "because some are good and some bad;" but he was much astonished to hear one little fellow sing out, "because some are rich and some are poor."

At Ledbury, England, while the rector, Mr Jackson, was delivering his sermon on a recent Sunday a young woman walked up the aisle, and halting directly in front of him, held up a child and loudly said: "It is Mr Jackson's." Mr. J. it is stated, was somewhat "agitated," and the law will agitate him still more.

The women of Turkey are beginning to take an interest in politics, and to read a Revolution of their own. The fact is, that the traditional notion that these women are mere slaves, who dare not say that their souls are their own, is one of many popular delusions.

A dairyman was awakened by a wag in the night with the announcement that his best cow was choking. He forthwith jumped up to save the life of Brummie, to find he found a turnip sticking in the mouth of the pump.

To compensate him for the loss of his kind father's society, the British Government allows King Thedore's son $6,000 per year.

There are now in this country about seven hundred champion billiard players, and not one single champion wood-chopper.

Brigham Young charges ten dollars for divorcing a couple and all he says is, pointing to the women: "Now, you just cut."

Freedom of speech is now allowed in France, if the Frenchman don't say any thing!

An altar in a New York Church, just completed, cost sixty thousand dollars.

THE SARSAPARILLA REGIONS OF YUCATAN.—The Mayas are a race of people who date back from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of its peculiarities which Stephens and Catherwood, the great explorers, Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla roots. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the gold hunters furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of these who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these hunting Indians, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA lately called at Rome in an instance of the assistance of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large committees of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. Peterboro, October 26, 1869. 45

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Hall, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Kanoe, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the system, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshoosen Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoosen Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never supposed to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a part of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and in only one instance do I see, I have only to say try the Shoshoosen Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

HENRY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEBB, J. P. Co.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoosen Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glow and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a party sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as has this remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. When adapted to subdue forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for those.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As it is same in fact, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is never injurious nor painful. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is sustained by the many testimonials we receive of the most decisive character, of obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed. Those formerly persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by using the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy action.

For Sick Headache and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

PRICE, $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Colby's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical motor used in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "La Bel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 15th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed.] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Sickle's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

CANADIAN PATRIOTIC SONG.

Let other tongues, in other lands,
Long vaunt their claims to glory,
And chant, in triumph of the past,
Content to live in story;
Though bursting as torrents hills,
No ivy crested towers,
What part can match thy glorious youth,
Fair Canada of ours?

We love these fireside scenes bliss,
Where Britain's memories cluster,
That quicken through our veins;
From Egbert down to Victor,
Proud Saxon's fame, old Erin's name,
And haughty Albion's powers,
Exhibit their matchless lustre on
This Canada of ours!

Long may our country flourish, then,
A goodly land and free!
Where Ceit and Saxon, hand and hand,
Hold sway from sea to sea.
Strong hearts shall guard our cherished home,
When darkest danger lowers,
And with our life-blood we'll defend
This Canada of ours.

CHAPTER VI.

CLOTILDE'S LOVE.

'Come, Roland,' said she, 'I abuse your good-nature. You may go and see your horses; and, after all, that cigar—oh! it is not disagreeable, but it goes to my brain, it intoxicates me. Go, my friend, I give you twenty minutes, not another one. You understand?'

Amazed at this show of affection, the young heroes pressed his wife's hand to his lips and went out.

As soon as he had gone, Gendrax rose. Trying to appear calm, but in vain, for his voice trembled with anger, he expressed his distaste for the scene which had just transpired.

'Oh!' said Clotilde, 'do not heed your Olympian brows; it is not worth while, I assure you. As for this scene, I will explain it in you in a word, a word that has burned upon my lips a great while; but better late than never.'

She sat erect upon the sofa, looked him in the face, and accenting her words with sombre energy.

'I do not desire your attentions,' said she. 'Do you understand?'

Gendrax stood for a moment motionless then as if struck by a pistol-shot, turned abruptly and staggered. By a superhuman effort of the will, he regained his self-possession, took a few steps and returned toward Clotilde, who, still reclining on the sofa, but with rigid form and head erect, followed his movements with a pitiless eye.

'An insult,' said he coldly, 'is not an explanation. What has happened? Why do you no longer like me?'

'Why?' she replied with the same harsh and violent tone. 'Because I never liked you. Because no woman will ever love you. Because, with all your science, you have neither heart nor soul, nor mind, nor any thing which could make of a woman's love a generous dream, an enthusiasm, a poem, a religion! No, God be thanked! I never loved you. I only loved in you the shadow of your friend—of your friend, whom in younger days I did love. And what I tell you now has been in my heart from the first hour of our acquaintance.—And yet, you believed that you had conquered me, that you had fascinated me, that you were my lord and master. Poor man! you see how much I fear you. Enough. I will say no more. I think you understand me now; and whether you understand or not, is no great matter. The only matter now is, to end all this. Let us have done! Leave me, and release my sight of you forever, for I simply loathe you.'

She reclined again upon the sofa.

Gendrax departed. On the way to the nearest railway station, he stopped from time to time and raised his hand to his forehead; he seemed to feel the earth trembling beneath his feet. It was eleven o'clock when he reached his house. He entered his laboratory and flung himself into a chair; then after a moment, as if quiet was insupportable, he rose and walked with slow and regular steps about the large apartment. The beating of his temples resounded in his ears like a tocsin. All the sounds of chaos filled his brain. In this brutal awakening, this irremediable fall from the heights to which his pride had mounted, he sought confusedly for some stay. He found none. His science, his books, his glory, even his noble poverty seemed hateful to him. Without himself there was no aid, no consolation, no hope—a void! He would have wept, but in his withered soul no spring was left from which a tear could flow. He walked on and on, like a spectre, till the first blush of dawn; till daylight, whitening the windows, made his night-scene more poignantly and more hopelessly real; till the time approached when he must commence life again with this shame on his forehead and this wound within his heart; he could not endure it.—The thought of madness passed through his brain. He hurriedly opened a closet in the wall, seized a vial filled with brown liquid, and emptied it at a draught. Then he recommenced his walk with mournful gravity, and his steps grew heavier and more slow. All at once he stopped, threw up his arms convulsively, and fell upon the floor. At the sound of his fall, some people of the house came in. They carried him to bed, and a physician was sent for. After two hours of delirious stupor, he awoke; and had strength enough to dictate the despatch to Raoul.

Raoul arrived in the evening of the same day, and went at once to the house of Gendrax. He ascended the staircase without meeting a soul. The chamber of the servant was a sort of cloistered cell; a little lamp feebly illuminated it.

An old woman was reading in a corner. Gendrax was lying upon a small iron bedstead against the whitewashed wall. His black hair was thrown backward, exposing his broad forehead of an ivory paleness. A cadaverous shadow hung about his mouth and lit up his eagle eyes as he perceived Raoul. He painfully extended his hand.

'Ah!' said he with a deep voice, 'I am very glad to have seen you again.'

'Good God!' cried Raoul, 'what has happened? How long have you been ill? Gendrax mentioned to the old woman who watched him; she left the chamber. He replied with his finger to the empty vial standing near the lamp. Raoul hastily looked at it, and his features painfully contracted. He drew near the bed and looked fixedly at Gendrax.

'Clotilde?' said he.

'Yes,' said Gendrax.

And after a pause he added:

'The last weakness of my life, and the last!'

'Ah! unhappy man!' cried Raoul; 'but if you have held out so long there may be hope; option is not always fatal. Where is the doctor? What does he say?'

'I am the doctor. He says the nervous system is destroyed, and the case is hopeless. I am now but matter in process of transformation.'

'But you may be deceived?' cried Raoul distractedly. 'Let me call in some one; who do you wish?'

'No one, it is quite useless, don't worry me; sit down.'

Monsieur de Chalys fell into a chair at the bedside.

'Do you suffer much, my friend?' said he.

'Very much. I made a mistake—the dose was too large; but I was mad.'

After a moment a gleam of irony flickered about the thin lips of Gendrax.

'And you,' said he with a hoarse voice, 'you came at noon they say?'

'My friend,' said Raoul, 'I beg of you—'

There was a long silence, during which no sound was heard save the hissing respiration of the sick man and the ticking of a watch upon the table. Gendrax's eyes were fixed persistently upon those of Raoul, and seemed to express a painful disquiet.

'Do you desire any thing, Louis?, said Raoul, stooping over him.

'Why don't you weep?'

'My friend! I am in a frightful dream. I am terrified.'

'He does not weep!' murmured Gendrax. After another pause he raised his voice and asked:

'What time is it?'

'Nearly midnight.'

'What day?'

'Thursday.'

Give me your hand quick!'

Raoul rose quickly and took his hand.

'Louis,' said he, 'have you nothing to say to me? Is there nothing to trouble you Are you quite master of your thoughts at this terrible moment? Are you sure? Are you certian what you are—whither you are going?'

Where I am going—"

A frightful smile parted the lips of Gendrax; he half rose on his bed, quickly took his hand from Raoul's, and pointing to the ground with a gesture of savage energy, answered:

'There!'

His hand remained hanging by the bed side, his eyes glared in their orbits, and his lifeless head fell back upon the pillow. Raoul, after a moment of silent contemplation, covered his face with his hands, and the tears trickled between his convulsed fingers. Gendrax could not see them now.

Two days after the funeral of Gendrax took place in the church of saint Sulpice with a mingling of pomp and austerity that recalled both the deserved fame and the honorable poverty of the young savant.

As Raoul entered the church, he perceived in one corner a woman dressed in black, whose youth and elegance struck him, he felt a shudder in his veins. It was indeed Clotilde. Moved by that taste for violet and dramatic emotions common to women of her kind, or perhaps by a secret feeling of remorse and pity, she had sought to witness this spectacle. She was audibly sobbing beneath her veil. Her tears were sincere, but she wept more for herself than for the victim. Her destiny seemed to be tinted by the lugubrious light and the lurid flames which filled the church. She was terrified at the vision of her future. She recalled with emotion the happy scenes of her childhood, the forests and the fields of Ferias, the peace she had left behind her there. But among these recollections was one that suddenly rose up before her and clung to her with strange persistence. It was the vision of crazy Feray, stretched upon the pavement of the courtyard of Ferias, shaking at her the blood-stained gown given her had long about him, and with mute gesture, like one of the tragic prophetesses of Macbeth, holding out before her a vague menace of royalty and woe.

On the morning of the third day, Monsieur de Chalys seated himself in a rail-carriage, and took the road to Ferias.

VII.

THE SWAN.

It was not without hesitation that the Count de Chalys decided to return to Ferias. His short stay in Paris and the events that had marked it seemed to have broken the charms which the pure and delicate hand of Sibylle had been weaving about him for the last few months. He had, as it were, awakened from his dream, and he now saw in it such foolish childishness, that he wondered it had so long beguiled him. The gloomy disposition of mind was heightened during his journey.

Contact with actual life, with its sorrows and its sins, had plunged his heart anew into all the discouragement and irony of skepticism. The brutal and tearless death of Gendrax had thrust him back into materialism. The scrupulous and hesitating love of Sibylle strangely pained.—When he arrived toward evening at the parsonage, the Abbe Renaud, to whom he had written the day before to announce his return, informed him that he was expected by the family of Ferias at dinner. He retained the carriage that brought him from the station, and was driven to the chateau. The affectionate and almost fatherly welcome he met with could not overcome the painful chill at the fall of his heart. His countenance and accent betrayed it; but the sad event that had called him to Paris and the badges of mourning he wore were a sufficient explanation for the marquis and marchioness: Sibylle was more clear sighted. There had been in her first glance, when she extended her hand to Monsieur de Chalys, an expression of confidence certainty, which surprised and embarrassed him. In his excessively delicate and sensitive nature, tact and presentiment bordered on divination. She observed him closely during dinner while the mute confidences of society. She noticed that he left the ball, contrary to his usual habit, at the hour of prayer, as if to avoid being pressed. But during the remainder of the evening she fulfilled the part of mistress of the house with her usual calmness, though she was very pale. She spoke somewhat at the piano, prepared the tea, and trifled apparently drawings at the end of the table, under the shadow of her blonde ringlets, while exchanging with Monsieur de Chalys polite indifferent and trivial words.

It was half-past ten o'clock when she withdrew. As he was leaving the chateau, he stopped upon the platform of the steps as if struck by the spectacle that lay before his eyes. The night though cold, was beautiful and clear. A slender silver crescent was gliding through the deep vault of heaven, and descending behind the dark tree-tops, it still shed a feeble light upon the enclosure of the courtyard, and a little beyond its pale rays feebly shimmered on the hothouse-roofs, upon the waters of the little lake, and the snowy plumage of a sleeping swan. It was like an enchanted scene of peace and silence.

Raoul gazed upon it for an instant, and drew a heavy sigh. A rustling sound made him turn, and he saw Mademoiselle de Ferias standing beside him.

'You are sad, monsieur,' said she, with that deep, sonorous accent which made her voice so seductive.

'Why should I not be, mademoiselle?' he replied. 'I have received a cruel blow.'

'Doubtless; but there is something more is there not?' Be true!'

He cast down his eyes, hesitated, then said, raising his head:

'I would like to talk with you, Mademoiselle Sibylle.'

'Now?'

'Now.'

She seemed to hesitate, then suddenly answered:

'Wait for me?'

She entered the vestibule, and returned a moment after. She had thrown over her shoulders a short white mantle edged with blue, with a hood which fell over her forehead. She took Raoul's arm; they silently descended the steps and passed silently through the courtyard in the direction of the park. As they entered the sombre avenue that lay before the courtyard-gate, streaked here and there with bands of silvery light, Raoul raised his voice, and speaking with bitterness hardly disguised,

'Mademoiselle,' he said, 'I have just passed through one of those stern hours which recall a man to reality and duty. I beg you then to reveal to me the secret of your thought. I beg you to tell me if the honor of obtaining your hand will be denied me so long as I shall not have received from on high that grace which I am wanting in, and in which I fear I shall be always wanting. In this case, I avow to you I will not wait before abandoning a hopeless attachment, until I shall have lost what little courage and dignity I still have left?'

Sibylle had stopped abruptly.

'I felt it!' she murmured in a low voice.

Without seeming to hear her, Raoul continued with the same bitterness:

'Yes, henceforward I will renounce an attempt which I look upon as useless, as foolish. The time for illusions has gone. Your belief never will be mine. So long as I shall live, doubt will be mingled with my very being and fill my veins. That is the simple truth.'

'I beg pardon, monsieur,' said Mademoiselle de Ferias in a voice scarcely distinct, 'but this language is an unexpected after what you told me so few days ago, on this very place, that before replying I need to collect my thoughts.'

Raoul bowed. She walked beside him for some time in silence. They reached, at the extremity of the avenue, the bright starlight of a clearing. Sibylle, as if astonished, raised her face toward the firmament glistening with stars, and in this movement her countenance, disengaged from the shadow of the hood, seemed to Raoul lighted by a strange transparent paleness.

'You are suffering?' he asked, quickly drawing near her.

She smiled.

'A little,' said she.

And raising her finger to heaven, she said:

'I have fallen from such a height!

All at once she seemed to totter. He sprang to support her; she waved him back with tranquil grace.

'Only give me your arm,' said she.

They entered an adjoining path.

'Then in my answer,' said she after a pause. 'I shall be faithful to my word.—I shall never be the wife of a man who does not believe, who does not pray, who has no other God than matter, no other hope than annihilation. I should be useful if I should accept such a union, since, as I could find no happiness in it, I could bring none to it. We must then separate, but I beseech you, let us not separate with words of anger and bitterness. Let the remembrance of this last hour be sweet to both of us. I ask it above all for me. I shall have only two romances in my life. I beg you, do not make its last page bitter. I assure you I am not without courage, and in spite of the sorrow I feel, I am quite capable of enjoying the charm of the moment which remains to me, even though it should be the last of my life, as it is the last of my happiness.'

He answered only by a gentle pressure of his arm.

For some moments they walked along in silence.

'Talk to me, my friend,' she continued; 'talk to me as you used to, as if we were to be together to-morrow and always.'

'I cannot, Sibylle!'

'Tell me that, notwithstanding all, my remembrance will be dear to you.'

'Yes, very dear.'

'Then will be regret to me. I shall never see again a summer sky, or a calm night, without thinking of you, without blessing you!'

'Blessing me?' said Raoul bitterly.

'Yes, blessing you! You have brought to my life some painful hours, it is true, but I owe to you also the noblest emotions, the deepest joys, that can fetch the heart of a woman and of a Christian. What a happy evening was that which preceded your sad departure! What a moment was that when I felt your heart opening and God descending into it! What you said on that evening went so just, so noble, so worthy of you! I have often thought of it since, and feel I need my confidence strengthened on my faith—doubt I do not comprehend. The name of God is written for me so visibly upon every blade of grass, upon every leaf, upon every star—in the very depths of the unfathomable, of light and of the fragrance, I hear His voice so clearly, that my heart bounds just as day after day and my lips breathe out. But what you said struck me. How I would have loved to talk often with you upon those lofty subjects! I did not dare. I am more a woman than you think, too much perhaps. I dreaded lest I might please you less, lest I might lose in your eyes a little of the charm that had touched you, lest I might seem a pedant and a preacher. Can I not now, in this last hour at least, give way to that weakness of my heart without fearing to appear to you, when you shall think of me in the future, under a less pleasing and attractive form. Do not fear?'

During this strange dialogue, they had continued to advance into the interior of the forest, sometimes traversing the thick shade of the forest-trees, and sometimes the bright starlight of the clearings.—Raoul perceived that this walk was not directed by chance, but that Sibylle was leading him with careful choice to each one of the spots she had best loved. She seemed to have recovered all her strength.—She walked without fatigue, with the elegant, supple, and gliding gait, which was her habitual carriage. Nevertheless, he looked at her at intervals with anxiety, astonished that he did not perceive in her language any trace of her natural vivacity and impetuous dignity. Her voice was wonderfully calm and sweet. Raoul felt that this frail creature possessed a principle of will and energy superior to the violent passions by which he was himself agitated, and which recognized its mastery and were stilled. His mind was inexpressibly disturbed; he allowed himself to be guided without determination, without force, almost without thought, as if in a dream, by the hand of the child.

'Do you remember your words, my friend?' she exhibited. 'There are beings,' said you, 'there are hearts, that it is possible, that it seems monstrous to give up to annihilation.' That seems so true, so dazzlingly true. Since our bodies, when death claims them, only change in form, since matter is immortal, since our most fragile and most wretched part must live eternally, how is it possible to conceive that our noblest thoughts, our noblest sentiments, our devotion, our charity, our faith, our heavenly raptures, our loves, our sufferings, our tears, that all this must perish with us and leave no trace, find no future, no refuge, no justice? So all, will survive except what is pure, all will be eternal except the good and the noble, except all that redeems our lives, all that adorns this earth, all that pleases heaven. Oh! no! there is—you have said it—there is a pure source whence our souls descend and whether they ascend, like the angels in Jacob's vision. I love this image. It is sweet to surround death with these smiling fancies—above all, when one has lost those dearly loved. You lost your mother in early youth, did you not, my friend?'

'Yes, quite young.'

Sibylle ceased speaking. She had stopped upon a level clearing before which extended a view of terraced hills and deep ravines winding a sinuous course towards the sun At the bottom of the marshy valleys and creeping up the hillsides floated transparent ocean vapors which the people of country poetically call 'Dames Blanches.' Pierced by the starry rays, they shed over the dim outlines of the wild landscape an aerial vagueness and a pale serenity that hardly seemed terrestrial. Mademoiselle de Ferias, resting on Raoul's arm, gazed for a long time upon this spectacle with deep attention. All at once she seemed to be roused from her abstraction and resumed her walk.

'Let us go,' said she.

They now entered a part of the forest where the shade was deepest. Sibylle was walking with a quick step; they descended a steep path and suddenly found themselves upon the level of a narrow clearing. The dark profile of a high and steep rock, like the fragment of a broken wall, rose before them. Raoul trembled. He recognized the Fairy's Rock, the little fountain which received its trickling waters, and the wild valley through which flowed the brook of Ferias, whose distant windings were marked by a line of mist. Some broken rays of starlight piercing through the shade gently sparkled in the water of the basin, and the heavy drops, splashing one by one upon its surface, made a clear, and sound that seemed to add to the silence of this solitude.

Sibylle looked upon all these objects with a lingering gaze.

'It is here,' said she at last in a low voice, 'that I wished do bid you farewell, Raoul. You will forgive this weakness, will you not? I am such a child with all my rescue. When I saw you there for the first time—do you recollect it?—it was in spring-time, and under a cloudy sun; now it is autumn and it is night!'

She pronounced these words with a sort of bewilderment and stopped abruptly, then turned away, sprang to the rock, and burying her face among the vines and the wet mosses which covered its sides, sobbed bitterly.

Raoul motionless and as if entranced, gazed on the graceful phantom who was weeping in the shade, and seemed now more than ever the melancholy genius of the solitary place; then he advanced slowly, and standing erect at a few steps from the young girl.

'Sibylle!' said he with a low and trembling voice. 'Ah! how cruel is the part you are acting toward me and toward yourself? What a crime are you committing in the name of your God and of your virtue! We love one another as never two Blame creatures have loved before! You are weeping, and my heart is breaking.—Weigh, then, nothing forbids our union, happiness is within our grasp, and you repel it, You could not leave it! Why? You thinky (incomprehensible) unhappy child!'

'Raoul!' said she, recovering at once the wild energy of her accents, 'I reject that happiness because it would be a lie, because one should never be truly united, because I wish to be loved as I love, and because nothing can endure which has not its foundation there!' And she pointed toward the sky.

'Ah! I know,' she continued with more gentleness, 'I know that you suffer and I would on my knees beg pardon for the pain I give you, but you see I too am suffering bitterly, less than you, I believe, for I have a hope of finding you again. Yes, a firm hope, Raoul, a certain hope!—Adieu!'

Raoul let fall his head into the hand she extended to him, and she hastily quitted him.

After she had gone a short distance, he saw her stop and lean against one of the trees beside the path.

'I cannot see!' he heard he murmur.

He hastened to her.

'Take my arm. Fear nothing for me; not a word more, not a prayer. You must go home, and cannot go alone.'

He felt her trembling under her mantle, which was damp with the dews of night.

She did not speak, but leaned heavily upon his arm, and painfully climbed the winding path behind the rock. Little by little she seemed to grow stronger. She her head drooped listlessly, and she carelessly abandoned herself to the arm that was guiding her.

After a walk of a quarter of an hour, Raoul stopped.

This seemed to rouse her from her stupor. She cast a timid and astonished look about her. 'I deserve!' said she, 'I am recognize nothing—I see nothing—I cannot tell where I am! This mist conceals everything. Are you sure you are in the right path?'

'Up to this moment I thought so,' replied Raoul, 'but now I grow I am doubtful. I can see nothing at a few steps distance.'

In fact, as it often happens toward midnight in this climate and at this season, the vapor from the surrounding marshes had suddenly risen. At first they wound like flakes of frost around the branches and twigs, and soon occupied the whole interior of the forest. They gave to the underbrush of the more open parts of the forest fantastic forms, and in the thick shadow of the heavy timber formed a wall of impenetrable darkness.

Mademoiselle de Ferias seemed to recover all her self possession under the impression of real life. She questioned Raoul as to the direction he had taken, hesitated and reflected, and then kept on resolutely in the same path. After a few steps, she fancied she was going still further astray, and thought it better to return to the Fairy's Rock, hoping to find her way more easily with this point of departure. They endeavored to retrace their steps, and ended by losing themselves altogether. Their minds were under the influence of that strange bewilderment we feel when no longer able to rely upon our natural guides. From some vague reminiscence Sibylle discovered that they had passed the limits of the park, and had entered the forest beyond it, whose last trees crowned the summit of a lofty cliff, two leagues distant from the chateau.

The walked on with feverish resolution, having determined to keep straight forward in the path they were following. At every few steps they came upon the trunk of a fallen tree, or became entangled in low brambles. They mounted and descended steep declivities, and sometimes crossed wide, marshy ravines where their feet sank under the muddy moss. At intervals they stopped for a brief consultation. Exclamations of discouragement, syllables of pain, now and then escaped from Sibylle's lips.

'My God! how can I punished! What will they think? Dear hearts that love me so, and whom I had forgotten! how anxious must they be!'

She sat down a moment shivering, for her strength was exhausted, then rose again.

'Come!' she said, and went bravely on.

Raoul was in despair, and gloomily silent. He assisted Sibylle with constantly energy, and cared for her with the watchfulness and tenderness of a mother. Once, in spite of her resistance, he lifted her like a child and carried her in his arms across a quagmire, into which he sank up to his knees.

They had now been wandering for two long hours, lost in the forest, the fog, and the night. At last, as they emerged from a deep valley, a high wooded hill, like an amphitheatre, showed its dim outline before them. From the peculiar formation of the landscape, both became aware that their wild walk had brought them to the most distant limit of the forest upon the back of the cliff.

Although still at a great distance from the chateau, the proximity of the sombre avenues them a well-known road, Reanimated by this discovery, Sibylle gayly and with rapid steps clambered up the steep declivity, but as she reached its summit and quitted the dark shade of the forest, her strength failed her and she sank fainting upon Raoul's breast. He gently called her name.

She made no answer. While he supported her with all the strength he had left, he gazed wildly about him with bewildered eyes. All at once his countenance brightened; on the summit of the cliff not far off, he discerned a sort of shed, whose few and dilapidated thatched roof he recognized at once; a light glimmered

'Where are we?' she asked wildly.

'With your friend Jacques Feray,' said Raoul with a quivering glance. 'Have no fear! Be quiet! I will send to the chateau in a few minutes, an team as the fog shall have cleared away. Lie down and try to sleep. I will watch over you.'

'Yes,' she said, 'I am very weak.'

And catching the eager and loving eyes of Jacques Feray.

'Good evening, Jacques,' she said feebly. 'Then turning towards the fire she added:

'How cold I am! how good the fire is!'

Her eyes closed, her head sank heavily upon the bolstered pillow, and she fell asleep.

Raoul motioned to Jacques to make no noise.

Jacques, mistaking his gestures for an order to leave the hut, went out on tip-toe and laid down upon the turf at a distance from the shed. Soon, in a sweet and melodious voice, he began one of the plaintive songs he used to sing on board ship when he was a sailor, and had often requested beside the cradle of his little girl. Seated on a stone by Sibylle's side, and stooping over her Raoul listened with emotion to the monotonous song, made inexpressibly tender by the place and hour. From time to time he cast an uneasy glance upon the cliff through the open door. He was glad to see the mist grow thinner. By the firelight he wrote hastily a few lines upon one of the pages of his pocket-book, informing Monsieur de Ferine of the events of the night, and cautiously explaining Sibylle's condition; then left the hut and gave the note to Jacques Feray, charging him to take it to the chateau as quickly as possible. Jacques set off at once in his usual rapid and crazy run.

Raoul again entered the hut. His deep garments made him shiver. He sat down upon a stool, Jacques Feray's single article of furniture. Sibylle still slept profoundly. Her countenance, illumined from time to time by the bright blaze, and gracefully set off by the folds of her white mantle, seemed to smile, but showed deep traces of the emotions and fatigues of this cruel night. A dark circle surrounded her closed eyes, her sunny paleness was now and then overspread by flushes of bright color, and her hands, crossed upon her bosom, rose and fell with her quick breathing.

NORTH WEST.

Advices from the West are very discouraging. Mr. McDougall is in a rather unpleasant fix.

The half-breeds and whites are determined to give the new Governor as much annoyance as possible. They have refused to admit him into the Territory, and he has taken up his abode on American soil, where he awaits the further action of the Government. The rebels demand the following guarantees:—

1. The right to elect their own Legislature.

2. That the Legislature shall have power to pass an act, of a local nature, by a two third vote, over the vote of the Executive.

3. No law of a local nature to be binding until sanctioned by the Legislature.

4. A new Homestead and pre-emption law.

5. An Indian policy calculated to insure good will and quiet in the territory.

6. All the Executive, Legislative, Civil, and Military expenses, for a given number of years, to be paid out of the Dominion Treasury.

7. An appropriation to be extended in the internal improvements in the Territory.

The affair will most likely result in bloodshed before it is ended.

The rebels say they will not permit governor McDougall to pass the River. A writer in the Globe say the Scotch-half breeds are not taking any part in the insurrection. It is hoped that when a meeting takes place the rebels will be easily satisfied.

HORRIBLE DISASTER IN A SILVER MINE.—A Mexico special says:—The most horrible catastrophe that has occurred during the last half century in any silver mine in the world, happened within the old mine of Jesus Maria, near the City of Guanajuato, on the 9th October. While the laborers were seated in one of the broader chambers, eating their noon-day meal, they were startled by a sudden rumbling sound above them caused by the giving way of an immense portion of shelving rock, which formed the roof of the chamber. With them were their wives and children, who had brought them their meals, and were waiting to return with their pails and baskets. Scarcely a second intervened between the instant when the alarming sound was heard from above, and the crash upon the chamber floor below, followed by a cloud of dust and mingled cries of a thousand voices. Twenty five thousand tons of rock, in a body, had buried in an instant, upwards of one hundred miners, their wives, sisters and children. By counting the whole number who entered the mine in the morning, and missing women who had carried meals to relatives and friends, it was ascertained who had been buried in that terrible monument.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or inventions. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius to these response, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be incurabilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer" consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of it is great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since, Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our frontiers therefore well fortified.

Do not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to life climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Druggist Dealer for 25cts per bottle

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1869.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

It will be seen from a communication in another column that South Monaghan has decided to cast her lot with Durham. A meeting was held at Centreville last Saturday, at which about forty to fifty persons were present. The people of Peterborough knew nothing of the hour but what they received by telegraph from Mr. Carnegie, and in some way there was a mistake made.

A deputation from the town went down on Saturday, but on their arrival found the meeting had been over some hours, it being called at one instead of seven o'clock, as telegraphed. The meeting was carried by the friends of attachment to Port Hope, but as only about 32 voted for the connection and 16 voted in favor of connection with Peterboro, it cannot be called the voice of the township, and we have every reason to believe that if another meeting be called and Peterboro heard, the vote will be very different. This, we trust, will be done immediately.

Here are a few nuts to crack in the mean time.

South Monaghan is equalised for 1869 at $16 per acre.

Otonabee, just as good a township, at $9.

North Monaghan is equalised at only $10 per acre.

South is equalised at $7 per acre.

It will therefore be seen that South Monaghan pays, and will continue to pay, if attached to Durham, Twice as high a rate per acre yearly as Otonabee does, or is likely to do, and one and three-fifth times as much as North Monaghan does, although both these townships are as good for farming purposes as South Monaghan. In other words, suppose the rate to be 4 mills on $, South Monaghan will have to pay 6 cents and 4 mills per acre, while valued as Otonabee or North Monaghan it would only be 3 cents and 6 mills, or 4 cents per acre.

Suppose, even that a County rate in Peterboro should be 6 mills on the dollar, Otonabee then pays 5 cents and 4 mills per acre, and North Monaghan 6 cents on the dollar; and then suppose the County rate in South Monaghan should be 4 mills on the dollar, South Monaghan would pay 6 cents and 4 mills per acre, or FOUR mills per acre more than North Monaghan does, and one cent acre more than Otonabee does, although we have allowed nine mills of a higher rate for Peterboro County.

This would cause the Township of South Monaghan to pay $103,35 a year more than she would do if equalised with Otonabee, and about $100 more than if equalised with NORTH Monaghan. This sum would pay more than South Monaghan's share of the expenses of public building which P. Hope offers to erect, as soon as Port Hope shall be declared the County Town.

There is another view of this case for South Monaghan, and that is, her lands will be continually equalised by comparing with lands along the front Front. Lands that would sell for nearly twice as much, as land in Monaghan. And her value per acre, will be always, high while if connected with Peterboro, her lands would be equalised with Otonabee, Smith and N. Monaghan, and would in consequence be always lower than at present. The higher the value per acre, the higher the proportionate rate, and vice-versa, the lower the value per acre, the lower the County rate.

South Monaghan attached to Durham, will always have Darlington, Bowmanville Clarke and Newcastle interests to contend against; these will be adverse to Port Hope. And as a consequence adverse to South Monaghan, when a trial of strength comes.

Port Hope, too, as Mr. Garnett candidly remarked, will expect interest for the money expended in county property. That interest is just as heavy a burden as the whole cost of the buildings, for unless the capital be paid the interest will remain forever a charge against the townships.

Port Hope, too, must sell debentures, amounting to $60,000, to realize perhaps $40,000 in cash; the interest must be paid on the $60,000. It will, therefore, be seen that for the money actually used the counties must pay forever a sum equal to 10 per cent, while they could borrow themselves at 6 to 7 per cent, and all this over at the offer of Port Hope, the townships must pay their share of; and still the capital will remain unpaid, for this is no, as long as interest has to be paid.

The people of North Monaghan are inclined towards a union with South Monaghan if they become part of the same county. This would give them a Reeve and Deputy Reeve in the County Council and thus secure them a status in the Council equal to any township in the county; and more than this, the bridge across the Otonabee would, we believe, be built to the great advantage of the greater part of that township.

These are only a few reasons in favor of connection with us, which we trust our readers will consider carefully and then act. Everything is in favor of connection with Peterboro. Every way it is viewed, connection with Durham will prove to be injurious to South Monaghan.

We hope that the Slaves will still continue meeting and let Peterboro in peace.

PARLIAMENTARY.

Until this week very little has been done in the Ontario Legislature. Two School Bills have merely been read, but there has been no discussion on them.

A Bill has been introduced, providing for drainage of public lands.

Mr. Boyd has introduced a Bill to prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors, apprentices, servants, or to those known to get drunk. But none of these has become law yet.

On Tuesday the government suffered an ignominious defeat—41 to 31. This was on the Nova Scotia subsidy. To save themselves from shame, the ministry, after opposing the whole resolutions of Mr. Blake, turned round and voted for them. Mr. Blake made a telling speech against the part taken by John Sandfield at Ottawa, and against the part taken in opposing an expression of Ontario on the violation of the act of confederation.

John S. holds tenaciously to office still, and will only yield when there is no hope.

The opposition is gaining strength and courage. Another election will give them a power and status that will [illegible] time to [illegible]. Another defeat like this will show John Sandfield he stands on a slippery ground. All the cunning and wire-pulling of the entire government was not sufficient to avert the influence of Mr. Blake's eloquence and argument.

THE PETERBOROUGH GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

The Grammar School In spection, Rev. J. G. D. McKenzie, M. A., visited the Grammar School of this town on Thursday of last week, and examined several classes, and admitted the following pupils as regular Grammar School scholars.

From Mr. Taylor's division, Richard Wright, Herbert Cartier, Gaspire Loch, John Jay, Wm. Geo Yelland, Joseph Benson, William Manning, Hamilton Uin, Walter Mowry, Francis Walton, and Wm. Walsh. From Mr. McFaul's, (the following boys who had not been previously examined) Alfred Davis, John O'Sullivan, J. H. Peak, Edward Peak, and Alex. Graham; and from Miss Hatton's, Maggie Mann, Minnie Perry, Nettie Fry, Mary McWilliams, Ellie Rutherford, Annie Errett, Bessie Rusk and Eva Davis. Total 24.

There are now 181 names of boys and girls on the Grammar School Register for the present year, all having passed the regular entrance examination prescribed by law. It is but justice to the Teachers with whom Mr. Dixon is associated, to state that the Inspector said that these 24 entrants were "unusually well prepared."

It is very satisfactory to those who were instrumental in obtaining the valuable services of the present principal of our grammar school, J. B. Dixon, Esq., M. A., to thus be able to chronicle the steady progress of our Grammar and Common School under his management. It is well known that, before he took charge of the school, forty Grammar School pupils on the register, with an average of about 25 pupils, was considered a very favorable attendance.—Only two years have elapsed since Mr. Dixon came to take charge of the school, and now the regularly admitted pupils have increased nearly five-fold, 181 now against 40 two years ago. The pupils who passed the entrance examination last week were considered "unusually well prepared," showing that, not only is the attendance good, but that also there is a reasonable progress on the part of the pupils. The Board have acted very liberally toward the school, and the result is being realised in raising our school to a first place among the grammar schools of Ontario. We trust that at the next visit of Mr. McKenzie even greater things will be realised. Evidently to Mr. Dixon great praise is due.

The citizens of Norwood are now agitating the extension of the proposed Kingston and Madoc Railway to their village. The Kingstonians propose laying the Road to Madoc. The Townships in the neighbourhood are offering bonuses to get it to Marmora. It would then require but 9 or 10 miles of a road to be constructed to bring the iron horse into the village of Norwood. There is to be a meeting soon to consider what can be done in the matter. What is Peterboro doing? Already the Whitby road threatens to cut off some of the northern traffic. Lindsay takes a great deal of the trade that should and would come to Peterboro, if matters were managed as they should be. Let a Road from Kingston be extended to Norwood, and then unless it come to Peterboro also, we may bid adieu to the trade of the East. A year or two past, we might have secured a road to the East and to Cobourg for about $20,000. The opportunity was rejected, through the manoeuvres of a few. Now they find the Town cut off on all sides, no road to the back waters, and nothing being done. Some morning we may find our trade completely cut off by Kingston, Toronto and Lindsay; then perhaps our people will awake to their position.

ST. ANDREWS SOCIETY.

"The day" so faithfully honoured in the past by Scotland's sons throughout the world, is this year to be celebrated in Peterborough, by a sociable entertainment in the Music Hall, on the evening of Tuesday the 30th instant. We are promised a rich treat of Scotch Music, vocal and instrumental, as well as choice readings from Scottish authors; and preparations are being made to provide the company with refreshments before parting. Hitherto the gentlemen have had St. Andrew all to themselves.—The coming celebration however, presents the new and excellent feature of admitting the Ladies' to participate in the entertainment. The tickets are very low, and within the means of all. Looking at the Musical and other assistance offered, and the pains and trouble taken to make the whole affair successful, we can't help thinking "Auld Scotia's Sons" will have a thoroughly happy evening together, on St. Andrews night.

THE PEOPLES' JOURNAL.—This is the title of a new paper published in Hamilton, Ontario. It is neatly printed, its editorials chiefly refer to trade and manufacturing interests, and it promises fair to be a good paper, one that can be recommended to the public. It is only $2 a year. The enterprising publishers have our best wishes for their success.

A Woman Lost in the Woods.

A woman was rave about the 21st of Oct., in the neighbourhood of Mr. Jimmy Robb's Grove, near Shanty Bush, wandering about, apparently insane. On being asked by Mr. Robb, who approached her to remain in his house one night, expressing her amazement at his unknown, whence she was going, &c. She said her maiden name was Barbary Ackerman—that her father's name was Paul Ackerman—that she was married twice—that her first husband's name was Wilson—that her second husband's was Robinson—that she is the mother of eight children, two of whom are dead—that her second husband had left her for another woman—that poverty compelled her to give her children to strangers for support—that she came from Carlyle, Pennsylvania, and had been in Michigan, but could not tell how she came to this place—that she was travelling in search of her children. This is all that could be elicited from her, and all she seemed to know. She promised to travelling about all day, and said that she must travel till sunset every day, and would not accept the hospitality of any person, except during the night. She appeared to be about 40 years of age.

On the evening of the 20th ult., she came to Mr. Fowle's lumber shanty, in the woods, and on being told by one of the men that there were no women there, she started off and disappeared in the woods. This being told the settlers in that locality, they concluded that she was lost as none of them had seen her afterwards. Snow had fallen on the 20th, and as it was now nearly a fortnight since, it was regarded as certain that she must have perished in the snow. But one of the settlers, Mr. C. Armstrong, on being told on the 14th inst., by Mr. Orr, the foreman of the shanty, that he had seen her tracks in the snow, was moved by his anxiety to search the woods for her on the 15th, but without success. A heavy snow storm on the 17th prevented a party from going in search. Armstrong went out again on the 18th, taking along his rifle. After travelling some time he came on a deer track which he followed for a shot. Coming near a swamp the dear shadowed its pace, and Armstrong prepared for a shot. Presently he saw a dark object which he took for a bear, within four or five rods of him, in the thicket among the snow. He levelled his rifle, sighted it, and waited for the animal to raise its head, as he wanted to make a sure shot. Directly he heard a woman's cry. He then realized the awful fact that he had nearly taken the life of a human being, and falling on his knees he thanked God that the tragical act had been spared him. He had now found this poor miserable woman, her hands and feet were frozen, but still alive and able to speak, she begged him to take her out of the forest. Armstrong went for assistance and got some of the lumbermen who carried her to the shanty. When Mr. Fowler came in he had her removed to Mr. Fred. Miles' house, where she still remains. Medical assistance is required, and it is to be hoped that something will be done at once by the authorities.

THE CONCERT.—The Concert on Tuesday evening was, to all appearance, a reasonable success. The attendance was not as large as it might and should have been, but it was fully equal to what gatherings for charitable purposes generally are; and as Mr. Hill kindly gave the hall free, and the performers very willingly their time and effort, the other expenses will no doubt also be given in the same charitable way. From the number of encores it was very evident that all the parties were well received.—Mayor Scott, at the opening of the evening's proceedings, paid a well merited tribute to the Ladies who worked up the whole matter, and especially to those who so kindly lent their valuable assistance to the concert. The Readings, by Rev Mr. McDonnell and Messrs. Jas. A. Hall and D. Haggart, were good, and the Ladies, assisted by Mr. Dunsford, sustained the vocal and instrumental parts excellently. We dare not particularize amongst the Ladies lest it might appear invidious. All of them were deservedly encored. Mr. Geo. Dunsford's performance on the harp appeared to attract no small share of the attention of the audience. This is a very pleasant way of lending aid to those ladies who labor to maintain the Protestant Home, and who, no doubt, find it difficult sometimes to provide for all whom they consider requiring their benevolence, and we feel certain that all will be granted them in other ways. The poor and needy and frail demand public sympathy, and the people of Peterboro will be the last to withhold it.

GRAND CONCERT.—Prof. C. V. Waterford announces his intention of giving a Grand Vocal and Instrumental Concert in the Music Hall on the evening of the 29th inst., Monday next. He will be assisted by Mr. Jas. Weldern, grand Tenorist, from London, England, and also by Mr. M. Lane, the celebrated Ventriloquist; Mr. Rackett, Band Master, Peterboro; Prof. Philp, Port Hope; W. N. Kennedy, Esq., Peterboro, and several Amateurs—Ladies and Gentlemen—from Peterboro, Lindsay and Port Hope. H. D. Sheffield, Esq., has also consented to give his valuable assistance on the violin. Prof. C. V. W. promises the best entertainment of the kind ever given in this town. We therefore hope that he will receive encouragement in the way of a bumper house. A grand Piano, from Messrs. A. & S. Nordheimer's, Toronto, will be furnished for the evening.

BLAIRTON.—During a visit to this village last week we found the place very quiet.—The company is not taking out any ore this winter, and in consequence, the families that were engaged on the work are, just now, rather cast down. They do not appear to have anticipated a stoppage of labor so soon, and of course are not too well prepared for it. The company very generously allows all who remain to occupy their houses rent free, and without taxes. The school is also free, and firewood can be obtained at a very low rate—almost for nothing—so that they need not suffer much, if careful. Prospects are that operations will commence about March or before that time, if a settlement can be effected with the trustees of the estate of the late contractor, of which there appears every probability. The stoppage of the works is not, we learn, through insolvency of the company, but owing to litigation that may soon be settled. A good many have gone away from the village—some to the shanties, and others to other parts to look for employment.

CURE FOR PILES. Dr J. Briggs' Pile Remedy is offered to the sufferers of this distressing disease, with a confidence warranted by its success for their relief. Sold by Druggists.

PHARISEISM.

Under the garb of religion, the darkest spots and blackest records in the annals of the world have been committed. Persecution, hatred, and death have too often walked grim phantoms through the blessed Word of the pure and holy Jesus. Themselves even surrounded with the cobwebs of "gravity bless, gravity bless," from the mouths of cunning hypocrites, who in the Temple of the Omniscient often stood and said,—We "thank thee, O God," we "are not all other men," not even as this publican. A Nero could burn Rome, in order to a pretext to destroy the followers of the Crucified Redeemer. Smithfield fires were lighted under the pretext of doing God service. The Word of Truth intimates: "Then the time will come when men shall revile, persecute, and say all manner of evil against his servants,—falsely, for My sake," says the Prince of Peace. Men may not wonder, then, or be cast down, when these things occur. If any man suffer as a christian, let him not be ashamed, but let him glorify God on this behalf. The most solemn agreements, the warmest bonds of friendship, and the dearest ties of relationship have been sacrificed at the shrine of an assumed (immoral) christianity, that the Divine Master never acknowledged. Professed friends of christianity have, ere now, joined hands with the real enemies of christianity to belie, persecute and destroy those who love the truth.

Morality and christianity, though not one, nor yet always most in one, very often suffer the worst fate—persecution. The Stiborg words were lately uttered on the streets by a wolf in sheep's clothing:—"I cannot punish the scoundrel as I would wish to. If I could, I would"—forgetting that "vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord."

The Journalist, too, has made commerce cease with Satan and the world, and hesitates not to sacrifice truth at the shrine of popularity, and to stab his neighbor with a moral dagger thrice sharpened by hatred, a secret guilt reproved, and oiled with venom from the fang of the serpent.

Such Journalists would suppose the TRUTH, that error might be allowed to stalk abroad at noon-day. They love darkness rather than light. Moral censure, before whom the Spanish Inquisition in all its enormity would sink into littleness. If they had but the power they have the will. They would damn the Sabbath School Teacher, against whom, by their own admission, "the finger of scorn cannot be pointed." They would destroy a member of our orthodox church. They would basely (because under the garb of morality) decline their opponent, because, morally, he stands the head and shoulders above the vile trademere. The moral assassin would be a murderer, but for the strong arm of the law, and the absence of manly courage. And all in the cause of morality. Alas! alas!

There are some Journalists who require and India rubber cover thrown over them, to hide their moral deformity. And these too often try to blacken others. Now and then a Journalist may be found, who can, conduct as nothing else. He may have treed the sacred pulpit, but it was not large enough to contain him; he may have sat down with conscientious Christians unknown to them; he may have prayed loudly in the prayer meeting, and exhorted at the revival meeting, but, only too soon, was to be detected and forced to betake himself to Journalism. Can then a clean thing come out of an unclean? And yet too often these are the bi-moral cesspipes, with broad phylacteries; whited sepulchres; inwardly ravening wolves; having men's persons in admiration because of advantage. These Journalists publish falsehoods against their contemporaries, and then seek to do them private injury. They are loudest in their abuse, the first to slander, and the last to whine when deservedly punished. The honest Journalist rebukes vice, does not cower before wickedness, never allies himself with the ungodly, spurns the wages of sin, and believing inebriety to be temporary madness, passes by it. The moralist may write; but sin is in the world. Hypocritical Journalists will put on the garb of Saints. And, it is to be feared, will continue to traduce their neighbours, but still we will not petition for legislation, for their suppression, for then they might return to the house whence they came, and take to themselves other spirits more wicked than the first.—

No! no! no! demand the last mite, but we will pray that the spirit of Truth may open their blind eyes; and that a Paul may be sent to reason with them of righteousness temperance and judgment to come; and bring to their remembrance the 9th commandment. Here it is,—"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour."

The dwelling house of Robert Morrison, Esq., of Dummer, was consumed by fire on Monday the 8th instant. The fire we learn was caused by a defect in the brick work of the chimney. Mr. Morrison had just erected the building at a cost of about $1,500. The carpenters were through with their portion of the work, and the plastering was almost finished, when the fire occurred, through the chimneys at the chimney taking fire. Mr. M. saved nothing but the beds, and a little clothing. A carpenter's chest of tools worth $100, belonging to Mr. J. McNicol was also consumed. There was a trifling insurance of $700 on the building, and $100 on the contents. The loss to Morrison is still great. The neighbours gathered next day or so, and erected a neat cedar log house for him. We learn that Mr. M. was very ill at the time of the fire, with affection of the lungs, from which he is still suffering.

A TOM HARRIS GEM.—From a notice in another column, it will be seen that one of nature's wonders, is to be exhibited on Friday in the Music Hall. The girl is said to be 17 years of age, and in perfect strength. She has two heads, and two sets of arms, which blend into one body. She talks, sings, eats and drinks, with both mouths. She has also four feet, and walks on all or on two as she wills. Boston papers speak of her as a marvel of nature indeed. All should see her.

A NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH AT NORWOOD.—The Roman Catholics of Asphodel and South Dummer, are erecting a very handsome Stone Church in the Village of Norwood. It will be a very commodious building, the design very tasty, and the workmanship promises to be equal to anything in this county. It will not be entirely finished this winter. The cost will be not much less than $6,000.

CONSUMPTIVES, try Dr. J. Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer. It will relieve and cure you.—For all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, nothing can surpass its beneficial effects. Sold by Druggists.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, 22nd November, 1869.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment. Present—His Worship the Mayor in the chair, and Messrs. English, Tate, Stevenson, Doherty, Kennedy, Rutherford, Hudson, Gibson and O'Beirne.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Clerk read a circular signed by three Reeves to the Reeve of Peterboro, inviting co-operation in a petition to the Legislature, asking for the re-establishment of the Improvement fund and the placement in the different municipalities of the amount, secured therefrom since suspended. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

A petition from Roderick Maloney to the Council, stating that he had been fined in the police court on three separate occasions to the amount of $21, explaining his desperation for the offences with which he was charged, and promising amendment in future, and praying that said fines be remitted in whole or in part. The petition was received and ordered to be laid on the table.

Moved by Mr. O'Beirne, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That drains and lamps be provided for the reporters of the Peterboro' newspapers.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole,—That this Council hears that the municipality of South Monaghan has, by vote, agreed to separate itself with the County of Durham, for judicial and municipal purposes, and regrets that this Council, from not knowing the time of the meeting in South Monaghan was held, were unable to accord by delegation, as they think they would have been able to offer inducements to the said municipality to connect themselves to the County of Peterboro, and would respectfully suggest that were a deputation from this county accorded an opportunity of fairly stating the advantages likely to accrue to South Monaghan through connection with this county, they would prove an inducement to such connection; and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Reeve of the Township.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr Rutherford, that this Council hereby declares its intention of opposing attaching a salary to the office of Mayor, after the present year. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr Toole,—That the Warden of this County be apprised of the action of this Council, in respect of South Monaghan, and that he be requested to unite with us on behalf of the County Council. Carried.

Moved by Mr. O'Beirne, seconded by Mr. Kennedy,—That the Mayor, Messrs. Toole, Clanton and Stevenson, be authorized as a delegation, to attend on behalf of the Town of Peterborough, at the projected meeting in South Monaghan, and to make all necessary arrangements in anticipation thereof, with power to add to their number such ratepayers of the Town as they may consider advisable. Carried.

Mr. O'Beirne as chairman of the Finance Committee, read and submitted the following report:

The Finance Committee beg leave to submit to the Council, that there is no necessity just now for the employment of two Constables, and they would therefore recommend that the services of Mr. John Hawdon be dispensed with in the mean time. All of which is respectfully submitted. Signed I. O'Beirne Chairman, James Stevenson, Wm. Toole and Saml. Dickson.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole,—That Mr. O'Beirne be requested to prepare an Act in accordance with the memorial of this Council, and have it forwarded to the Member for this County through the Clerk, together with the usual sessional fee. Carried.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

FIRE MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of Protection Company No. 1, of Peterboro, was held in the Firemen's Hall, on the first Tuesday of the present month. Capt. O'Donnell in the chair. After the usual routine business was gone through with, the Company went into Committee of the Whole for the current year, The Chief Engineer, Mr. S. Poole, in the chair. The following are the officers elected:—

Captain, J. O'Donnell.
1st Lieutenant, J. H. Cobb.
2nd Lieutenant, George Johnston.
Secretary, Maxwell Hall.
Asst. Secretary, Robert Thompson.
Treasurer, Peter Hamilton.
1st Branchman, Charles Robinson.
2nd do George W. Hall.
3rd do George McWilliams.

Messrs. Edwin Poole and Charles Stapleton were recommended to the Council as Chief and Assistant Engineers.

Y. M. C. A.—We have been requested to state that the regular weekly meeting of the above Society will be held on Monday evening, 29th inst., (not on Wednesday, as decided at last meeting) at which a full attendance is requested.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening the following subject will be discussed:—"Would it be advantageous to have the rate of interest limited?" by the following gentlemen:

Affirmative—Messrs J. Burnham, J. A. Hall, Kidd and McFaul.

Negative—Messrs. Donnellmore, Taylor and O. O'Beirne.

Readers for the evening—Messrs. Knapp and McFaul.

Debate commences at 8 o'clock. Members only admitted.

WELL DESERVED HONORS.—We are very much pleased to notice that Mr. John Crerar, student in the law office of Mr. R. W. Adams, of this city, carried off the third year's scholarship in his examination before the Law Society on Tuesday last, Mr. C's success in the various examinations which he has undergone affords an example for those pursuing similar callings which they would do well to imitate. It has been our pleasure to be acquainted with Mr. Crerar for a considerable length of time, and we can bear testimony to his high intellectual abilities, and to the excellence of his character generally. We predict for him a brilliant career in the profession which he will one day adorn.—Hamilton Spectator.

The many friends of Mr. Crerar in Peterboro, will be much pleased to learn of his success. He has won a prize three years in succession.

THE WEATHER.—Winter has fairly set in. Sleighing has been good for the past week. It has overtaken some of the farmers unprepared; as some a' them have a quantity of turnips

"SPORTING NEWS."

"Mr. Henderson has matched, 'Garry Owen' against Turner's 'Pride of Port Hope,' mile heats, best two in three; over above course, for $100. To take place on Monday next, the 15th of November, at one o'clock.

"ANOTHER MATCH."

"Mr. Browning, of Cobourg, has matched his mare 'Maggie' for $200 against the winner of the above. Match to take place on Thursday, the 18th, after the 'Raven' vs. 'Fatherngay' match."

"It will thus be seen" on the 19th inst., that a "better days sport was never held in Canada than is expected" on the 15th inst.

The race of "Garry Owen," or, "Pride of P. H." is also to take place on Monday 15th, the 15th of November.

Mr. Downing's mare "Maggie is also to run on Thursday, the 18th, at the same time and place. Sportsmen should hold themselves in readiness for the 15th and 18th instant. There will be rare sport on that day—so says the ne plus of "Spinning Gentlemen," in the issue of the 15th inst.

SOUTH MONAGHAN.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

A Public Meeting of the ratepayers of South Monaghan was held on Saturday, the 20th inst. in the Council Chamber, at Centreville. The meeting was organized about 3.30, p. m., by appointing the Reeve, Mr. John Kerr, Chairman, and Mr J. A. Turnbull, Secretary.

The Chairman briefly explained that the object for which the meeting was called was to give an opportunity to the ratepayers to express their opinion on the Bill about to be brought before Parliament, for the separation of Durham from Northumberland, and to attach South Monaghan to Durham.

Mr. Williams, M. P. P., of Port Hope, then read the bill as published in the British Canadian. He said, being absent from home for some time, he would leave it to the deputation to state what Port Hope proposed to do in the matter.

Mr. Carnegie, addressing the meeting, said he was there not to advocate a union with Peterboro'; he was there simply to hear the wishes of the people of South Monaghan, and to use his best endeavor to carry out their wish in the matter, whatever that may be.

Mr. Dallas, one of the deputation from Port Hope, made a very flattering speech in favor of South Monaghan uniting with Durham. He said Port Hope was prepared on being declared the County Town, to provide the necessary county buildings.

Mr. Cleghorn, another of the deputation spoke to the same effect.

Mr. Garnet, also one of the deputation, said it was well to have the matter fully understood and said that it was expected Port Hope would receive interest for the amount expended on the erection of the proposed county buildings. The other members of the deputation reminded him that the Bill provides:—That Port Hope should, on being declared the County Town of Durham, provide the necessary county buildings for municipal and judicial purposes. He said he was aware that such provisions were embodied in the Bill, but still he maintained that Port Hope expected remuneration to the amount of a fair interest on the sum expended on the proposed county buildings. The deputation were then asked by Port Hope to make some statements.

We are of the opinion that Mr. Garnet made the most plain and candid statement of facts. After these explanations by the Port Hope delegation and some observations about the relative amount of taxes paid in different townships, Mr. Carnegie suggested that a clause should be added to the Bill limiting the time in which the necessary buildings should be erected; also a clause providing that Port Hope cannot withdraw from Durham after becoming united with it.

It was moved and seconded,—That this meeting do now decide in favor of the bill as amended.

It was also moved in amendment by Mr. Waddell, seconded by Mr. Bernard,—That further time be given to consider the matter.

On a show of hands being called for, the Chairman declared the amendment carried.—At this stage of the meeting a dispute arose, whether the amendment was justly carried. It was finally settled to have the yeas and nays taken on the original motion, which was carried about two to one. We submit that this should not be taken as a test vote, there being only between 60 and 70 voters sent, out of about 200.

At the close, a special meeting of the Council was held to sign a petition to the Legislature in accordance with the proposed amendments limiting the time for the erection of suitable buildings to three years. Mr. Carnegie pledged himself to give the Bill as amended his cordial support.

Although no motion was made with a direct view to unite South Monaghan with Peterboro, we are convinced that a large number of the ratepayers are favorable to such a union, and time will increase rather than diminish that feeling.

OBSERVER.

We most gladly give the following from the Review a place in our columns, in order that "Fair Play" may see that we desire that he may have it:—

A SLANDER REFUTED.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Review.

I have read this week an article in the Examiner, which I shall not characterize, entitled "The Person Abused." A reference to pain article in the pedigree of B. A. induced me to turn to Chambers' Encyclopedia in quest of information on the point. The following is the result of my research:—"Clementi, Muzio, one of the best pianist and composers for the pianoforte, was born at Rome in 1756 or 1757. He came on the Pianoforte when only 12 years of age, owned for him the notice of a Mr. Beckford, an English gentleman travelling in Italy, with whom C. went to England, and in whose family he remained for several years, studying the works of the great composers, and where he also acquired an extensive knowledge of literature. His 'Opus 1' (composed in his 16th year) is considered the model on which the whole modern Pianoforte sonatas have been founded. After travelling on the continent for some time, he returned to England, where he obtained the highest reputation as a teacher. Pecuniary misfortunes induced him in the year 1820 to commence business as a music seller and manufacturer of Pianofortes. He died in London, March 10th, 1832. His compositions, mostly Pianoforte sonatas, are full of pleasant melody, and arranged in masterly style. For students his classical Introductions to Pianoforte Playing, and his last work, the Gradus ad Parnassum, have been highly recommended. His style of playing was brilliant, and in improvisation he excelled all his predecessors.—[Chambers Encyclopedia, Vol. 3, page 74.

What the above sketch has to do with "organ grinding," as it is usually meant, your readers can easily determine; and hence the base opinion of the author of the piece referred to in the Examiner, can easily be deduced.

FAIR PLAY.

The Committee of the Protestant Home present their thanks to Mr. E. C. BELL for his very great kindness in placing his Music Hall, well warmed and lighted, at their disposal, and for his attention to the comfort of the audience at the Concert, given in aid of the funds of that institution, on Tuesday evening, 23rd of Nov.

The following is from the New York Spectator, a prominent insurance Journal:—It is quite a compliment to a Canadian institution, that it attracted the favorable notice of the American press:

"The Canada Life Assurance Company has obtained from Elizur Wright a valuation of its policies and annuities to April 30, 1869, by the Carlisle Table at five per cent. He finds the reserve required, to be $468,124,91; taking this into the company's balance sheet, there is a surplus of $121,700 91. The calculation of Mr. Wright has, we understand, been based upon the net premium distinguishing the loading. The result is very satisfactory, and must tend to establish the confidence of the public in the Canada Life, and extend its rapidly increasing business."

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.—The memory of Dr Wistar is enshrined in the hearts of thousands whom his Balsam of Wild Cherry has cured of coughs, colds, consumption, or some other form of Pulmonary disease. It is now over forty years since this preparation was brought before the public, and yet the demand for it is constantly increasing.

THE DRAINAGE BILL.

The following is a synopsis of Attorney General McDonald's bill:—

1. The Treasurer may advance any sum or sums of money not exceeding $———— to be expended in improvements in the way of drainage, under the provisions of an Act passed in the thirty-second year of the reign of Her Majesty, entitled "An Act respecting the Public works of Ontario."

2. The Commissioner of Public Works shall keep a separate account of the sum of money received, paid and expended on account of drainage.

3 As soon as conveniest after completion of any drainage works, the Commissioner shall draw up an instrument in writing, describing the land so drained, the several lots, and proprietors, and the amount expended, and shall transmit such instrument with maps plans, sections, and other documents, to the arbitrator under the aforesaid act.

4 Upon receipt of the instrument, plans, maps, &c., the arbitrators shall inspect said lands, and prepare draft of an award setting forth the proportions of sums expended, payable in respect of the several lots drained, and specifying proportion in which the proprietors of lots shall be annually charged towards future expenses in maintaining drains.

5. Drafts of award shall be printed and distributed to parties concerned, and a copy deposited with the registrar for inspection by any person on payment of ——— cents. Arbitrators to insert advertisement in the Ontario Gazette, and one or more newspapers in the county, notifying all parties desirous of lodging objections to award, to transmit the same to such address as specified, and specifying time and place to hear objections which may be lodged.

6 Arbitrators to attend at special time and place, and to examine into objections, hear evidence, and make such alterations in award as they see fit.

7 Every award when settled with plan annexed to be deposited Commissioner of Public Works, and a duplicate registered in the county or counties where lands are situate. When registered award to be binding and conclusive to all parties.

8. The arbitrators shall at the same time deliver a copy of such final award to the clerk of every municipality in which the lands so drained or improved are situated, to remain deposited in the municipal records forever, and to be open to inspection of any one on payment of ten cents. And the municipal council shall order by by-law the amount to be charged and collected on these lots, shall be added to the next collectors' roll next issued after receipt of the copy of the award, for the purpose of collection.

9 The respective sums specified by the award as the proportions payable on the drained lots, shall be charged on such lots with priority over all encumbrances on such lots, in the following manner,—Each lot shall be charged with a rent charge after the rate of rent for every $100, and so in proportion for any lesser amount, to be payable for a term of 21 years.

10 Every such rent charge shall be altered by the clerk of the municipality in a separate column of the collector's roll, and be collected in all respects as municipal rates and taxes are collected under the "Assessment Act of 1869," and the amount remitted to the Treasurer of Ontario within one month after the shall have become exigible. The Municipal Council to levy upon the whole rateable property within its jurisdiction a sufficient sum to enable them to pay the amount to the treasurer of Ontario, which shall be payable whether it shall have been recovered from the parties charged with the same or not. The amount due the Treasurer of Ontario to be the first charge on the funds of the municipality, no other sum to be paid until the amount due the government in respect of such rent charge is paid. Any municipal officer paying any sum out of municipal funds while such rent charge is due to the government, is to be guilty of misdemeanor. Any Reeve or Councillor omitting to see foregoing provisions carried out to be personally liable.

11. In case any leasehold land shall be improved by damages, arbitrators shall ascertain amount of increased rent to be paid to owner.

12. Whenever a rent-charge shall have become charged on Crown land, it shall, not be collected by the Municipal Council but shall as it falls due, be paid over by the Commissioner of Crown Lands to the Provincial Treasurer, and the same to paid shall be entered as a separate account.

13. If any difference shall arise between parties interested in any land to be drained or improved, it shall be lawful for the arbitrators, by examination of witnesses on oath, or by any sufficient evidence, to examine into and determine the same, and such determination shall be binding and conclusive upon all parties for the purpose of this Act, but no further.

14. Act to be called "the Ontario Drainage Act," and may be amended or repealed by any Act passed in the present session of the Legislature.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is severe, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From Anthrokos, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its accession, and the frequent recurrence to which it is subject. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 349 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

PILES are a very common affection, there being but few persons who are not troubled with them at some period of their life. The disease exists in small tumors in the rectum or about the anus, which are divided into, first, those which are owing to a distended state of the part, and, second, those which present the character of a solid tumor. When the tumors are within the rectum, they are called internal piles; when without and around the anus, external. When they discharge blood they are termed bleeding piles, and when no blood appears, blind piles. Dr. J. Briggs' Pile Remedy, remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction. All who have tried it, do not hesitate to say it is superior to anything they have ever used for this disease. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, No. 349 Broadway, N. Y. and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

SEVER'S WARNER.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a sure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds on the lungs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

A CLERGY MAN writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of the Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the Soul Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HUNT'S EXPRESS HAIR GLOSS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JAMES' KENDRICK LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one EQUAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

A MYSTERY AT WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I shot rustic path was trending,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, faintly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glittering,
As contented I there was listening
To the sighing, merry breeze on the leaves.
When beneath a tree reposing
Where no sun or sky was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow—sunk on the ground!
Though no other feature shined,
Quickly came his eyes uplifted—
Eyes red lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of woe?
But no other word he uttered,
And no other sign was uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'

'That's a strange supposition, surely,'
Said I, looking down decurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will Pardon,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always ready cash for WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use?'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll note you're ready by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me then to purchase

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Matchless Boots and Shoes.

SEWING MACHINES!

IT is becoming a more fully established fact every day that there cannot be found a more labor saving or useful article in any household than a SEWING MACHINE. It is therefore of the first importance to get a good one, and to understand it thoroughly at the first commencement; this cannot be done where they are bought at a distance, or from peddlers By buying at the PETERBOROUGH SEWING MACHINE ROOMS, over T. Donnelly's Store, you get any of the first class Sewing Machines now in use, at less than prices from a lady in charge of the machines who gives the business her whole attention.

Needles, Oil, Shuttles, Springs, &c., with a large assortment of large and small machines, constantly on hand.

☞ Every Machine tested and warranted.

Poetry.

TREAD SOFTLY.

Tread softly by the sacred mound,
Where little Charlie sleeps,
Our darling, o'er whose sweet repose
The drooping willow weeps;
Let every heart be silent now,
Though bitter tears may fall
For one who lived and loved and died—
The precious hope of all.

Tread softly by the narrow bed
Where fragrant roses grow,
And where the weeping willow doth
Its mournful care bestow.

Tread softly by the grave of one
Our hearts had learned to love,
But who the shining angel band
Bore to their home above;
And as we weep o'er Charlie dear,
Fond memory will bring
The hoping prattle of our boy,
The songs he used to sing

Tread softly, etc.

Tread softly, tenderly beside
That little mound of clay,
When dew drops kiss the fragrant flowers,
Or at the close of day;
And over Charlie's silent dust,
Where angel hymns may roam,
Renew our pledge with him to meet
Within our Father's home.

Tread softly for an angel band
Doth guard the precious dust,
And we can safely leave our boy,
Our darling in their trust.

A Correspondent of the Amherst Gazette gives the sad particulars of a most distressing affair which occurred at Pugwash, Nova Scotia, on Friday night, Oct. 15, and is one of the most melancholy cases of self-devotion we have ever had to record:—It appears that on Friday night last, Mr. Cornelius Crowley was aroused by the sound of fire somewhere in the building. On jumping from his bed he found the whole body of the house in flames. His first thought was to get help, so he ran at once to the barn to arouse two of his sons who were sleeping there. On his return he found it impossible to get up stairs, where five of the family were sleeping, or to his father's room, where the old man and a little son were sleeping together. But Mrs. Crowley, with her babe in her arms, succeeded in arousing some of those up stairs; her brother and sister threw themselves out of the window, forgetting the three children who were still asleep in another bed. The mother's screams awakened the eldest daughter, and she came to the window and asked what she should do, when her mother urged her to throw herself from the window, but she replied 'No my brother and sister must be saved." She then returned through the heat and smoke and took her sleeping brother, a little younger than here.—If (5 years), in her arms, and carried him to the window, from which he sprang with no injury except a slight scorching of his face and hair. She then returned through the flames, now coming through the floor, and brought a still younger sister (7 years) to the window, and here the dear girl had more than she could do, for her sister in her fright refused to be thrown out, and with the flames coming up around her, she struggled with her until she put her out of the window under the window sill she dropped down herself, a distance of nearly sixteen feet. When she rose from the ground, she said, "I am done, mother, but I have saved my brother and sister from being burnt up." At six in the morning she died—aged eleven years and eight months—a martyr to the love of her brother and sister. I never before saw so much courage and firmness in one so young; and while dressing her bruised and burnt limbs she uttered no complaint. Her sister died in the evening.

Cincinnati is greatly excited over the resolution adopted by the Board of Education henceforth to exclude the Bible and all Biblical studies from the common schools of that city. A strong Protestant feeling has been aroused, and the battle has been carried into the courts to prevent the action of the Board taking effect. This is one phase of the separate school question which is now to the fore in Canada. In the State of Ohio the Roman Catholics, who are in a minority, have lately made proposals for a division of the school fund, but the proposition was so distasteful to the mass of the people of the State that it was not much sooner made than abandoned. A movement was then instituted for the expulsion of the Bible from the schools, and as there is a strong Roman Catholic element in Cincinnati the movement, as we have seen, has been successful in that city. We do not think it has much to commend it; for a liberal rule has always been in force whereby Roman Catholic parents who objected to the reading of King James' version might have the Douay version read to their children and in no case was any comment permitted to be made by the teacher upon the portions read at the opening of each day's studies. An injunction has already been issued restraining the Board from carrying out its resolution pending the legal proceedings instituted, and an agitation has commenced which will probably be attended with interesting and exciting incidents.

San Francisco papers say that the first article of tinware manufactured from tin mined in the United States, has just been completed in that city. It is a case to contain the pioneers' certificate of honorary membership presented to Hon. Wm. H. Seward.

A few days since, one of the United States detectives in New York, received a package containing $8,000 in counterfeit stamps, accompanied by a letter, saying the sender had given up the counterfeit business, and requesting the detective to relinquish their pursuit of him.

An Irishman dropped a letter in the Post Office the other day with the following memorandum on the corner of it, "Please hasten the delay of this."

"I know every rock on the coast," said an Irish pilot. At that moment the ship struck, when he added, 'and that's one of them."

Isn't it queer that contractors should widen streets?

The ties that connect business men—advertising.

Is getting "tight" the result of "loose habits?"

SPECIAL NOTICES.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most sceptical that the Great Medicinal Compound preserved after for ages is now accessible to the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Stortz, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Major, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Commoco, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Pigeons, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

DR. A. TRASK'S

MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—"I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of Inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Scalds, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trial, and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Shaw, County P.O. County of Leeds, Ontario, Canada.

Manor, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1868 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, reached to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. P. Wood, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

A. P. Wood, J. P.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures. many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, in which the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poisons is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this noxious and unclean element of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and soon, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develops into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, in many cases, a perfect cure, from the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Boils or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sores, Ulcers, Syphilitic Taints. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Pain, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine Disorders of the human female and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by this remedy, after a long time has been pronounced incurable by eminent physicians, and subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ulcerous Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of poisonous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammations of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Drowsy, Good-for-Nothing, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we do not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills speedily cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaints and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continually taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Suppressed Scrofulous, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distinguished appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

[This cut represents Mr. C. A. Colby's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the "genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W Glen, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public as a man worthy of entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearings.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines; Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

New Method of Washing Clothes Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfect by and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANGTON and THOMAS BYERSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in these Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

Poetry.

BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

The moonbeams glide from their home to-night,
To deck thy bosom with pearly light;
So cold, so calm, they shimmer and shine,
But bring no rest to this soul of mine,
Beautiful snow.

It wanders forth through the bitter air,
With shiver, shudder, and moaning prayer,
Past woodland, meadow, and frozen rill,
With yearning pain it cannot still,
Beautiful snow.

To a little grave. Thy silvery sheen
O'ercanopies the mystic's twining green,
While through the wind-harp's mystical shell
Those branches sighing, chirping chill,—
Beautiful snow.

Vainly is wreathed thy mantle so fair;
It gives no warmth to the sleeper there;
Vainly the moonbeams shimmer and shine;
They bring no light to this soul of mine,
Beautiful snow.

Till it soars on wings of faith and trust,
From moulding form of precious dust,
Where spotless spirits sing and shine;
Arrayed in robes as pure as thine,
Beautiful snow.

For there thy presence, cold and still,
Never chills the flowers nor checks the rill,
And mid the moonbeams whitmer and shine,
Sweet rest steals over this soul of mine,
Beautiful snow.

CHAPTER VI.

THE SWAN.

For many hours Raoul remained perfectly motionless before her, without raising his eyes from the sweet face whose pure and painful beauty recalled the early virgin martyrs. He was a prey to distressing fears. What passed in his soul, so long disturbed during these hours of grievous contemplation, he himself could doubtless not explain. There are emotions, sorrows, bursts of adoration, flashes of light which penetrate the soul of man to a depth no language can reach. All at once he was seized with trembling his eyes filled with tears, he fell upon his knees, and raised his face to heaven. He was praying.

A light rustling soon startled him from the abstraction in which he was plunged.

Sibylle had raised herself upon her bed of leaves, and was gazing at him with radiant eyes.

'Raoul,' she stammered, clasping her hands together, as if yet uncertain, 'are you praying?'

He caught her hands wildly.

'Yes, Sibylle, I pray! I believe! I believe there is no truth in the whole universe, or that you are an immortal angel!'

His heart overflowed with this cry and he burst into a flood of tears.

Sibylle had fallen back upon her couch, as if overwhelmed by heavenly joy, her lips parted in an ecstatic smile, and her beaming eyes were fixed upon Raoul's, whence tears were silently trickling.

Too much moved to speak, the young girl made a gesture of inexpressible grace and tenderness; she withdrew her hand, bathed with these sacred drops, carried it to her lips and kissed it.

The gray light of dawn now began to penetrate the hut. A confused sound of voices and hurried footsteps was heard upon the cliff. Soon Monsieur and Madame de Ferias appeared upon the threshold.—Miss O'Neil was with them. While the marchioness and the Irish girl covered Sibylle with caresses and pressed her with eager questions, Monsieur de Ferias exchanged with Raoul some rapid words.

'My poor child!' said he, 'my poor, dear child!' He embraced her fondly.

'Can you walk?' said he, 'do you think so? Or shall we carry you? The carriage is below on the beach. Monsieur, you must help me.'

Sibylle rose with some difficulty and stood erect.

'Oh! I will walk,' said she gayly, 'I am quite well. I could go to the end of the world!'

She glanced at Raoul, and leaning on her grandfather's arm, left the hut.

As they crossed the plateau toward the path that wound down to the beach through a fissure of the rocks, day had fully broken, and now the sun suddenly emerged from the sea like a sphere of gold. Sibylle stopped a moment as if dazzled, turned toward Raoul, who was following her, and without speaking, pointed with uplifted finger to the radiant horizon. As she entered the descending path, she turned again.

'You are coming with us, are you not?' said she.

Her voice was so tranquil and sonorous, her eye so smiling, and her walk so elastic, that Raoul felt relieved from the extreme alarm which tortured him. Resuming his usual playful manner, he answered:

'No. I should be in the way. Besides, my road is shorter by the cliff, and the walk will do me good. I am half frozen. But I will see you soon. Good-by, and do not doubt me!'

They shook hands, and Sibylle soon disappeared in the windings of the path.

When he had lost sight of her, Raoul hurried away in the direction of the village, and after a half hour's walk reached the parsonage. He was surprised to see before the garden-gate the carriage which had brought Sibylle away. In answer to his eager inquiries, the servant informed him that Mademoiselle de Ferias had suddenly become so ill she had been obliged to stop at the parsonage. The marquis, with distracted features, hastened to meet him. Sibylle was in a high fever and delirious. After a few moments' consultation, Monsieur de Chalys entered the carriage and drove away. At the entrance to Hennebon, Raoul met Dr. ——, whom they had overtaken, and who, after a moment's conversation, entered the carriage with Sibylle's family. Raoul was obliged to go to the railway station, some leagues away, to send a dispatch.

All these occurrences, with the vague uneasiness it naturally excited in Raoul, took up the whole day, and it was nearly six o'clock when he pitched before the parsonage, both body and mind worn out by fatigue, impatience and anxiety.

As he entered the garden, he met the physician whom he had been to seek in the forenoon. He was coming from Sibylle's sick chamber, and wore a thoughtful countenance.

'Well, monsieur?' said he.

'Well,' said the physician, 'it is a remittent fever, a miasmatic fever, excessive emotion, the night passed in the fog and the marshes.'

'Is there danger?'

'Very great danger!'

'Ah! monsieur,' cried Raoul, 'save her!'

'You may be sure, monsieur, that I will do what I can. If she resists the first attack there may be hope, but it has been terrible! She is calmer now. The delirium has left her. We shall see.'

Madame de Ferias and Miss O'Neil appeared upon the threshold of the house.—Raoul hurried to meet them. Both took his hands without speaking.

'Ah! madame! Ah! God of heaven! Do you say nothing?'

'She seems a little better,' murmured the marchioness.

'Ah! writhed that I am!' cried Raoul.

'No, monsieur, no; be calm. She told us all this morning. We do not reproach you, it is a misfortune common to us all.—Besides, we have some little hope, since a few moments.'

The voice of Monsieur de Ferias was heard from within.

'Louise,' said he, 'will you come up?'

The two women entered, and the physician followed them in haste.

Monsieur de Chalys, left alone, walked to and fro, holding his hand to his burning forehead. He stopped to listen. No sound reached his ear. A soft and melancholy silence reigned within the little garden, over which the shadows of twilight had already fallen.

To quiet the intolerable agitation of his thoughts, he went out and walked for some time before the gate. All at once he climbed the cliff, and entered the church. When the unfinished paintings of the walls and roof, the souvenirs of so many hopes, of so many happy hours appeared before him in the dim light, a pang of anguish smote upon his heart. He joined his hands with convulsive grief, fell on his knees before the altar, and beating his forehead against its steps sobbed aloud.

A hand touched his shoulder as he wept and prayed. He arose. The Abbe Renaud stood before him, mute and pale. Raoul seized his hand, and looked it to his eyes.

'Ah! father,' he cried, "what have you come to tell me? Spare me, father! All is not over say? No, it is not so! She is not dead? Oh! I beseech you! What will become of me in this world? She is not dead—tell me, she is not dead? I beg you! I supplicate you!"

And he fell on his knees before the priest in a delirious transport.

The old man raised him.

'My friend, be calm; think upon God. Come, she calls you.'

'She calls me?'

He bent upon the curate an inquiring look of anguish, and as he saw his lips vaguely moving, followed him without speaking. They descended the slope in silence. As they mounted the staircase, they met the doctor. He took Raoul's hand as he passed.

'Be a man, monsieur,' said he.

They entered the little chamber to which Sibylle had been carried. It was the one Raoul had occupied. The Marquis de Ferias, the Marchioness, and Miss O'Neil were grouped about the head of the bed. Their features, worn with recent fears, were calm and grave. Raoul's first glance met the blue eyes of Sibylle directed toward the entrance of the chamber with a look of anxiety. It disappeared as soon as she recognized him. He approached the bed. Sibylle's countenance, bordered by the unbound and disordered tresses of her auburn hair, breathed a serenity, a grace and a kind of gladness which at first deceived Raoul.

She feebly moved her head as she smiled upon him, then raised her eyes to the curate.

He came forward.

'Monsieur,' said the old man, 'Mademoiselle de Ferias in this supreme hour would have desired to be united to you by the nuptial benediction. She did not know, and I have informed her, that my duty forbids me to consecrate such a union. But I will do at least all that my conscience permits me to give to this heart which has so dearly loved you, a last consolation.'

He paused a moment,

'Mademoiselle de Ferias,' he continued, 'has told me, monsieur, that you shared henceforward her pure belief and her eternal hopes.'

'Yes, monsieur,' said Raoul, 'forever!'

A gleam of joy lighted up the features of Sibylle. The old man was again silent for an instant.

'Give her your hand,' said he.

Raoul gently unclosed his hand in Sibylle's.

The priest raised his swimming eyes to heaven, and with a voice broken by emotion, 'My God!' he said, 'God of mercy! thou knowest both these two have loved, and how they have suffered! May these two souls, so worthy of each other, now so soon to be separated, be again one thy united in eternity! And deign to bless this promise, I now make them in thy name. Amen.'

A sound of sobs burst forth in the chamber as the old curate pronounced these words, and his own tears flowed without restraint. Sibylle alone did not weep; her eyes seemed to speak to him in a low and timid whisper.

'Monsieur,' said he to Raoul as he rose, 'embrace her.'

Raoul leant over the couch and pressed his trembling lips to her forehead and her hair.

The poor child's absorbs finished with a tremble like. She fixed upon Raoul a look of inexpressible sweetness and tenderness, then suddenly her features shrunk, which had overspread her countenance, passed away, her breath had ceased; she became 'dead' pale; the shade of her long eyelashes deepened, her lips parted, and her unchanged beauty became fixed in eternal immobility. Even death seemed to have touched her reverently.

There were now three white tombstones in the little churchyard on the cliff. Upon the white marble of the first were graven these words: 'Sibylle-Anne de Ferias. Aged nineteen years.' And a little lower: 'In æternum.'

[Since the foregoing events of this tale, the Count Raoul de Chalys resides at the chateau of Ferias. In obedience to Sibylle's legal wishes, the Chateau de Ferias, the grand seigniorial residence, has still never been let. He remains also in daily frequented the tombs of Mademoiselle de Ferias. The country people, who believe in the miraculous power of this pure, exalted and pious young girl, have for her memory the most profound veneration. They hardly know her name. They call him 'the husband of Mademoiselle.'

THE END.

An Incident of Travel.

'All full, sir! Sorry. But I guess you'll manage to stand the pegt fifty miles!' Mr. Smith, the spruce young conductor on the Central Railway Cars, ushered in a decrepid, shabby attired old man, who leaned wearily on his staff, and carried a heavy valise in his hand.

The long, dingy third car was full; every seat was occupied; hand-bags and carpet-bags were held in their owners' laps, and there was no possible chance for the new comer to be accommodated.

A couple of score of faces lifted themselves to glance at the old man's face, as he moved slowly and painfully down the passage. It was plainly evident that he had as much as he could do to support himself, and besides he looked like one that was just recovering from a severe illness—his cheeks were thin and pale, his eyes lacked the fire which ought to sparkle beneath those large and strongly marked brows. There were many well, active looking, healthy young men in the car, but not one felt disposed to renounce his soft, comfortable seat to the shabby old traveller. They visited a stare of undisguised contempt, each and all dropped their eyes and thought no more of the suffering old man before them. In this enlightened country it is a notorious fact, that the aged meet with slights and incivilities, to say nothing of positive unkindness, which would have put the barbarous nations of old to shame.

Fitz James Eustace, a young exquisite, who was escorting his cousin, Isabella Winchester, to Nahant, drew down his mouth until the ends of his dapper collared moustaches rested on the tips of his well starched dickey, and remarked to the lady sitting by his side:

'Really, Mr. Smith is insulting us! Why cannot he find a place for that wretched specimen in the second class car?'

A flush, perhaps of pride—perhaps anger—mounted to the white forehead of Miss Winchester. She put up her hand as though to check the speaker, and said in a subdued voice:

'Fitz James, will you give that gentleman your seat?'

'My dear Isabel! Why, I would not evacuate my place by your side for a kingdom! Let the old fellow stand it out—it won't damage his appearance much, I'll be bound!'

'Then I will trouble you to rise a moment. I prefer the other side of the seat. Allow me to pass, if you please.'

Fitz James, over a thought of disputing the will of his imperious cousin, and he stood up to let her go out. But instead of taking the seat which her escort had occupied, the lady walked straight on, until she reached the side of the neglected old gentleman. The touch of her hand on his arm drew his attention toward her.

'Sir, will you have the goodness to take the seat which I have vacated? I have ridden since early this morning, and am wearied with sitting so long. Pray oblige me.'

The old man's face brightened, and he cast a grateful look into the eyes of the handsome lady.

'But, madam, you must be weary; I cannot accept it.'

She made an imperial gesture. Miss Winchester was always accustomed to have her way.

'No, sir; I am well, young and strong. I should be ashamed to sit while a man of your age and health remained standing.'

'Thank you! Your kindness is well timed and not thrown away, I venture to tell you. I shall accept your offer of gratitude.'

So saying, the old gentleman sank into the vacant seat with a well satisfied expression of countenance, but Fitz James expressed his unbounded contempt for his neighbor by drawing his ample ragins closely around and shrinking nearer to the side of the car. The stranger looked at him with quiet scorn.

'You need not trouble yourself to slip through the window young man,' said he, in a tone of irony.

Fitz James was thoroughly disgusted.—He could art endure such vulgar propinquity. So he arose quickly, and standing over his companion, made the best of his way into the smoking car.

Miss Winchester's conduct had been witnessed by all in the carriage, and a dozen seats were offered by a dozen polite and officious young men, but she declined them by a motion of the hand, and remained leaning against the side of the vehicle.

The train flew onward—the old gentleman meanwhile disposing himself to a comfortable nap, which he was shortly enjoying. Every few minutes the lights of Boston gleamed through the darkness; another moment and the train thundered into the depot.

'Quick! a Hack for General Sutherton!' 'Three cheers for the hero of Mexico!' rent the air. Banners trailed out in the fresh breeze; flambeaux flashed, drums beat, and a long line of carriages filed slowly up the street.

Fitz James inquired the occasion of all this stir, and learned that it was a public welcome extended by the citizens of Boston to General Sutherton, a gentleman, a veteran officer, who had signally distinguished himself in the late Mexican war.

'He came in this train,' said a bystander. 'Is it possible, sir, that you did not discover him? quickly looking old man, dressed in threadbare grey, and carrying a huge black valise. He has just recovered from a severe attack of malignant fever, which has troubled him ever since the last campaign. There the Mexican vapors, and sleeping on the cold ground, undermined his constitution; but he is a fine old fellow yet.'

Miss Winchester thought he must be; she had heard much of his gallant daring; but Fitz James' was the picture of silent mortification.

Miss Winchester said the coach stopped at the American House, and early the next morning, before the lady had finished dressing, a card was brought up a note bearing her address. Isabel tore it open and then put the cards of invitation to a ball to be given at the Revere, that evening in honor of General Sutherton. One card bore the name of Fitz James, the other was directed to herself. She had no acquaintances in Boston, consequently the invitation must have been sent at the instance of the General himself.

Fitz James was surprised and humiliated at this mark of distinction, for he could not but realize that the invitation, had been extended to him solely to save his cousin's feelings. But notwithstanding this, he wished to accept it, if only to have an opportunity of excusing his yesterday's impoliteness to the man.

The journey to Nahant was deferred for one day; and early that evening the cousins were at the Revere, where a brilliant coterie had already assembled.

General Sutherton, reclining in an arm chair at the head of the great drawing room, received his friends as they passed by, one giving place to another; but when Isabel was presented, he detained her hand to say: 'Please sit down on this ottoman by my side; I have a relative here to whom I wish to present you.'

It was not long before a singular handsome young man came up to the General, smiling a friendly welcome and the veteran, turning to Isabella, said:

'Miss Winchester, allow me to present you to my son, Alfred Sutherton, who is very grateful for the kindness which you last evening bestowed upon his father.'

The young man bowed and the father continued:

'Whenever I see a young person voluntarily render respect to aged, I am constrained to admire him or her, as a relic of the good old politeness which reigned over show and heartlessness when I was a lad. It is all hollow ceremony now, my dear; and, if the old man cannot stand without assistance, he is thrown down and trodden upon. But there is a march, or my ears deceive me. Alfred, do you need a father hint, or must your rheumatic old father set you an example of courtesy?'

The young man started and colored, for he had been gazing so intently on the rare beauty of Miss Winchester, that he had forgotten time and place.

'If Miss Winchester will permit me,' he said, offering his arm—and a moment more and they were lost in the throng of promenaders. Mr. Sutherton seemed bent on showing his gratitude to the lady for the kindness she had rendered to his father, for he scarcely quitted her side during the evening, and at the close of the week he followed her to Nahant, where he continued for two months, the bete noir of Fitz James and an enemy of all the young fops who aspired to the hand and fortune of the beautiful Miss Winchester.

Fitz James Eustace had long been his cousin's suitor, and it was with ill concealed chagrin that he now saw him all thrown into the shade by the son of that unrefined specimen, who ought to have found a place out of decent people's company.

Early in the New Year there was a marriage ceremony performed in the old South Church, and Alfred Sutherton was the groom and Isabella Winchester was the bride. An elegant house on Beacon street received the young couple, for Alfred is engaged in business in Boston and every year the hale old General comes down from his house in N—— to visit his children.

So you see that politeness gained a husband for one woman; and it will bring happiness to all, if they will but practice it; for true politeness springs from the heart, and it is but the effervescence of a kindly Christian spirit anxious to promote the well being of those with whom it comes in contact.

How Smith Asked the Old Man.

Smith had just asked Mr. Thompson's daughter if she would give him a lift out of bachelordom, and she had said 'Yes.'

It therefore became absolutely necessary to get the old gentleman's permission, so, as Smith said, the arrangements might be made to hop the conjugal twig.

Smith said he'd rather pop the interrogatory to all of old Thompson's daughters, and his sisters, and his lady cousins, and his aunt Hannah, in the country, and the whole of his female relations, than ask old Thompson. But it had to be done, and so he sat down and studied out a speech which he was to disgorge at old Thompson, the very first time he got a chy at him. So Smith dropped in on him one Sunday evening, when all the family had meandered around to meeting, and he found him doing a sum in bees memore.

'How are you, Smith?' said old Thompson, as the former walked in white as a piece of cbalk, and trembling as if he had swallowed a condensed earthquake.

Smith was afraid to answer, 'cause he wan't sure about that speech. He knew he had to keep his grip on it while he had it there, or it would slip from him quicker than an oiled eel through an auger hole. So he blurted out:

'Mr. Thompson, sir: Perhaps it may not be unknown to you, that during an extended period of some five years, I have been busily engaged in the prosecution of a commercial enterprise—'

'Is that so, and keeping it a secret all this time, while I thought you were tendin' store? Well, by George, you're one of them now, isn't you?'

Smith began to think it all over again, to get the run of it.

'Mr. Thompson, sir: Perhaps it may not be unknown to you that during the extended period of five years, I have been busily engaged in the prosecution of a commercial enterprise, with the determination to procure a matrimonial partner—'

'Sit down, Smith, and take yourself to bed. Don't stand there holdin' your hat, like a blind beggar with parralysis. I never hate pets, you behave yourself so queer as all my born days.'

Smith had been knocked out again, and so he had to wander back again and take a fresh start.

'Mr. Thompson, sir: It may not be unknown to you that during an extended period of five years I have been engaged in the prosecution of a commercial enterprise, with the determination to procure a matrimonial partner—'

'A which ance?' asked old Thompson, but Smith held on to the last word as if it was his only chance, and went on:

'In the hope that some day I might enter wedlock, and bestow my early possessions upon one whom I could call my own. I have been a lonely man, sir, and have felt that it is not good for man to be alone; therefore I would—'

'Neither is it, Smith; I'm glad you dropped it. How's the old man?'

'Mr. Thompson, sir,' said Smith, in despairing confusion, raising his voice to a yell, 'It may not be unknown to you that during an extended period of a lonely man, I have been engaged to enter wedlock, and bestowed all my enterprise on one whom I could determine to be good for certain possessions—go, I mean—that is—that Mr. Thompson, it may not be unknown'—

'And then again it may. Look here, Smith, you'd better lay down and take another hitch warm, you ain't well.'

Smith, twisting like a fiver gone old cuss, went in again.

'Mr. Thompson, sir, it may be lonely to you to prosecute one whom you a friend for a commercial maintenance, but—but—ch—dang it—Mr.—Mr. Thompson, sir, it—'

'Oh, Smith, you talk like a fool. I never saw a more first class idiot in the course of my whole life. What's the matter with you, anyhow?'

'Mr. Thompson, sir,' said Smith, frantic with despair, 'it may not be unknown to you that my possessions are engaged to enter wedlock five years with a sufficiently lonely man, who is not good for a commercial maintenance—'

'The very deuce he isn't. Now you just get up and get, or I'll knock what little brains out of you you've got left.'

With that, old Thompson took Smith and shot him into the street as if he'd run him against a locomotive going at the rate of forty miles an hour. Before old Thompson had time to shut the front door, Smith collected his legs and one thing and another that were lying around on the pavement, arranged himself in a vertical position, and yelled out:

'Mr. Thompson, sir: It may not be known to you'—which made the old man so wretched mad that he went out and set a bull terrier on Smith before he had a chance to lift a brogan, and there was a scientific dog fight with odds in favor of the dog, for he had an awful hold for such a small animal.

Smith afterwards married the girl and lived happily about two months. At the end of that time he told a confidential friend he would willingly take more trouble and undergo a million more dog fights to get rid of her.

Dark Stables.

Any person who has felt the pain and inconvenience of coming suddenly from a dark room into the full blaze of day, will easily conceive the necessity of lighting a stable in a proper manner. This is too often neglected in confined stables, and the consequences are most distressing to a humane observer. The poor horse, led suddenly out to his work, shows his pain quickly in unmistakable expressions, stumbles, and runs against anything that may happen to be near, until the eye has in some degree accommodated itself to the new circumstances under which it is placed. Nor is this all. By a continuance of this change from darkness to sudden daylight, the eyes become seriously injured.

The retina, or sensitive nerve, becomes dull, and more or less useless. The horse's sight is injured; he starts and shies at objects which he sees imperfectly, and many a rider who has received a dangerous injury has to thank his inattention to this simple cause, rather than any violent habit of the animal, to which it has been attributed.

Blindness is almost certain to be caused by inattention to the above caution, but even blindness is less dangerous to the rider than imperfect sight.—C Farmer.

Gossip for the Ladies.

WOMAN'S LOVE.

It has often been said that women love better than men; but I think this more than doubtful. They love more in extremes, they are more absorbed by their passion while it lasts; but weight for weight a man's love is the strongest, though not the most overwhelming. Does this sound like a paradox? It is a simple fact in psychology. Excess does not necessarily prove the strength of any passion, for nothing is so tyrannical as a weak passion of a weak mind. Men will not give up everything for love as women will; and yet their love is larger in amount, if not in proportion. Women will give up reason and common sense for their love. They are more ready to make bad marriages than men are to abandon their career; the two things being the same in result. And yet women are as ambitious as men, if in a different way from that of them; and as fond of all the results of success. And yet again, the woman who will run off with a groom, or elope from her husband with another man—and surely in either case she gives proof enough of the reality and extent of her love—will not give up a fashion she likes or a folly he dislikes, though she will ab

Spain and the United States.

Relations between Spain and the United States are assuming an aspect which promises to be yet more exciting. The conduct of the Washington government in reference to the Cuban insurrection, and the detention, for no well defined reason, of thirty Spanish gunboats which have been built and paid for in the United States, have led not only to some warm communications between the two governments, but to the actual presence of a Spanish fleet in New York harbor. The Numancia, with the Victoria of 20 guns, and the Lealtad of 52—two fully of the first class—are now with in gunshot of the city, and an increase to the force is easily expected. It is a bold stroke on the part of general Prim, and has already struck the people of New York with consternation; while their monitors and armed steamers have been ordered round by the authorities at Washington to balance matters and restore confidence. General Grant is playing a hazardous game, and he may yet live to find in the blood of old Castile a more redoubtable foe than that he now affects to despise. It is beyond doubt that a declaration of war is not at all a remote contingency, unless some unforseen influence or some unexpected change in the policy of the United States should speedily intervene. Spain demands her gunboats with a fleet of iron-clads, and if she meet with refusal General Prim is not the man to waste much time in effort to take them by force. His conduct is plausible based and promptly, and he will not lose in; in that case if the fleet should to sack it will not be till New York has paid very dearly for the rashness. The batteries in the harbor are practically worthless against modern ships such as Spain has there, and if a bombardment of New York should be the first act of a war, we shall have to witness a contest where, if one power has nothing to lose the other can have nothing to gain. America cannot carry the war into Europe—and dare not try, even if she could—and Spain having to commerce to destroy, would bring immense destruction upon American interests at sea, and upon American property on land. The United States complained sorely of the depredations of one Alabama; a fleet of such vessels would rout Spain commercially nothing, and would test the powers of the American navy to the utmost. In fact although America may aspire to sustain the power of Spain, the circumstances of the two countries put the States at an immense disadvantage. Spain's strength lies in her weakness, and with justice on her side to give her the moral support of public sympathy she could accomplish greater injury upon the United States than all their energies could counter balance. Let us hope that these considerations will weigh duly with the Washington government and that in satisfy a restless clamor General Grant will not rush headlong into a contest which cannot bring honor or any material advantage to his country, but will most assuredly cause it to suffer great loss, besides impeding the progress of civilization and adding to the already oppressive burdens of the American people.—Leader.

Dishonest Farmers.

It is almost incredible that our Toronto produce dealers should have discovered within the past few weeks, a systematic scheme of fraud practiced by a number of farmers that are in the habit of bringing barley into this market. The swindle—of which there is evidence overwhelmingly strong in the mixture of several waggon loads of damaged grain at the lower wharves of the Port, takes the form:—Some fair samples of grain are reserved to be put in the mouth of the bag,—which is first lined in the inside with a coating of lime (tank poison for man or beast)—the lime helping at once to whiten and to draw the moisture from the damaged grain with which the bag is all but filled, or so filled as to leave room for the sample covering on the top. Hundreds of loads of such rotten stuff, we are assured, have been found in the unsuspecting dealers here since the close of the harvest. And unless some sharp examples are made, the vile, atrocious fraud may still go on, with but a partial check. There ought indeed to be a law passed making such a fraud a felony punishable with five or ten years in the penitentiary. Ordinary stealing is a comparatively venial offence compared with this, and we earnestly desire that the Government should give its subject their attention.—Toronto Telegraph.

Bank Robbery of $300,000.

The Boylston National Bank was entered between Saturday night and Monday morning, and a sweep made of all the valuables on deposit in the outer vaults, mostly belonging to private individuals. These valuables were chiefly in United States bonds, and were contained in twenty or thirty tin trunks, belonging to as many individuals. It is not possible now to give the precise sum of money taken, as the bank officers do not know just what amount the depositors individually had on hand, but it is believed by the cashier that from four hundred thousand to half a million dollars have been stolen.

In October last a man giving his name as W. A. Judson, hired a room adjoining the bank as a dealer in "California Wine Bitters," putting in a large stock of bottles thus labelled, and constructed a secret vault to the safe wall, which was of brick two feet thick. At this point the masonry was found drilled through and the debris removed. The iron casing to the safe was then bored, probably during Saturday night and Sunday, enabling the operator to reach the property in the outer compartment of the safe. The property stolen as previously stated, was in some thirty tin boxes, and on shelves, and deposited by individuals for safe keeping. No funds of the bank were taken.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position or honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its instrumentality lives have been rescued, as it by command, of a separation, and united by wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer" consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Cincinnati Christian Advocate.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The School Bills are the only ones of importance yet brought before the Parliament of Ontario, during the present session, and in justice to the representatives of the people, they appear determined to mark progress very exactly in the matter of education.

The Grammar School Bill has received a second reading, and will no doubt become law, but in a modified form from that in which it was first presented to the public. The objections to it are that the changes are looked upon as tending to destroy the small Grammar Schools of the villages. We can hardly think that Dr. Ryerson contemplates any such thing in his Bill. From the discussion on the Bill, and the interest manifested we need not fear results. The Country requires the smaller institutions as well as the large ones. Not a few of these small Grammar Schools have done a noble work in preparing teachers for their work, and to cut them off would tend in no small degree to limit the number of teachers; as many young men and young women go to the grammar if near home, that would never do so if they had to go to the towns or cities.

The new law contemplates fixing the average number necessary to enable these schools to draw government aid at twenty pupils. We believe this average is too high, although it may appear that to pay a teacher for teaching a less number is paying very dearly for the education of those pupils.—but when it is taken into consideration that the parents who patronize these save a large item in the way of pupils boarding at home, it will be understood that at the end education is as cheap there as in larger schools.

The Common School Bill was to be taken up in committee of the whole yesterday, when it would be modified in some of the details.

It is not wise, however, to grant some of the sweeping changes pr posed; nor should County Superintendents be clothed with too much power. The people are deeply interested in the education of their children:—The country willingly submits to be taxed for the support of common schools, and this spirit has so far increased that wherever education is required, the people gladly meet all the expenses almost without a word.—Any radical change, therefore, is altogether uncalled for.

It is contrary to the wish of the people to establish a minimum salary, and it will be found to have the very contrary effect to that intended,—the increase of salaries, as to induce good teachers to remain in the profession. The trustees in some instances have got it into their heads that this minimum is a maximum, and they are afraid to exceed it for fear of violation of the law.—When a certain sum is mentioned in a statute they are but too willing to try to make that sum the highest limit to which they can go.

The change from Local to County Superintendents meets with no opposition, but there is a strong desire to give the County Council the power of appointing. It is generally believed that Superintendents who are already appointed for Counties will be eligible to re-appointment, if the County Councils are favorable to their re-election. It is almost useless to speculate on the Bill at this stage. In committee it will undergo modification, but it is a great pity that the government did not bring in a consolidated School Bill. It is now found almost impossible to understand the law, it has multiplied so much patch-work.

Under the new law, arbitration will be done away. Disputes will be settled in Division Court. This will be a great boon to Superintendents, as it will save them from coming into contact with contending parties some of whom are always sure to blame him for all their ills. If the compulsory clause, which will prove, if passed, a dead letter, the giving of a minimum salary, and the clause necessitating fifty pupils of school age in a section, and a few minor alterations be effected, we have no doubt but that the new law will be found to work better than anticipated by those who are afraid of changes.

The Drainage Bill is its proposed shape was strongly opposed by Mr. Blake and others, on the ground that it gave the government too much power, to contract for work, whether municipalities were willing to undertake the work, and that in consequence the cost would never be collected.—

At the receipt of latest intelligence the House was discussing the subject of Woollen Railways.

We have been requested to announce that the next meeting of the Teachers' class will be held in the Union School School, on Saturday, 4th Dec. Subjects—Reading, "First Crumble;" Grammar, "First Crumble;" Arithmetic, Arithmetical and Geometrical Progression; Euclid, Book III.; Algebra, Quadratics.

At a late meeting at Cavan on the project of separating the East Riding of North umberland, from the County, and forming it into a County by itself, was strongly condemned.

The Celebration of St. Andrew's Day in Peterborough.

The Rev. Mr. Macdonell preached the annual anniversary sermon this year, in the Free Church (Mr. Roger's) on Sunday evening.

THE NIGHT.

The sons and daughters of auld Scotia celebrated the anniversary of their patron Saint in the evening by holding a Conversazione in the Music Hall; an institution on the long established customs of Scotsmen, and as consequences was kept about them by a few. Yet it was a grand success—and the promoters of the Conversazione deserve the thanks of the Society and of the public, for one of the most pleasing entertainments that has been given in Town. And one too, that every Scot should be proud of.

The hall was beautifully arranged with tartan plaid all around it, and several engravings of Scottish scenery and cities.

One of the most attractive features of the evening, was the large number of ladies that graced the celebration with their presence, and sang the songs of dear Old Scot a with voices more eloquent, and ten times more enchanting, than even her most learned sons might hope to do.

The fact is, let the southern and daughters and sisters of Scotsmen, sing Her Songs, to the same, and sun's same, of that land so loved in story; and never will the distant and dearly cherished homes be forgotten, by those who have left it, nor her glory remain unsung by those who claim a lineal descent from Caledonians.

The Address of the President of the Society, T. H. Fairbairn, Esq., Barrister, &c., was very appropriate, and the style, chaste and eloquent. The following is a synopsis of the

ADDRESS:

For many years it has been the happy privilege of the members of our Peterboro St. Andrew's Society to meet together on this day in honor of Scotland's Patron Saint. On former occasions we usually dined together, and although the dinner was unquestionably the leading feature of the entertainment, in reality, the "feast of reason and the flow of soul" formed the chief attraction. It was thought by some that a festival might be arranged for, in which, as Scotchmen, we could meet together for a few hours of social intercourse, and be brought face to face with the happy associations of the past, in the presence of lady friends, and the meeting to night is the result of an experiment in that direction. In the old orthodox manner of celebrating St. Andrew's Day, we generally managed by a liberal subdivision of labor to devote a goodly portion of "the returning three-and-a-thousand years." In a number of well selected toasts, many of them rich in sentiment, subjects were presented which comprehended a vast field of thought. We had, for instance, "The land o' cakes," under the presiding influence of which many a really freighted pilgrimage has been made in thought from this trans-atlantic home of ours, to the cloud-capped hills and lovely vales of Scotia. We had also "The Heroes and Bards of Scotland," a theme upon which as true Scot is ever tired dwelling. We have often listened, and are ever ready again to listen to the soul stirring reverences to the "blood anointed tartan," which has so frequently, in silent eloquence, expressed a fidelity to truth and liberty. And while the first branch of the subject was so well calculated to fan the flame of devotion to our parent land that glows within us, the other branch led me to a subject to which we always found ever increasing delight. One subject was to present Scotland and the history of the Scotch nation and thought to the minds of our countrymen. We hope to accomplish the same object to-night, though in a different way. We are to enjoy a banquet of Scotch song. The Bards of Scotland, who have sung so sweetly to us of the —Scenes from which auld Scotia's grandeur springs,

That makes her loved at home, revered abroad;

Who knows so well how to reach our home affections, and touch the springs of deep emotion within us, are present to-night, with some of their happiest productions. Scotland's songs never fail to wind a "line of soul," and I promise that in the introduction to the second part of our programme, we shall be treated to a "feast of reason."—It sang and story, if the happy scenes before us, and the many memories of earlier years that break upon us, fail to quicken our national sympathies, we shall prove ourselves remarkably unimpressible.

We must not and do not forget that we have with us many representatives of other lands, our three welcome guests.

We "love ane" these "the less, but" Scotland more.

"From these interviews, in which we stand" away from the rest of the world, to dikey thoughts and scenes wholly Scottish—and I think I may venture to hope that my words will find an echo in the hearts of every "one present." When I express the desire that we Scotsmen shall all leave this place to night with our heart-strings it possible more firmly knitted in filial affection to the land of our sires.

The speaker then made a brief allusion to the state of the Society, which is in the highest degree prosperous.

The songs of the ladies' made the evenings entertainment very pleasant. And the music, readings, recitations and addresses were excellent, and most suitable for the occasion.

"Ye Banks and Braes," by Mrs. Henry Strickland and Mrs. Walter Strickland, was beautifully rendered.

"When the Kye came Hame" was sung by Mrs. Macdonell and was deservedly encored. The singing of this lady during the evening was exceedingly well received, especially did Scotsmen admire the rendering of "Fine Caller Herrin," by this lady.

Mrs. A. H. Campbell also sung several Scottish airs, and her clear, distinct delivery lends a charm to the performance, that sounds, no matter how sweet, never can be.

Rev. Mr. Macdonell read "Edinburgh after Flodden," and Mr. Finney, the "Epistle to Davie"; both of these were well received.

Mr Rosbo Way's recitation of "The Lady of the Lake" added very much to the amusement and pleasure of the entertainment, and notwithstanding that the bandishing of his dagger seemed to alarm the ladies who sat near him, they enjoyed the recitation exceedingly well.

A. H. Campbell, Esq, also delivered an address at the commencement of the second part of the entertainment, in which, in the most eloquent and chaste diction, he referred to the occasion on which they were assembled; to the presence of the ladies; to the "Land of brown heath and shaggy wood."

and to the sons of Scotland who had left their homes to fight for fortune in distant climes, in which they had succeeded beyond the people of almost any other nation. In stirring and pathetic eloquence he referred to their love of country, and attachment to brother Scot; to their past labors in the cause of religion and liberty; to their graves on the battlefields; to the music of Scotland's poets; and to the blood of her martyrs in the cause of freedom and liberty of conscience, and to the many spots in the "land of the heather and daisy of the hill," wherever they are, whose remembrances are well calculated to ensure a place in Scottish hearts.

After the "feast of reason and the flow of soul" all sat down to splendid entertainment, provided by Mr. A. Hall, under superintendence of the committee appointed by the Society. The tables were arranged on the sides of the hall, and were very neatly and abundantly spread with good things, of which all partook. There was nothing there but—"the cups that cheer, not to inebriate."

Just after refreshments were served the following toast were read by Mr. Telford:

TOASTS

For St. Andrew's Society, Peterboro'.

By WM TELFORD, Esq Reeve of the Society.

A POOR SCOTCHMAN'S FIRST AND SECOND VIEW OF CANADA.

When Scotia sets fit on this shore
An feels as he an' a' their wave,
His leg, bright hopes grows dark an' drear,
Bain's place an' he's back mean queer.
As up Ontario Lake he rides,
He glowers for meadows on its side,
Instead of them he fin's nane
But muckle stanes an' serveta trees.
Should he git up as far as here,
He tells his grief wi' een ah bleer,
Ca'en Canada some ugly name,
An' wishes he was safe at hame.
Up to the sun he tosses his gane,
Ha'f thinkes he maun be roasted,
Roasted wi heat, an' jeered wi' scorn,
He hears fo'he ca'en him a greenhorn.
Leah, wae, but nicht upsets him fair;
Big bugs—as savage as a bear,
An' long snored chaps, who thought him gull
Blaunt on'selves his drap bluid.
Hame sickness preys upon his mind—
The pleasant scenes he left behind,
An' friends who was nae loath to part,
Or whiles nae dear to his heart.
He looks for hedges red wi' haws,
Or sig cleared field as Scotia's was.
The zig-zag fences take their place,
White stumps and stanes the fields deface.
He finds employment wi' good pay;
This helps his troubles to allay,
An' shortly he begins to crow,
Ca'en Canada's no bad ava,
Through time he gits mair accliimated,
His gall and spee at ca'ts him elated;
The' slow, he creeps up by degrees,
Makes and saves his bawbees,
He finds that Canada's the spot
To suit the canny thrifty Scot.
He tells, till he has ma'ile gain
As buys a bit hame o' his ain.
Wi' ramj'n pooch he loaded here,
Now he has lands an' tilla clear;
A wife an' bairds plays round his hame,
He stands, then says blest day's came.
Some Scots o' every rank an' trade
In Canada guid hames ha' made.
Lord o' their choice they live fa dear,
Still Scotia in their heart is near.
Wad you ask proof if a' was right,
Just hand yer leg up here the night
An' hear what Scots ha' got to say
O' that bit isle sa' far away.
Not to tewall o'er Scotia's ills,
Far less to praise her brethern lills;
Nor speak o' Burns that sta sa' clear,
They brought sa' mana de mak wars here;
They com' to hail St. Andrew's night,
An' pu the cord o' friendship tight.
Let rank an' station be forgot,
That Scot may chat wi' brither Scot.
I this society wish guid speed,
The needs Scots to claith an' feed;
Long may ye ha' the cash on hand
To meet sik worthy Scot's demand.

LINES, BY REQUEST, BEARING REFERENCE TO THE LADIES.

See ye hae changed your plan this year,
O' this night's celebration;
A'see baith wives an' lassies here,
To prove their Scotch relation.

A' often thought, tho' ma-be wrang,
Their presences was wanted;
For sweeter voices chanted.

Why trace Auld Scotia's history through,
In times o' persecution,
There you will find the women true
Aft de'ls in actions.

If there's a Scotchman here the night
Ashamed o' wife or lassie,
Gang thrang his head wi' a' yer might,
Or some rale hard stane ca'ens.

Around one's ain fireside they find
The greatest sum of comforts;
When joy or grief disturbs the mind,
Their kind words were awarnin'.

Then bring them to sic nights as this,
That's a guid fore opinion;
Without them there is little bliss
Throughout this hale Dominion.

After the address of the poet, the ladies again favored with several songs. Mrs. Macdonell accompanied on the piano. The evenings proceedings were brought to a close by singing "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem.

The president then returned thanks to the ladies for their valuable services, and to Prof. Waterford for the assistance he so readily had given towards making the evening pleasant and these present happy.

The Rev Mr. Beck then returned thanks on behalf of the gue-ts for the kind invitations, and honored well merited praise on the whole proceedings.

There can be no doubt but this was one of the pleasantest St. Andrew's nights yet spent in Peterboro, both members and guests were delighted, and those songs of Scotia and patriotic addresses will do as much to perpetuate the name and fame of her sons as would toasts and speeches.

Mechanics' Institute Exhibition

The exhibition of Fine Art, fancy work, carpentry, &c., held last week in the Music Hall, reflects the greatest credit on its promoters, and those who kindly aided with paintings, pictures, &c., to make the undertaking successful.

Mr. Helm, and Mr. R. Helm, were unremitting in their efforts to make the exhibition attractive, Mr. H. contributing largely; Mrs. Helm also some very fine work. A stuffed canoe of Mrs. Helm's was very much admired. A case of fossil remains and Indian curiosities belonging to Sheriff Hall, obtained in Kamloops, and Chinese and Japanese curiosities kindly given by Mrs. F. Haultain, attracted the attention of almost every one.

The Sisters of the Convent of Notre Dame, also contributed needle and bead work, that was much admired. Rev. Mr. Beak pictures, and Mrs. Beak very nice needle work. Mr. Winship a case of fancy pipes.

C. A. Weller views of Italian scenery, and pictures of scenes of Rome and Venice, brought over by him. Mr. Heathfield contributed some very old pictures, and a cabinet said once to belong to Queen Charlotte. Excellent photographs from Mr. Thompson's gallery, and also some very fine ones from Mr. Berrie's and Mr. Sproule's galleries were kindly lent for the Exhibition. Several photograph paintings by Miss Sinnett were universally admired; consisting of Pictures of Mr. D. Brook and Mrs. Brick, Mr. R. Hamilton and Mrs. Hamilton, and Dr. Harvey and one of Miss Minnie Helm. Mr. Nelson, Lakefield, had a case of stuffed birds that appeared to be alive, though a long time dead. Mr. Nelson, evidently, is master of his art. Mr. Stevens's cases of butterflies were also very nice indeed.

The President, Mr. Helm, and Directors deserve great praise for their unshaking zeal to uphold the Mechanics' Institute. All the time and labor were given free. Mr. Hill also gave the hall at a very moderate rate, and was insolvent in his attendance during the whole week.

The proceeds of the exhibition amounted to $650.10, expenses were a little under $440.00, netting only $220.00, after all the gratuitous labour. Last year the exhibition proceeds amounted to $967.85, but the expenses were $617.75, thus netting only $320.10. Had the citizens patronized the exhibition as it deserved, this Institute might have realized a handsome sum. The following is a list of directors, whose names deserve to be remembered for their untiring zeal on behalf of the Mechanics' Institute Exhibition:—Mr. Helm, Mr. R. Helm, Mr. R. Rutherford, Mr. W. Johnston, Mr. John Erskine, Mr Robt. Johnston and Mr. Heathcote. We hope that if spared to another year a better success will crown their efforts.

CONCERT.—Prof. Waterford's Concert on Monday night was well attended. The programme was very good, and the performance generally very good. The very fine Piano, from the House of Messrs. A. & S. Nordheimer, made by Dunham & Co. N. Y. used on the occasion, was very much admired, and was sent before it left the Hall. The Messrs. Nordheimer supply the very best instruments manufactured.

Mr. Sprague is to be the new Chancellor in room of Mr. Vanenaghnet. Mr. Justice Gwynne is to be Vice Chancellor, and Speaker Cockburn is to be placed on the bench.

The members of St. Andrews' Society of Montreal, celebrated their anniversary day by a concert this year. In Cobourg they had a Ball. In Peterboro a Conversazione.

We invite attention to the card of Mr. J. Green, late of Scott and Green, who now commences the practice of law by himself. The partnership of Scott and Green being dissolved we understand.

The Church Herald calls attention to the abuse of the word "Evangelical," as used by a party in the Episcopal Church. We believe the Herald is right. The use of words in a contemptuous sense of their true them is not over christian in its tendency.

There was to be a great Railway Banquet in Port Hope last night. Reeves, Deputy Reeves, and leading men of Durham, and some Montreal merchants were invited.—We have not learned particulars yet.

PERSONAL.—We notice with pleasure that Mr. J. A. W. Hatton has passed a very creditable examination at Toronto, and has been admitted to practice at law. His card appears in another column.

We did not see the Two Headed Girl on Friday evening, but we saw the picture thereof. Guess its all right. The two heads we believe are as it took to look.—It is really a wonder of Nature's working.—

The committee of the Protestant Home thank the undersigned friends for donations during the past month. From a friend, three pairs of stockings and many other useful articles; Mr. White of Monaghan, quarter of mutton and a load.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening there will be a public debate in the club rooms. The following subject will be discussed. "Would Separation from the Mother Country be advantageous to the Dominion of Canada."—Affirmative Messrs Kidd, Haggart, J. B. Dixon, M. A., and Taylor. Negative Messrs Mason, Jonathan B. Dixon, Moore and McFaul.

Readers, Messrs. J. A. Hall and McFaul. The chair will be taken at 8 o'clock.—The public are respectfully invited to be present.

CURE FOR PILES. Dr J. Bolger's Pile Remedy is offered to the sufferers of the distressing disease, with a confidence warranted by its success for their relief. Sold by Druggists.

LITERARY NOTICES.

FRANK LESLIE'S MAGAZINE OF FASHION.—The December number of this excellent Fashion Magazine has been received. It is replete with plates, and the reading will be found entertaining to the lovers of fiction.—This magazine costs only $4.00 a year.

GOOD HEALTH.—The December number of Good Health is also before us and contains a variety of useful articles on hygiene, sanitary and medical subjects, written in a popular style by the most eminent men of the day. It is published by Abel Stevens Boston, and costs $2.00 a year. Too information given in Good Health is invaluable to those who obey its teachings.

THE CANADA FARMER.—The Canada Farmer is regularly received and is an excellent paper for winter readings, for farmers and gardeners, mechanics and all who desire information on almost every subject. It is published in a very convenient shape for binding, and would then be useful for future reference. It is only $1.00 a year, and can be ordered at Mr. Kidd's Book Store.

THE ONTARIO FARMER, published by Mr. Clark, is also a very useful serial on the farm, garden, dairy, &c., at $1.00 a year. Now is the time to subscribe for all these for winter reading.

BOLD ROBBERY.—A bold and daring robbery was perpetrated at Hatchet. Mr. Christian Shantel of Logan, with a friend, drove his team, and tied their horse, which was attached to a waiter, in the open shed of the C mmercial Hotel. About an hour later the animal was on shore to be found, and for a time it was supposed it managed to get untied and started for home. The owner at once returned to his place of residence, but found no traces of the animal. It was then ascertained that the horse was stolen, and enquiries was at once instituted upon b persons who was observed driving towards Sandwith with a horse and cutter answering the description of the missing property. By a telegraph received from Sandwith next morning, it was ascertained that the horse and cutter were in the village the previous afternoon, but were driven towards Carnarbeack late in the evening. One native constable, Mr. Coppen, at once started towards Carnarbeack, and to his joy found the missing animal in Mrs. Nevin's stable in that village, with harness and cutter all right, but minus a buffalo robe and two blankets. On enquiry he ascertained that the horse had been found without a driver, on the road between Middleton and Carnarbeack, at about two o'clock in the morning, and was placed in Mrs. Nevin's keeping. There is something very strange about the matter, and we hope that no stone will be left unturned to ferret out the thief and his accomplices, if he had any.—Advocate.

GUN ACCIDENT.—On Monday last an accident occurred on the premises of Mr. Francis Bushell, of the Township of Hamilton, which came very near resulting in the death of one of his family. The facts of the case are as follows:—Mr. Bushell discovered a strange dog among his sheep in the barnyard, and running to the house, brought out his gun to shoot him. Just as he fired, one of his little girls emerged from the barn door in the direction of the line of fire, and received part of the charge, one shot striking her in the breast, where it still remains; another penetrated the calf of her leg as far as to be felt from the opposite side, while one or two others took effect in other parts of the body. The escape from instant death was indeed marvellous; but we are happy to learn that no serious consequences are anticipated.—Guide.

Economy in women is an essential domestic virtue. Some women have a foolish love of expensive baubles; a taste which a very little care, probably, in their early education might have prevented. We are told that when a collection of three hundred and fifty pounds was made for the unfortunate Cossacks, to save her from absolute want, she immediately laid out two hundred pounds of the money in the purchase of a shell cap, which was then in fashion. Prudent mothers will act on showing any admiration of petty trinkets before their young daughters; and they will oppose the idea of sacrificing utility and durability to the mere caprice of fashion, which creates a taste for beauty, so it was, by proclamation. 'Such a thing is pretty but it will soon wear out,' a mother may say; and she should prove the truth of her assertions to her pupils.

VESSELS INJURED.—On Saturday evening about five o'clock the schooner Magdala of Mountsion left that Port for Oswego, loaded with lumber. The schooner White Oak left shortly afterwards and kept gaining gradually on the Magdala until about half past eight o'clock when at a distance of about six miles from Toronto light she attempted to pass to windward of the latter. Just then the steering apparatus of the Magdala gave way and consequently her head commenced to come up to the wind. The Captain of the Magdala hooted to the captain of the White Oak continued on her course and struck the bowsprit of the Magdala, which was snapped off close to, transom. The White Oak also had her mast rigging carried away. The Magdala lies at Wyatt's wharf waiting to have a new bowsprit put in.

TROOPS FOR CANADA.—It is reported that the service companies of the 81st Regiment, now stationed at Templemore, Ireland, are under orders to proceed to Canada. (Most probably to NOVA SCOTIA.)

MR. RICHARDS TO BE GOT RID OF.—The Leader is very severe on Mr. Richards, Commissioner of Crown Lands, and declares that he is an incubus on the Ontario Government, and must be cast aside. In answer to this, the Toronto Telegraph says:—

"Mr. Beaty of the Leader, is one of the largest land speculators we ever had in Canada. He has managed to secure mill sites, and the eye simple of town plots in North Wellington, Grey, &c., &c., where the Crown Lands Agents were his creatures or his partners, and he made heavily the depredations of stumpers on these Ritchen-peddings of the Department, which were known to him and his fellow speculators, in times past, almost as a matter of course.

It is no wonder, then that to Mr. Beaty, the presence of Mr. Richards in the Crown Lands Department has been, all along, and is now, exceedingly obnoxious. A few honest Crown Prosecutor than Mr. Richards would probably have aimed Mr. Beaty to pass almost scathless through that famous York Roads trial. What did Mr Richards do? He dared his victim alive; he sacrificed him beyond the point of human endurance; and now, thinks Mr. Beaty, has come his time and the opportunity for revenge. It is singular that Mr. Beaty would be so naughty as to persecute Mr Richards for taking care of the Public Domain, surely the Patent Combination can do no harm."

A London corre-pondent calls attention to the ignorance of the peasant class in England, of the advantages to be gained by emigration. In the great towns, information is readily circulated, and organization is comparatively easy, whilst means to assist the poorest operatives are to some extent forthcoming. The agricultural labourers would, it seems us, a reasonably large sum could be derived be their help, prove a great acquisition to the Colonies, and it would be well it, in giving effect to their promised efforts to promote immigration, the Government would direct special attention in this direction.

Whoever may now assume to rule over the North-West Territory—whether John Sprague or William McDougall is to be its Governor—the Hudson's Bay Company has formally abdicated, and is taken thereof assumed the name of "the Governor and Company of Adventurers of England trading in Hudson's Bay."

The propeller Colonist, on Montreal, bound from Milwaukee to Montreal with a cargo consisting of nine thousand bushels of wheat and fifteen hundred barrels of flour, sprung a leak on Lake Huron and sank twenty-five miles this side of the Straits of Mackinac. The crew were all saved.

Pectoral Pain, Chilblains, Corns, Bunions, Bad Nails, &c., are positively cured by the use of Dr. J. Briggs' Rodent Curative. This Remedy has been compounded with great care, and, used as directed, never fails. Sold by Druggists.

Consumption, try Dr. J. Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer. It will relieve and cure you.—Pectoral diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, causing no surprise its beneficial effects. Sold by Druggists.

SAD OCCURRENCE, ST. THOMAS, &c.—There appears to be something this time in the engineering going on about St Domingo. New York papers except that both the Spanish part of the Island, burning the above name, and the French part, Hayti, will shortly be quietly annexed to the United States, with the approval of the people themselves, who have been long enough tormented with anxious but bloody internecine wars. We observe also a report that the treaty with Denmark for the cession of St Thomas is at last to be ratified; and, of Cuba falls into the United States, in addition to the above-mentioned Island, which is not at suddenly, the Great Republic will have a far greater interest in the West Indies than any other nation. It will also be able in a great measure to control the sugar trade of the world. The Knights of the Golden Circle, who seek to extend the United States authority and slavery all round and over the Gulf of Mexico, may yet have their dreams realized, in part at least, among the slavery.

FENIAN DEMONSTRATIONS IN IRELAND.—Despatches of the 27th ult., from Cork, Dublin and Tipperary, reports that there have been several Fenian demonstrations in various parts of Ireland to-day.—At Tipperary and Clonmel the proceedings were riotous. Fenian songs were sung by the mob while marching in procession, and several houses along the line of march were stoned and riddled. At Cork this evening the partizans of Mr. Rossa celebrated that gentleman's election to parliament with a grand torch-light procession and other proceedings. Everything passed off without disturbance.

The North West.—It is more than probable that Lieut Colonel Charles De Salaberry will proceed to the North West on an important mission. He is well acquainted with the character of the population among whom he had left many favorable remembrances. He will be accompanied on this peculiar mission by three or four French Canadians who have already been in that territory, and their departure will take place shortly.

MARRIED

On the 1st December, by the Rev. Edward Roberts, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr James Hull Mann, to Miss Martha, youngest daughter of Isaac Garbutt, Esq., all of the Township of Smith.

The happy pair left yesterday by the train on a wedding tour to Montreal and other cities eastward.

At Dover, on Monday, 22nd of November, by Rev. D. O'Connell, Thomas Sarsfield LeHane, Esq., Postmaster, Emigsmore, to Johanna, daughter of John Sullivan, Esq., Dover.

At Springville, on the 25th ult., Mr. Jas. Eastwood, to Miss Lucinda Kennedy, both of Cavan.

DIED.

At Peterboro, on the 28th ult., Wm. J. Edwards, (second son of Jas. Edwards, Esq.) aged 30 years.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes meet persons say, 'my horse is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ig orant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it and readily that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Horse Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hiram Acton, is on each package Northrup & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

SATAN'S WAPING.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds so gos, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

CATARRH, is a disease which distresses and disgusts our friends, can be instantly relieved and quickly cured by using Dr. J. Briggs' Allevator, an invaluable remedy for all pain and inflammation. Sold by Druggists.

FILL LAMPS IN THE MORNING.—Scarcely a week passes but we read accounts of frightful accident from between lamps exploding and falling, or adhering for life women and children. A simple knowledge of the inflammable nature of the fluid will probably put a stop to nearly all the accidents. As the oil burns down into the lamp, slightly inflammable gas gathers over its surface, and as the oil is nearly consumed a slight jar will often ignite the gas, and an explosion is sure to follow—death and destruction. A bowlful is no more to be dreaded. None of the lamp is not allowed to burn more than half-way down each article are almost impossible. Always fill your lamps every morning; then you never need fear an explosion.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbors, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate union was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations "in time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its occasion, and the frequent convulsive twitchin s. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr J. Briggs' Allevator, according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 2 & Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

PILES are a very common affection, there being but few persons who are not troubled with them at some period of their life. The disease exists in small tumors in the rectum or about the anus, which are divided into, first, those which are owing to a distended state of the part, and, second, those which present the character of a solid tumor. When the tumors are within the rectum, they are called internal piles; when without and around the anus, external. When they discharge blood they are termed bleeding piles, and when no blood appears, blind piles. Dr. J Briggs' Pile Remedy, remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction All who have tried it do not hesitate to say it is superior to anything they have ever used for this disease. Sold by Druggists and Country Merchants generally. Dr J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, No. 206 Broadway, N. Y. and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.—The memory of Dr Wistar is embalmed in the hearts of thousands whom his Balsam of Wild Cherry has cured of coughs, colds, consumption, or some of or form of Pulmonary disease. It is now over forty years since this preparation was brought before the public, and yet the demand for it is constantly increasing.

A CLERGYMAN writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of the Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the fiend Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL.

—Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using Hunt's Kerias Hair Gloss, excepel, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy Hence the efforts of certain venders of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIGHTS. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but use only genuine. Beware of Counterfeits.

A MYSTERY
AT
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As engrossed I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
Where beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow—lying on the ground!
Though no other feature claimed,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Go ed friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for the messenger of news?
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sign was uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'
'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down securely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Oh, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And had some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me then to purchase

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Match'less Boots and Shoes.

SEWING MACHINES!

IT is becoming a more fully established fact every day that there cannot be found a more labor saving or useful article in any household than a SEWING MACHINE. It is therefore of the first importance to get a good one, and to understand it thoroughly at the first commencement; this cannot be done where they are bought at a distance, or from peddlers. By buying at the PETERBOROUGH SEWING MACHINE ROOMS, over T. Donald's Store, you get any of the first class Genuine Machines now in use, at less than city prices for cash, and receive instruction FREE from a lady in charge of the machines who gives the business her whole attention.

Needles, Oil, Shuttles, Springs, &c., with a large assortment of large and small machines, constantly on hand.

☞ Every Machine tested and warranted.

Poetry.

Norah, the Pride of Dundee.

To the shores of sweet Scotland, where the sunlight's bright dawn,
Sleeps her rays on a cottage that stands on the lawn;
My thoughts wander freely, for there I would be,
With my own darling Norah, the pride of Dundee!

Oh, sweet is the tie of affection's strong bands
That binds me to one in a far distant land,
The sound of the bag-pipe comes far o'er the sea,
And tells me of Norah, the pride of Dundee.

Her eyes like the stars that now gleam in the sky,
And dazzle with beauty that never can die;
Her voice is sweet music, her heart light and free,
And the sweet smile of Norah, the pride of Dundee.

Though far I may wander from Scotland's high land,
I'll return again, Norah, to claim thy warm hand,
I'll return to the cottage far, far, o'er the sea,
And claim darling Norah, the pride of Dundee.

Again we will climb up the high, lofty hills
Amond rugged rocks, jump o'er swift running rills;
We'll list to the notes of the shepherd with glee,
As he plays on his lute for the pride of Dundee.
The [illegible] breath hath at night and at morn,
And of the thatched cottage that stands on the lawn;
She's the bright flower of Scotland, so happy and free,
She's my own darling Norah, the pride of Dundee.

Oh, give me the cottage on Scotland's bright shore,
The home of my youth I so fondly adore,
There beams the bright smile that is sunlight to me,
The smile of sweet Norah, the pride of Dundee

An Irishman employed about a store in Boston was one day equally surprised and delighted by the entrance of an old acquaintance. After a few minutes' jollification, the caller left, when Pat's employer said to him:

'So, Pat you knew that chap in the old country?

'Och, an' shure did I? it's lucky the day I met wid him here. It's a fine boy he is, wid all his family.—His grandfather was a general, his father was a general and he'd ha' been a general himself, if he'd no' come away.'

'But what was he after in your pocket? I thought I saw him put his fingers there rather slyly.'

Clapping his hands to his pockets, Pat ascertained that both watch and pocket-book was missing.

'Murther!' he cried, gesticulating like a whale with a dozen harpoons in his sides, 'the thafe! the spalpeen! the coorse! I knew him well, wid all his family. His grandfather was hanged, and his father was hanged, and he'd ha' been hanged himself if he'd not run away!'

In the town of Hopkington, in the State of Vermont, lived a certain Deacon Small. In his advanced age he had the misfortune to lose the rib of his youth. After doing penance by wearing a weed on his hat a full year, he was recommended to a certain Widow Hooper, living in an adjoining town. The deacon was soon astride his old brown mare with sorrel mane, and on arriving at the widow's door she was in the act of turning the suds from her wash-tub. Said the Deacon:

'Is this Widow Hooper?'

'Yes, sir,' was the reply.

'Well,' continued the deacon, 'I am that little bit of a dried-up Deacon Small, and have only one question to propose to you.'

'Please propose, sir.'

'Well, madam,' said the deacon, have you any objections to going to heaven by way of Hopkington?'

'None at all, deacon,' was the reply.—'Come in, deacon.'

An old Bachelor, picking up a book exclaimed, upon seeing a woodcut representing a man kneeling at the feet of a woman:

'Before I would kneel to a woman I would encircle my neck with a rope and stretch it.'

And then turning to a young woman, he inquired:

'Do you not think it would be the best thing I could do?

'It would, undoubtedly, be the best for the woman,' was the sarcastic reply.

At a recent Sabbath School concert, in a suburban church, the ordinance of baptism was administered. The clergyman in charge expressed gratification that the occasion offered him so good an opportunity to explain to the children the nature of the service. By way of illustration he said: 'In Old Testament times, blood was offered for an atoning sacrifice, hence it was spoken of as a purifier; but what elements conveys the idea of perfect cleanliness?' A moment's silence, and then a dozen little voices squeaked out—'Soap!'

'Why, mary, my dear, how is this. I find you sitting here so comfortably with your husband; you told me this morning you had quarrelled, and gone for a sailor?'

'Father! I told you nothing of the kind.'

'Oh, nonsense! I am sure you had some words together.'

'Yes, father, so we had. He asked me what o'clock it was; I said I didn't know; and so he left the house, saying he was going to sea. That's all I told you.'

The Lancaster (Mo.) Excelsior says its office has a devil who is built on the slamhi order, whose complaint is that he finds it hard work to "set standing." Good printers always "stand setting" and "set standing"—they "set" at a "stand," but they never "stand" at a "set."

The educational examiners of Akron O. recently asked a female applicant to teach: "What would you do to pupil who whispers?" "I would first use moral suasions," she said, "and if that failed, would resort to capital punishment." She was excused.

M. Boncourt, a rich financier, was very stingy to his wife. One day a lady closely veiled called upon him and borrowed a large sum, leaving her diamonds as a pledge. It was his wife.

Hibernian Wit—An Irish council being questioned by a judge, to know for whom he was concerned, replied as follows; 'I am concerned my lord for plaintiff but I am employed for the defendant.'

There were not righteous people enough in Sodom to spare it, but there was a pretty good Lot.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontrovertible facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound, spread after for ages is now established in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that the great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter O. V. Miller, of Brocktown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cosmcon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hovey, of Fenmore, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had mutually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

DR. A. TRASK'S

MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—'I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of Inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm.'

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trial, and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

THE GREAT FEMALE REMEDY,

JOB MOSES' PERIODICAL PILLS.

THIS well known medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstructions, from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution.

To Married Ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will, in a short time, bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of Nervous and Spinal Affections, Pain in the Back and Limbs, Heaviness, Fatigue on slight exertion, Palpitation of the heart, Lowness of Spirits, Hysterics, Sick Headaches, Whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

These Pills have been known to fail where the directions on the 2nd page of pamphlet are well observed

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the s reulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

To Messrs. Chamberlain & Sons, County P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Kaboc, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the muscles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At that time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was losing almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain; that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. This hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. It wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil the finest cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so firmly upon the confidence of mankind, as has this remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the civilized nations of the earth, its reputation as a safe antidote for the various diseases of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is as the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and for the unwary approaches of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds, no one should be absolved be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases in which life has been supposed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its conquest over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers and great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is purely vegetable, and its operation is perfectly harmless on any patient. The Antidote and Specific of its cures in the agueish districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our space is limited by the approaching issue of the Almanac, in which the cures of agueish complaints effected by Ayer's Ague Cure and other remedies fail which failed. Intermittents, fevers, other resident ills, or those contracted in more unhealthy localities, will be promptly relieved by the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating it to healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, this an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold by all the world.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Colby's Mill at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water motor in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 28th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by JAMES LEFFEL, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing; Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

New Method of Washing Clothes

Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily felt them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

County of Peterborough Directory

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the country will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have ever received anywhere near as high encomiums from the local press, and when I assure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce as perfect a Directory as was ever compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to them.

Poetry.

A Rural Wedding.

BY JOSEPHINE POLLARD.

The jewelled morning was in radiance set,
New light and lustre shedding
Around the spot where on the sward we met
To celebrate the wedding.

Up through the leafy arches we advance,
With hearts serene and lowly;
God's presence is entwined in every glance,
And all the place consecrated.

The solemn words that binds two hearts in one
Are reverently given;
The rites are over, and the deed is done
And registered in Heaven.

Two lives that like two streamlets run along,
Through valley and through heather,
Henceforth, with added sweetness in their song,
Flow on and sing together.

And in the orchard, though the leaves are torn
On which the vows were written,
And all the yellow tassels of the corn
By autumn blight are smitten.

A fadeless glory shall forever crown
The place so consecrated,
And love shall send a benediction down
Where love was consecrated.

Selections.

MR. MOSES.

BY FREDERICK S. COZENS.

There is a strange pleasure which well-read American feel, perhaps more than any other class of foreigners who visit London—the pleasure of hunting up ancient buildings and places in that dear old city which have long been familiar to the mind through books; places which are so much a part of our history as their names are a part of our language; places that irrite historic trains of thought, or those ideal creations of poets that are are often more lasting and real than the narratives of history's self. Every part of England has its share of these memorial relics—London is crowded with them.

On the second night after my arrival in the great city, I had rambled past the illuminated clock of the Horse Guards, in search of Whitehall Palace, and being by mistake on the wrong side of the way, I tapped up what seemed to be a little court, [illegible] the Royal Treasury, intending to make my way through it to the next street. It happened, however, that the little court had no opening at the far end—in fact, it was but a crooked culde sac—so I was obliged to retrace my steps. On one side of the street were several tall, dingy-looking houses, built of unpainted brick, and apparently deserted. I now noticed for the first time that the doors of these tall houses were furnished with huge door plates, nearly a foot and a half long and of proportionate width, and as the moon afforded sufficient light for me to read the inscriptions upon them, I stepped up to one and read: "FIRST LORD OF THE TREASURY." A thought flashed upon me. I had stumbled into Downing-street!

It was with an appreciable feeling of awe that I walked back into the middle of the narrow street, and looked up at the high windows of the deserted row of gloomy five story houses. Then I contrasted them in my mind with the noble marble structures of our own seat of government at Washington, and admired the modesty with which England ruled her share of the world from these venerable tenements.

"Then with wandering step, Obedient to high thoughts," the statesmen of the "silver coasted isle" seemed to pass again into these memorable edifices: Walpole and Holland, the two Pitts; Canning; the Iron Duke; Lord Castlereagh; Sir Robert Peel; Lord North; Lord Chesterfield; the Duke of Grafton; Lord John Russell; Lord Palmerston. And through the door of the adjoining building the Lord Chancellors of the Exchequer swept by in their robes and wigs; Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon; Lord Mansfield; Lord Lansdowne; Lord Lyndhurst; Lord Broughton. Methought the streets were now swarming with illustrious Privy Councilors: My Lord Privy Seal here; the noble Secretary for Foreign Affairs there. Yonder, in shadowy purple, I recognized the lineaments of Cardinal Wolsey; and amid stars, crosses, and decorations, there floated about several ghastly heads which were not difficult to name: the Earl of Strafford, for one; the most noble Earl of Essex, for another; Charles the First, with his pointed beard; Archbishop Laud; Sir Walter Raleigh; Sir Thomas Moore; and the rosed head of old Oliver Cromwell, which had been severed from his trunk ten years after his actual death.

A narrow street, a wretched alley indeed, awakening such thoughts! Truly England does not put her power in uniform. Her boot-blacks, her postmen, her soldiers, her beadles, and her field-marshals are all in scarlet; but the Premier of the realm is undistinguished by his dress from the plainest business dredge in the city.

While I was wrapped up in these reflections, I had unconsciously walked out of Downing street into the wider moonlighted avenues of the metropolis, wandering, as I often do, 'at my own sweet will,' and thinking of the inexhaustible sources of romance in the occurrences and incidents of the lives of the ancient and modern British nobility; of the great and almost fabulous antiquity of these illustrious families, dating far earlier than the Norman Conquest and the Curfew Bell, linking living names of living persons with the almost phantom-like histories of the bold chiefs of the Saxon Heptarchy, when my eye caught sight of another huge brass door-plate, fully as large as any of those I had seen in Downing street, and affixed to the door of a building so tall, so gloomy, and apparently as deserted as any of those in that dry, little, withered-up arm-of-the-sea of power. I stepped up to it and read: 'MR. MOSES.'

Will you believe me when I say that all the long lines of illustrious British ancestry passed from my thoughts like the last whiff of smoke from an expiring cigarette?

Mr. Moses! I was floundering through the Red Sea with the chariots of Pharaoh and the Israelites thereof! I must wish the shade and the price of him, in this district following that hero who ——"looked on armies with a hunter's eye."

I was gazing at a name that had been pronounced perhaps, long before England was inhabited.

Mr. Moses! I could see the Shepherd, after giving orders of love to the world before things were invented, had lord chamberlains and other big wigs were knocking military upon Mount Nebo, and overlooking the land of Canaan, with its beautiful valleys, its sparkling watercourses, its cities upon a thousand hills, and the vast multitude—the children of Israel—all [illegible] gathered together at twilight, [illegible] the shadows of the valleys, and waiting [illegible] to die before they crossed the flood of Jordan.

Here was an ancient nobility—[illegible] family—one of the first families [illegible], that had been highly respected [illegible] three hundred years before Saul [illegible] crowned king, four hundred years [illegible] crown was transferred to the head [illegible], four hundred and fifty years [illegible] building of the Temple, and eight hundred years before the Babylonish captivity.

And, perhaps, this Mr. Moses, [illegible] low—with his huge door-plate.—was [illegible] with his Frankfort brethren, whose names are Rothschild, and was engaged [illegible] plunging and controlling those kind [illegible] with big door-plates down there in Throgmorton street. Who knows? Why should it not be so? His family was [illegible] and wiser than any of theirs!

That night I dreamed of a [illegible]-ball in ancient Memphis, where I saw a middle-aged lady (Pharaoh's [illegible]) dancing with Richard Cœur de Lion, [illegible] to her brother, young Plantagenet, a very amiable prince, and Queen Elizabeth, who told her partner that the Medici family had left town suddenly, and had [illegible] very queerly toward their land friends.

Then I dreamed of a huge pawnbroker's shop, where all the kings of Europe were pawning their crowns, and the nobility their collars stars and crosses; and over the front door, behind three balls, there was a little sign with the name—Mr. Moses!

Then I saw Mr. Moses with a garter around his leg, and a jewelled star on his breast, arranging himself in the robes of a knight of Charlemagne's empire; and up though a diamond cross that had belonged to Madame de Maintenon lay open on iron anvil; and he took up the workman's hammer, cried 'Joel, the wife of Heber, the Kenite, had used on Sisera, and at one blow smashed the cross, and it flew into a thousand pieces. Then in came chief-[illegible] Robert Peel's uniformed police, and took him in-custody, and he was hailed [illegible] by his clamorous friends giving the proper recognizances before a London police magistrate. Then I saw a million of shadowy book-stores, and among them I recognized one that belonged to Louis Philippe. Then I woke up, and thought I had been to a Purim ball.

A HAPPY GOING HOME.

I knew a young girl intimately. I saw her almost every day. She was a beautiful child, surrounded by all that wealth and affection could bring. Some of my brothers here know her father, for he was President of the Young Men's Christian Association in Cincinnati. His residence was a magnificent mansion on a beautiful hill near the city. By home instruction and Sunday School instruction she in early life gave her heart to Jesus.—One sad Saturday, turning around suddenly when near the fire, her dress caught, and almost in an instant she was enveloped in flame. Her screams brought her father to her room, and O! what a scene for him to look upon! What horror must have crept into that fond father's heart! He said he never dreamed what misery was till that moment. He speedily extinguished the flames, and finding that they had not reached the child's head, not apparently bad done to burn her severely, he thought himself the happiest man in all the world, for his darling was safe. He laid her on the bed, and began at once to apply such remedies as he could command. Soon the child asked, 'Father, how long must I suffer the intense agony?' 'O not long, Helen. Only an hour I hope.' For three quarters of an hour she did not murmur, nor utter a cry, nor say, 'How near, dear father, how near, dear father, how near is the hour up?' What submission in suffering was there! At last the poor father said, I hope in fifteen minutes, Helen, you will be relieved from this great pain.'

'The physician came' day after day.—Mr. Neff at last saw by his countenance something that aroused his suspicions that his daughter would not get well. 'Doctor,' he said, 'do not keep anything back; tell me all.' The poor man who was an intimate friend, burst into tears as he replied, 'God knows, Mr. Neff, that I wish I could do something more for Helen, but I have done the last thing in my power; she must die, I am afraid, before to-morrow morning.'

Never, as that father told me, never had he experienced such feelings. 'O, how can I tell her!' He went to her at last, took her hand in his, and, with all the calmness he could command, said, 'Helen, you are a very sick little girl.' 'Yes, pa, I know it.' 'Helen'—and the poor father could scarcely frame his words, but God taught him—'Helen, sometimes little girls who are as sick as you, as very long sick.' Yes, papa, I know that!' He could scarcely go further, but at last had strength given him to say, 'My dear child, some times little girls as sick as you are do not get well at all.' The child turned her eye, beautiful and bright upon him and said, 'I'm not afraid to die.' God be praised for a religion that can enable a child, in such sweet trustfulness, to utter that testimony! That day was one of farewells to parents and grandparents, and brothers and sisters. Her brother Willie kissed her and said, 'Helen, you must forgive me for me saying you.' 'O, brother Willie, I have nothing to forgive. I want you to ask Jesus to forgive you, and make you his dear boy.' He has asked Jesus, and since his sister's death has united with the church. Then her parent bade her farewell; and just before midnight she asked them to sing,

"Jesus, lover of my soul,
Let me to thy bosom fly,"

and she sang clearly and beautifully, without a tremor in her voice, through it all.—Then she commenced the Lord's prayer, and that father said he never heard the words, 'Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven,' uttered as she uttered them.—When she closed the prayer she seemed to be for a time breathing an inaudible prayer, and at twelve o'clock the bridegroom's voice was heard, and Helen went out to meet him, and the door was shut, and Helen went into the marriage supper of the Lamb."
—H. Thane Miller.

THE FIRST ADVERTISER AND ADVERTISEMENT.—The first advertisement was inserted in a London newspaper in 1658, and Parliamentary reporting had its origin in 1641. The first advertiser was a London haberdasher named Hervey, who died in 1672, abundantly rich from the profits of his new discovery.

THE MURDER OF A TENANT IN CORK.—Circumstances have, it is said, come to the knowledge of the police authorities at Scotland-yard which serve to throw some light upon the tragedy enacted at Cork on Sunday week, where a young man named Callaghan was shot dead. It has been ascertained that Callaghan was in London some six weeks ago, when he purchased, of a gunmaker, in Gracechurch street and elsewhere, a number of ear-chambered revolvers, eight, he is said, having been dressed like an officer of a ship, even for this shipper," whose ship was at that time lying in Victoria dock. During the time the deceased was in London he visited on several occasions—so he had been in the habit of doing when in London—a public house which has been prominently before the public as the rendezvous of Fenians and Fenian sympathizers. While in this house one evening two revolvers were presented at his head by brother Fenians while in the midst of an argument respecting the dispersal of the arms which the unfortunate man had come that week to London to purchase. Some Fenian sprits spoiler than the rest interfered, and saved Callaghan's life, which at a later period, and in his own native city (Cork), was so fatally sacrificed. The deceased having been continually threatened during his stay at London by a faction of Fenians rival of that to which he belonged, left England, taking with him the arms, consisting of rifles, revolvers, sword-bayonets, and stiletto, which he had come to the country to purchase. When he arrived at home the news of his intention to appropriate the arms in a certain way and in certain quarters was in Cork before him; and as he had expressed a determination to carry it out, he fell a victim to disappointed traitors. The deceased was Callaghan was well known among the Irish population of London, among whom he was esteemed, on constitutional, earnest, sincere young Irishman. It is highly probable that, through certain facts that have transpired in London, a look warning in the shape of circumstances to bring her to the murder to its author will be almost immediately supplied; and it is seen that divisions in the London Fenian camp will be instrumental in furnishing it.

THE WEALTH OF ONTARIO.—In the Montreal Telegraph we read the following:—"The wealth of the government of Ontario is astonishing. They have already invested in Dominion stock and in special deposits no less than $2 068,846 62. The revenue for the nine months ending 30th Sept., 1869, is $2,061,611 12. The aggregate expenditure for the same period has been $1,068,906, 74, and the total estimates for the whole year amount to $1, 622,918, 79. It, therefore, seems that the estimates are sufficient, and if all expended, the year's expenditure would leave a balance on the revenue for nine months of $457,696. 33. But although the three remaining months of the year yet to run will not produce anything like a third of the nine months given, they will produce something, so that we shall not be far out in calculating the savings of the government of Ontario at half a million of dollars for the year 1869. At this rate, even if their share of the public debt of the old Province of Canada should amount to $7, 000,000, they have nothing to fear. The arrears of interest on two years and a half will only amount to $1,050,000, so that the investments of the Province, would leave over a million and a half towards the debt, thus reducing the interest on the debt at least $90,000 a year. In fine, the debt of the Province of Ontario may be extinguished within ten years."

This is from the government organ and must be taken with a grain of allowance.

A NEW RAILROAD BRAKE.—A much needed guarantee of safety on railroad travel seems to be offered by the DeBergue pneumatic brake, which was tested on a train of five heavy cars, on the Erie railway, last week. The brake consists of a simple apparatus on the locomotive, by which, on cutting off the steam and reversing the link motion, audit valves in the front of the engines are opened, admitting the atmospheric air, which, passing through tubes under the arch of the smoke stack, is drawn into the exhaust pipes and thence into the cylinders by the action of the pistons, and compressed into the steam chests of the engine, forming with each successive stroke of the pistons a constant hardening cushion of resistance or retarding power. Then the steam being cut off, and the pistons working only by the momentum of the train against the compressed air cushion, the train is easily and safely stopped. During the recent trial, a speed of 25 miles an hour was attained, the compressed air brake applied, and the train was stopped in 30 seconds. The train started again, and when running at 30 miles an hour the brake was put in motion and the train stopped in 56 seconds.

WHEN Gough goes lecturing he takes a writing desk filled with paper and envelopes, and writes a letter to his wife every day and she also sends one to him. He also has a private secretary or attendant with him, whose duties include among all other things, that of waking up the distinguished lecturer from his afternoon nap. The latter takes only one "square meal" per day, dinner, for breakfast and supper he has a light diet, say tea with bread and butter.—About three, p. m. he takes a nap, and sleeps till the "last minute." Were he not obliged to get up by some one determined to do it, he would sleep till 9 o'clock. But one of the greatest of his peculiarities is the way he puts on different suits of clothes three, four, three or four times a day. It is one for the morning, another for dinner, a third for supper, a fourth for the lecture, and a fifth when he returns home. A cup of tea and then he is ready to talk and joke till midnight.

HOW TO RISE REFRESHED.—Every person who toils at any kind of labor, requiring great physical or mental exertion, should be extremely careful to practice a regular system of ablution at the close of each day's work. Sometimes a person may become so completely exhausted as to render this anything but an agreeable performance; yet by its omission a great deal of refreshment, which the hours of repose are designed to impart is lost. To be closely is strictly religious duty, and is absolutely essential to sound and refreshing slumber; hence the labor of keeping one's person clean is amply repaid by the elasticity which follows nightly ablutions before retiring. Heed this advice, and the reader will sleep soundly, and on his rising in the morning refreshed, with feelings of buoyancy which the exertions of the day will hardly be able to remove.

ACCOUNTS are given of a new oil made from the yokes of eggs, and said to be much employed by the German colonists of South Russia, for cooking, cosmetic uses, &c. The eggs are boiled hard, the yolks removed and crushed, and then placed over a fire and stirred constantly till the whole substance is on the point of catching fire, when the oil separated and may be poured off.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1869.

We claim the forbearance of our readers, on account of the paucity of reading matter in this issue. We have been engaged in removing our office, which has entailed an immense labour on us, and almost prevented its appearance this week; but we concluded that it was better to issue it in the present shape and throw ourselves on the kind forbearance of our readers.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The ultra measure of Separation yet brought before the House has been forced upon the government by Mr. Blake, and the members of the opposition.

Attorney General McDonald appears to think that there is little to be done except retain office, and this he is determined to do at all hazards.

The motion to prohibit members holding a seat in both the Dominion Parliament and in the Ontario Parliament, was voted down by the government.

Several petitions have been presented against the separation of Durham from Northumberland. This is not likely to be permitted during the present session.

Nothing more has been done in relation to the School Bills, except to pass the two first clauses of the Common School Bill, in committee of the whole.

Attorney general McDonald has introduced a Bill to quiet titles to lands sold for taxes, but it is not yet passed.

FIRE.

On Wednesday morning, the store occupied by Messrs. McKellar and Cameron as a general grocery, liquor, seed and general hardware store, was entirely consumed by fire. The boot and shoe store of Mr. Anthony, and a portion of the building occupied as a tobacco manufactory was also consumed by fire.

The fire originated it appears, in the portion of the building occupied by Mr. Anthony, as in the tobacco manufactory; as when the alarm was first given, the fire was making considerable headway in that portion.

The dry goods store of Mr. F. Lemay, which was contagious, and that of Mr. Dunnett, were for a time in considerable danger, and Mr. Lemay's goods were almost all removed from which they must have received considerable damage. The quantity of water thrown on the buildings did very material damage to Mr. Dunnett; and the smoke which up till the present is entering the store, is still doing him damage. A portion of the wall of the back part of the store, threatened to fall, will have to be removed. This gave vent for water, smoke and flames, but fortunately nothing was burned. He has suffered heavily in his stock being damaged.

During the progress of the fire, some powder kept by McKellar & Cameron exploded, and unfortunately, several of the men in the building were hurt. Mr. Samuel English received some burns on the face, and bruises; Mr. Mason a cut on the face; and two Frenchmen were more severely injured, but none seriously; Mr. Garvey also was severely hurt. It is thought that if the usual crowd that attends fires had been there, they could not have been missed by the falling rubbish, as the roof was blown clean up, and fell all round. There were three explosions; but the first was the heaviest, and did most damage. The windows in Mr Dickson's block, from Mitchell's corner south, show marks of its effects in broken glass. Some windows in Mr. Morrow's block were broken, and also several in Mr Ormond's jewellery store. Very fortunately there were no lives lost.

We are glad to be able to state that Mr. S. English was not seriously hurt. He will be all right again in a few days. Mr. Garvey, we believe, is able to follow his business.

The concussion caused by the explosion shook the whole town. The houses in Ashburnham also trembled, so as to awake the inmates. Several parties who were near the building were so confused that they imagined part of their heads blown away.

The building consumed belonged to Mr. John Thompson, near Rice Lake, and was insured to the amount of $800. Mr. Thompson will therefore be a loser. The building occupied by Mr. Dunnett is owned by Messrs Clinton & Stevenson. The damages are fully covered by insurance.

The loss of Messrs. McKellar and Cameron cannot yet be estimated. They had an insurance of $3,000, but it will not cover all their loss.

Mr. Anthony was insured to the amount of $1,075, but we cannot state his loss, part of his stock was saved.

Mr Winship's, tobacconist, loss is $600, insured for $500, but he lost all his tools and fixings, on which there was no insurance.

Mr. Dunnett's loss will be about $1,000, fully covered by insurance.

Mr. Lemay has suffered in the removing of his goods, but he is fully insured.

A. D. Richardson, of the N. Y. Tribune, was shot lately by a lawyer, named McFarlane, for intimacy with his. McFarlane's wife. Just before Richardson's death, H. W. Beecher, went to his bedroom and married him to the woman. Richardson has since died, and Mr. Beecher delivered a funeral oration, in which he said Richardson had done nothing morally wrong. What a minister of the Gospel! McFarlane is in jail for shooting Richardson.

Nicholas Melady was hung in Goderich, on Tuesday, for the murder of his father and mother-in-law. He confessed his guilt before death. Two others are yet in jail awaiting trial as accomplices.

RAILWAY MEETING AT NORWOOD.

A large and influential meeting of the Ratepayers of the Township of Asphodel was held in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Saturday last, to take into consideration the advisability of going for a Railway leading from some point on the Grand T. Railway through the East Riding of Peterborough, and the propriety of granting a bonus to any company that will build the same.

T. Coughlan, Esq., occupied the chair, and W. H. Roxburgh, Esq., acted as Secretary.

The meeting was addressed by P. M. Grover, Esq., M. P., James S. Fourth, Hastings, Rev. Mr. Smithett, Peter Pearce, Esq., Walter Scott, Esq., R. Harrison, Esq. Donald Paget, Esq., and several other gentlemen.

Although the point of connection with the Grand Trunk was left an open question, the feeling of the meeting was unanimously in favour of an extension of the Kingston and Madoc Railway to the Townships, and the Committee which was appointed was instructed to communicate with the municipalities lying between Asphodel and Madoc requesting their conjoint action and assistance in aid of the Railway, should the Kingston and Madoc Company undertake the extension of the road by the proposed route.

The greatest enthusiasm prevailed, and the following resolution were almost unanimously adopted.

Moved by Mr. Grover, seconded by Mr. D. Paget, and resolved,—That in the opinion of this meeting, it is essential to the prosperity of the East Riding of the County of Peterboro, that there should be increased facilities for exportation and importation by means of a cheap railway.

Moved by D. Paget, Esq., seconded by Mathew Knox, Esq., resolved,—That it is expedient that the principle of granting bonuses by the municipalities interested in aid of the company, which may be formed to build a railway, now generally adopted in the case of the narrow guage, should be carried out in this municipality, if a railway come into or pass through it.

Moved by Jas. S. Fowlds, seconded by John P. Brown, Esq., Deputy Reeve, and resolved,—That the ratepayers of the Township of Asphodel, now present, believing in the propriety of granting a bonus to a company that will extend a road to this township from some point on the Grand Trunk, request the Council to pass a by-law granting a bonus of $10,000 to aid such company.

Moved by R. Harrison, seconded by Jehiel Breckenridge,—That a committee be appointed to carry out the views of this meeting, and correspond with any railway company that might build a road through this township, and connecting with the Grand Trunk Railway.

Moved by the Rev. Mr. Smithett, seconded by Mr. Brown,—That the said committee consist of Timothy Coughlan, Esq., Reeve of Asphodel, J. P. Brown, Esq., Deputy Reeve, R. Harrison, Esq., R. E. Birdsall, Esq., P. M. Grover, Esq., W. E. Roxburgh, Esq., and J. S. Fowlds, Esq.

Moved by P. W. Grover, Esq., seconded by Mr. Richardson,—That the Council be authorized to grant any preliminary expense that may be incurred by the committee in carrying out the views of this meeting.

We learn there were very few, if any, dissentients at the meeting, and that all the motions were carried almost unanimously. The people of Asphodel have, therefore, set themselves to work with a will to get railway communication, and patience and perseverance will enable them to succeed.

OBITUARY.

In another column will be found the decease of Matthew Waram, Esq., of the Township of Smith, a gentlemen who was generally respected by all who knew him. Mr. Waram has been collector for the Township of Smith for the last six or seven years, and on Tuesday was in his usual health. He left home on that morning for the purpose of calling on parties for their taxes, we believe, and drove about ten miles. He no sooner reached the place and approached the fire, than he almost immediately expired, and almost without a struggle.

Mr. Waram came to Canada in 1836, and at that time settled in the Township of Harvey, where he lived 14 years. He then removed to Smith, where he has resided ever since. He was a native of Cornwall, England. He leaves one son, Mr. Richard Waram, and two daughters, and numerous relatives and friends, to mourn his sudden, though not unexpected call, as Mr. Waram has not been without warning of his physical decay. He died at the advanced age of 72 years. His remains will be interred in the Methodist Cemetery to-day, Thursday 9th inst.

GOUGH BIOGRAPHY.

Mr. H. Wright is now canvassing subscribers for a work entitled "Autobiography of John B. Gough." The book will consist of 552 pages, and will no doubt be very interesting. The following letter from one well known in Peterboro is almost a guarantee for the work:

THE AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JOHN B. GOUGH.—The man of genius, rescued from dissipation and ruin by the combined influence of religion and teetotalism, whose life has been so varied and eventful, and whose fame as an orator is world-wide, has in this history of his life shown equal talents for writing as he has for speaking. We have only read some of the first chapters, but if all is like that part, and we have every reason to believe it improves to the end, it is a book most fascinating to read, and salutary in its influence on the reader's mind.—You follow him going out from his humble English home in one of the quaint little towns in that country, setting out alone on a voyage to America, where sometimes he was sunk into the deepest depths of want and dejection; aggravated after some years by habits of dissipation, till he is rescued by God's interposing mercy, and raised to a career of unparalleled usefulness and to fame and fortune. This memoir constitutes another proof of the saying, that "truth is often much stranger than fiction." The mechanical and artistic execution of the book is most superior and elegant. By all means make the acquaintance of JOHN B. GOUGH.

JOHN CARROLL. W. M.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT.—We announce with pleasure, that it is the intention of Mr. A. H. Rackett to give a grand Christmas Concert in the Music Hall, on Thursday, 23rd inst., on which occasion he will be assisted by Mrs. Bradley, of Lindsay, and Mrs. Richardson, of Peterboro, (late of London, England) and also by the local musical talent, in operatic choruses, duets, &c. We trust that Mr. Rackett will receive, as he deserves, a bumper house.

Board of Trustees—Union and Grammar School.

The Board met on Tuesday evening.—Present—Messrs. Gilmour, Dumble, Hall, Stevenson, Landy, Coulter, Cameron and Clinton.

The minutes of previous meeting were read; also, a letter from the Committee of the Mechanics' Institute, asking the use of a room for an evening class.

On motion of Mr Dumble, seconded by Mr. Toole, the request was granted.

A communication from Miss Curtis, asking that her salary be increased to $200 for the ensuing year, was read.

Mr. Stevenson thought the Board could not agree to it.

Mr. Dixon explained that Miss Curtis had received an offer in another place where she thought she could do better.

Mr. Toole remarked that perhaps her removal would be a greater loss than paying her $20.

On motion of Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, it was agreed that the Board could not comply with the request of Miss Curtis.

The committee appointed to enquire after a room for Mrs. Charlier's class, reported that they could not obtain either the Methodist Sabbath School Room or the Episcopal Sabbath School Room.

Considerable discussion arose concerning purchasing brick for the school building to be erected next summer.

Mr. Coulter reported that the Committee on Property had fixed the water course round the south part of the building, but did not fix the stairs, as the carpenters thought it would have to be entirely renewed in the spring.

The Principal's Report showed the attendance for November to be:

In the North Ward School, boys 14, average 13; girls 6, average 6; total 20, average 19.

Mrs. Charlier's division, boys 37, average 30; girls 25, average 21; total 62, average 51.

Mrs. Flavelle's, boys 65; average 60.

Miss Curtis', boys 53; average 50.

Mr. Robertson's, boys 40; average 35.

Miss Borrowman's, girls 57; average 50.

Mr. Taylor's, boys 26; average 25.

Miss Beatty's, girls 39; average 36.

Miss Hatton's, girls 41; average 37.

Mr. McPaul's, boys 47; average 37; a class of girls for book-keeping 11; total 60, average 48.

Principal's division, total 27; average 25.

Total in attendance—boys 244; average 215. Girls 246; average 220. Total 490; total average 435.

He remarked that he would recommend no promotions from Miss Borrowman's or Miss Beatty's rooms, owing to the fact that he wished to raise the standard, and also because Miss Hatton's room was already full. There was also trouble among the girls about Mrs. Charlier's room, as to their play room now in the cold weather. He also recommended the Board to appoint two scholarships as an incentive to those wishing to pursue their studies in the higher departments, and remarked that he had already the promise of three scholarships from private individuals.

In answer to a question, he stated that Mr. Brodin was to take charge of the room Mr. Smith resigned.

It was agreed to fix the out-houses.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole, the Property Committee were authorised to advertise for 70 cords of green wood.

Moved by Mr. Dumble, seconded by Mr. Coulter, that this Board take the first opportunity of their first meeting to express their sympathy with Miss Beatty in her severe illness. Her successful and faithful labours have earned for her the respect and regard of this Board, and her late illness has secured for her their heartfelt sympathy. They earnestly hope that she may soon, with renewed health, resume her place in this school.—Carried.

Mr. Rutherford referred to the state of the girl's play room, and the great difficulty of keeping the furniture safe.

The Board adjourned.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met on Monday evening. The Mayor in the Chair.

Present—Messrs. English, Helm, Rutherford, Kennedy, Toole, Doherty, Clinton, Stevenson and Edmison.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were read from S. S. Peck, Esq., in reply to the note addressed to him by the Clerk, informing the Council that he was ready and willing to unite with the Town, on behalf of the County Council, in any measure or expense connected with efforts to get South Monaghan to join this County; from the Secretary of the P. H. L. & B. Railway Company, enclosing copy of resolution passed by the Directors of said Company, stating they were ready to extend the railway from Lakefield to Chemong Lake, on condition that the Municipalities interested will aid to the extent of $40,000; from Alan Gilmour, Esq., of Ottawa, to the Clerk, informing him that he had no interest in the mill property of this town; from Maxwell Hall, informing the Council that the Fire Company had appointed Edwin Poole, Engineer, and Chas. Stapleton, Assistant Engineer of the Co'y for the ensuing year.

Accounts were received from T. B. Clementi, $17.00; G. Marshall, repairing engine, $8.50; D. W. Dumble, Esq., cadvie, $45.00, were referred to the Finance Committee.

Moved by Mr. Kennedy, seconded by Mr. Rutherford,—That the request of Protection Fire Company be complied with, and that in accordance with the request of Protection Fire Company, Mr. E. Poole be appointed Engineer, and Mr. C. Stapleton, Assistant Engineer.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Doherty,—That the Inspector of Licenses be requested to furnish this Council at its next meeting with the names of all parties who hold licenses from the town, and the amount paid for such licenses.—Carried.

The following report of the Finance Committee was read, received and adopted:

"The Finance Committee beg leave to report that they have examined the matter of the circular submitted to them, received from the Reeves of Wallace, Elora, and Listowell, and have consulted with John Carnegie, Esq., M. P. P., with regard to the same, and they have concluded to recommend the Council to take no notice in the matter.

"Respectfully submitted.

IVAN O'BEIRNE,
WM. TOOLE,
JAS. STEVENSON."

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, a By-Law for appointing Returning Officers, and also the places for holding the coming elections was read a first time. In committee, Mr. John Irwin was appointed Returning Officer for the North Ward; place the same as last year. Mr. Fenwick, for the South Ward; and Mr. J. Edwards, for the East Ward.

The By-law was read a third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the Clerk was instructed to sell the old market scales at an upset price of $10.

A By-law to provide for parties removing the snow off the side walks opposite to the premises owned or occupied by parties in the town, was read a first time.

The Mayor, by request, called a meeting of the Court of Revision for Wednesday night at 7½ o'clock, p. m., and the Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Geo. Mitchell of the meeting.

Mr. O'Beirne asked for information respecting the law suit pending between Mr. Patterson and the town. The Mayor said no settlement had been made, by each party paying his own costs.

Mr. Stevenson thought if Mr. O'Beirne wished to press the suit, he could move to that intent.

Mr. O'Beirne only asked for information, as he understood private parties had made offers of settlement, and he was against doing business in that way.

Mr. Clinton was in favor of settlement, as all parties to a suit lost.

Mr. Edmison thought the town would most assuredly gain the case, and thought it ought not to be settled so that the town should pay any cost.

The Mayor remarked that the case was doubtful until decided, and thought it would not be for wrong to settle it.

The matter was left undecided, but it was generally believed that the suit would be dropped, each side paying its own costs.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

CURLING CLUB, KENNEL.—The regular annual meeting of the above Club, was held at the American House, Keene, on the morning of the 1st of December, when the following officers were elected:—Alex. Poe, President; James Stevenson, Vice President; Marshall Dean, Secretary, (re elected); Thomas Campbell, Treasurer, (re-elected.)

We are requested to call attention to the meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association on Monday evening. This is the Annual Meeting, and consequently the election of Directors will take place. All those wishing to join will do well to be present and give in their names.

BURGLARY.—We understand that some person or persons entered the Photograph Gallery of Sproule, and took a horse valued at $150.

The Warden says the following items are correct as passing through Bobcaygeon the past summer:—Mr. Boyd, per steamer Waverley, 7,361,333 feet; W. A. Scott, per steamer Rescue, 6,415,000 feet; N. Shaw, per steamer Victoria, 6,122,998 feet; number of lockages, 2,000. There were run over the running slide, 184,000 logs, destined for Peterboro', Brockburn, Trenton, and other towns ports; while over the timber slide 483 cribs were taken averaging 1,400 ft., making a total of 676,200 feet square destined for Quebec.

Reports from San Francisco of the 23rd inst. contains information of three severe shocks of earthquakes experienced there; several buildings had been badly injured. The barracks of the native regiments had been partially destroyed and a number of deaths were caused by persons jumping from windows and falling down stairs, in different buildings. It is said there is not a whole roof in the town. Reports from there state the churches and other building had fallen.

A Red River correspondent of Le Courier de St. Hyacinthe, writing on the 5th inst., confirms the rumor that some of the Indian tribes of the territory had offered their services to the insurrectionary half-breeds. He says that they are six in number, and among the most numerous in the country, and that they coolly offered to cut themselves on the roads from Canada and massacre every one who should be indicated as an enemy.

THE rays of the sun shine upon the dirt and the mud, but they are not soiled by them. So a holy soul, while it remains holy, may mingle with the vileness of the world, and yet be pure in itself.

THE groundwork of all manly character is veracity, or the habit of truthfulness.—That virtue lies at the foundation of every thing said.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of it as great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and readily find its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hord & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

PIMPLES FURS, Chilblains, Corns, Bunions, Bad Veins, &c., are positively cured by the use of Dr. J. Briggs' Modern Corrective. This Remedy has been compounded with great care, and used as directed, never fails. Sold by Druggists.

On motion of Mr. Stevenson, a By-Law for appointing Returning Officers, and also the places for holding the coming elections was read a first time. In committee, Mr. John Irwin was appointed Returning Officer for the North Ward; place the same as last year. Mr. Fenwick, for the South Ward; and Mr. J. Edwards, for the East Ward.

The By-law was read a third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Stevenson, the Clerk was instructed to sell the old market scales at an upset price of $10.

A By-law to provide for parties removing the snow off the side walks opposite to the premises owned or occupied by parties in the town, was read a first time.

The Mayor, by request, called a meeting of the Court of Revision for Wednesday night at 7½ o'clock, p. m., and the Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Geo. Mitchell of the meeting.

Mr. O'Beirne asked for information respecting the law suit pending between Mr. Patterson and the town. The Mayor said no settlement had been made, by each party paying his own costs.

Mr. Stevenson thought if Mr. O'Beirne wished to press the suit, he could move to that intent.

Mr. O'Beirne only asked for information, as he understood private parties had made offers of settlement, and he was against doing business in that way.

Mr. Clinton was in favor of settlement, as all parties to a suit lost.

Mr. Edmison thought the town would most assuredly gain the case, and thought it ought not to be settled so that the town should pay any cost.

The Mayor remarked that the case was doubtful until decided, and thought it would not be for wrong to settle it.

The matter was left undecided, but it was generally believed that the suit would be dropped, each side paying its own costs.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to assist the low or provoke the hostility of the Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had treated all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, sciatica, bunnit complaints, and all other diseases flesh is heir to, in advance by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short commencement, and its liability to return for the slightest touch; to acute rheumatism, owing to fever, redness, heat in the part attacked, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pains is sometimes, less severe, and often, very much slight. From toothache, by the absence of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its progression, and the frequent coincidence of the latter with decay. Immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Neuralgine according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 349 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

THE ŒCUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large as evidence of this nature concerning recommendations from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion of it in its harmonious and unanimous to the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshonean Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, &c., &c. For sale by all druggists.

SWAIN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and possessions (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a panacea for, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.—The memory of Dr. Wistar is enshrined in the hearts of thousands whom his Balsam of Wild Cherry has saved of coughs, colds, consumption, or some other form of Pulmonary disease. It is here every day years since this preparation was brought before the public, and yet the demand for it is constantly increasing.

A CLERGYMAN writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Europe is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of the Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the fiend Dyspepsia." Dyspeptics should drink from this fountain.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and inconvertable facts, sufficient to convince the most sceptical that the Great Medicinal Compound prepared after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that the great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Stevens, of Brighton, (extract), of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Streetsville, Canada, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cameron, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hovey, of Fergus, Ontario of Rheumatism, who had actually been at crutches for years, in spite of all (pretended heretofore, and so now well known of each cases might be mentioned had we space.

DR. A. TRASK'S
MAGNETIC OINTMENT!
CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Bingham, of Utica, New York, says:—"I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammatic of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Redding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Spasmodic Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED in a SINGLE INSTANCE to EFFECT A CURE, when timely administered. We never knew an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PLEDGE OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofulous sores and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

GALLIA, Ind., 9th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having labored a fortnight in Indiana, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and face with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was induced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took, it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. Now and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is new clear, and I have by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agents of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 19th Sept., 1868, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Lobaldo Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a bad sore swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Lumbar Pains or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Obstructions, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I must cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the uterine or ovarian class. I have cured many [illegible] which had defied all the remedies we could employ, but at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physicians therefore nothing but satisfaction as to its efficacy in the cure of the above class of complaints, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Syphilitic and Mercurial Diseases.

NEW ORLEANS, 20th August, 1868.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Diseases. One of my patients had Syphilitic sores on his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla steadily healed and built him up rapidly. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfigurement to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from rheumatism in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones like fire, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I have found its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INVERMERE, Preston Co., Va., 9th July, 1869.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and much to the disgust of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. PREAM.

John T. Gerhart, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for seven years, from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and say that you made no worthless trifles. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The skin that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Scirrhous, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

A MYSTERY
AT
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays was shading—
Beaming, gleaming, fitfully streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As ever onward it there was listening
To the soothing, merry tunes on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shirted,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not chicken me with reproaching—
Are you waiting for or the messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other one once uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Boots and Shoes!'
'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his anxiety I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
While reechoed the fire,
'You'll save yr or cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me then to purchase
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Patchless Boots and Shoes.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them, even when adopted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the checkered affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

We greatly are in receipt of letters from the most responsible the certainness of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, in these Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is service instead of injury. The number and immediacy of its cures in the worst districts are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of the medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of its perfect and radical cures of the most inveterate cases, and where other medicines had wholly failed. Even in distant persons, either residents in, or travelling through such malarious districts, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from derangement of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, bilious and constipated? Are you out of order, and do you require a cathartic medicine to cleanse the system, regulate the liver, and restore the healthy functions of the body? Then why suffer from the diseases that arise from these derangements, when a few doses of AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS will relieve you? They are sugar-coated, so that the most sensitive can take them pleasantly, and they are the cheapest, safest, and best purgative pill that can be used for family or general practice. Their power to cure is unequalled by any medicine we know of, for they cleanse the whole system, and restore its healthy action. Hence they cure Colds, Coughs, Headache, Rheumatism, Indigestion, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Ulcers, Humors, Neuralgia, Gout, Dyspepsia, Piles, Worms, and all the disorders that require a cathartic medicine. Every dose will benefit the health, and the system cannot long remain diseased where they are freely used. Their sugar coating preserves them in any climate, and they are safe to take at any time. Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, which should be carefully read before taking these Pills. Take Ayer's Pills, and be free from pain. A dose or two will relieve the stomach, and this disagreeable state of the blood, which is the cause of so much sickness, will be corrected by their use. Thus eliminating the foulness of the body they vigorously invigorate it, purify the system from the obstructions which poison it, and restore the natural health. Those who have used this remedy know how searching it is, and how soon it cures the most obstinate disorders of the digestive organs. While in the countless thousands who have proved its virtues, there is not one who will not cheerfully testify to its superiority over all other cathartics, it is also the most economical, as it is the cheapest. Put up in strong boxes, containing fifty pills, and sold by druggists everywhere.

From a Prominent Merchant of Boston.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the purgative of all others in general use. They have cured my family of ailments which had long afflicted them, and relieved many friends to whom I have given them. Their sugar coating renders them pleasant to take, and they operate speedily and effectually. Their timely use would save many a severe spell of sickness. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of disorder of the stomach, liver, or bowels, in which they were not proper to employ. Their penetrating power upon the secretions of the liver, and their thorough purgation of the bowels, are wonderful. Many cases of apparently confirmed disease, even of long standing, have been completely cured by them. Their sugar coating renders them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with satisfactory results in my family during the time I was called to visit in Canada. They are an excellent remedy for derangements of the stomach, liver, and bowels, and for purifying the blood, which is the very best remedy I know how to use, and I am confident they will prove a blessing to many. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1868.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is [illegible] in medicine. They have cured my little daughter [illegible] of a complaint [illegible] I had found myself [illegible] for years. Her mother has recently given [illegible] afflicted with blotches and eruption on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and [illegible]

ABA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. P. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are [illegible] of best very certain and effectual in their action upon the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily [illegible] of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Segal, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: AYER: I cannot answer you other complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever tried with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an occasional cathartic to my daily comfort with chance and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PETERSBURG, Va., May 1, 1854.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache my body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It serves to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEEBLES, Clerk of Hustings Circuit.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purposes as an aperient but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely [illegible] that you have at length a purgative which will [illegible] the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1854.

FRIEND AYER: I have used your Pills in my practice and in my family for many years, and cannot hesitate to say that they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, appearing to [illegible] that [illegible] of the whole [illegible] of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of [illegible] where [illegible] this did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALFRED B. MALLET, M.D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Dr. A. G. Gunn, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their extensive action upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for [illegible] Dysentery and diarrhœa. Their [illegible] when given very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. K. Hines, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in sickness. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HINES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1854.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M.D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Tingle, Montreal, Canada.

You much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in pronouncing it the best remedy for the cure of that distressing [illegible] complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the [illegible] of others that are worse. I believe no [illegible] to original with the liver, but your Pills seem [illegible] to act and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Smart, Plaistow and Minstyd, Sussex.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural cure when there wholly or partially suppressed; and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and relieve worms. They are much the best physic we have that I recommend in order to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1854.

HONORED SIR: I should be unjust to you and your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my kidneys and brought on excruciating neuralgia, which ended in chronic inflammation of [illegible]. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your [illegible] agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. I took eight or ten every hour, but more. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Jan. 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of [illegible] of which I was painfully afflicted for [illegible] years.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR BATTLER.

Dr. Dingham of Utica, New York, says:—"I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of Inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Scalds, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trial and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing power of inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Synovial Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

ORTAND, Ind., 6th June, 1859.

A. C. AYER & CO., Gents: I felt it my duty to acquaint you with the [illegible] your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having had a [illegible] I have suffered from it to various ways for years. Sometimes it burst out in blotches on my face and neck; sometimes it [illegible] in scrofulous sores on my [illegible]. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and troublesome beyond description. I tried many medicines and [illegible] my skilful, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, I grew worse. At length I was [illegible] to call [illegible] Dougal Kessenger [illegible] you had prepared an alterative Sarsaparilla. I knew from your reputation that anything you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, [illegible] dose of a teaspoonful every a [illegible] and sent almost three bottles. New and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off, leaving skin as [illegible] as ever, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agents of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours, ALFRED B. FALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1859, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous [illegible] Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says it saves the [illegible] by its constantly.

Hemorrhoids, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sebastian Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a big-[illegible] swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. R. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many leucorrhœa cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the constitutional taint caused by retention of the uterus. The ulceration itself was once cured. Sixteen within my household speaks it for three female derangements."

Edward S. Mayrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician [illegible] neither [illegible] but could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 20th August, 1859.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the cures I have [illegible] with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the constitutional affections for which it is recommended, and have found its [illegible] truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily [illegible], cured him in five weeks. Another one attacked by one of my apothecaries in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disease would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla, and he never healed, and he is well again, not of course without some stiff [illegible] in his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury, was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the touch, that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its [illegible], which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results of it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M.D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 8th July, 1859.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians and which I am in spite of all the [illegible] I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was taken sick. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. VELIAM.

John T. Gotchett, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for many years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The [illegible] that can be sold of you is not [illegible] strength."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disease by which speedily [illegible] health. Such a remedy has long been required by the [illegible] of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidences of its virtues. It is unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and has truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. For sale this community, as every family, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not in the least than to assure them that it has for all the victims that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & BEAN, Conway P.O County of Leinster, Ontario, Canada.

HASTINGS, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

THIS is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoobooss Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoobooss Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoobooss Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Hudeo, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEGG, J. P. &c

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoobooss Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that is her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty ointment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, that make up the sum of human suffering, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against the sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patients restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the [illegible] of the Lungs and Throat, that the most [illegible] yield to it, when nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Bloopers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Cold Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does cure, and does not kill. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is nowise hurtful to any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed. Thus-fevered persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the [illegible] to healthy [illegible].

For Bilious Fevers and Liver Complaints, it is a [illegible] remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold [illegible] the world.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Colley's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical motor wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, Clark Co., Ohio, 28th, 1869.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Fanwheel, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by James Leffel, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed.] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Lumber-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

New Method of Washing Clothes

Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is [illegible] and dispenses entirely with [illegible] of clothes. The [illegible], made [illegible] by the action of [illegible], are driven up through the clothes, penetrate them, passed down through the clothes, and, cleansing it perfectly without exception, it has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, pulling and pressing process must necessarily [illegible] them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing day a horror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to [illegible] it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, no [illegible].

The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.

IN compliance with the solicitation of a number of the Business men to publish a combined Directory of the County of Peterboro, giving name, residence and occupation of every person throughout the County, I have commenced the same, and as the outlay will be heavy I respectfully solicit the patronage of the public in general.

As I have just published and delivered Directories of the Counties of Ontario and Victoria in a style never before attempted by any other publisher in the Dominion, and I may also add that no works of the kind have ever been published in those Counties that have given equal satisfaction, and when I secure the public that the forthcoming Directory of this County will be produced in the same style, and that all that money, labor and perseverance combined with experience and personal supervision will do to produce an perfect work as ever yet has been compiled, will be done. I feel confident that the people of this County will give me their patronage and support.

The business men will be waited upon at their places of business by myself, when I will be enabled to explain my system more fully to

CANADA.

BY W. C. BRYANT.

Wherever printed the reason we left,
Wherever now we find herself,
Our future home is here:
Love, then, with ardent love the soil,
That well rewards our varied toil,
And greet it with a cheer!

Away beyond the eternal deep
Our thoughts will sometimes roving keep,
By old attractions led;
But call them back and let them grow,
Twining this land of sun and snow,
For better none may wed.

Its summits with their gorgeous hues,
Its cataracts, and inland views,
Strike on the soul with power;
And when, with magic art, the Vail
Hangs lodens beauty over all,
'Tis Nature's finest hour.

Around its rocky eastern shore
Atlantic billows lash and roar
In concert with the gales;
And, dauntless, forth our bravest ride
Upon the heaving, foamy tide,
And spread their bulging sails.

Our country yet from sea to sea,
Through forests vast, and rich prairie,
Will stretch its mighty lines;
And millions of the free-born race,
With thought and vigor in their face,
Toil in its fields and mines.

There lakes expanding in their price,
The rivers rolling on their tide,
Will throughout fleets sustain;
And mariners from distant shores,
Lay riches at our merchants' doors,
Beyond their dreams of gain.

Here, Liberty With Order crowned,
Will call this spot her chosen ground,
While ceaseless years are rolled;
And, grateful for her costly boons,
Augmenting with unswerving means,
Our sons will stand her shield.

Peace be their darling theme and song—
Peace with the feeble and the strong:
Full war their hated task;
But when an arm would try their steel,
Then may they fight with courage leaf,
Nor ever mercy ask.

Her bards will build immortal lays,
To rival songs in other days,
And charm these cultured best;
Nay, flame the heart of sire and son,
While battle-work remains undone,
And danger lifts its crest.

Adopted land! as in you sky,
The parent azure meets the eye,
So be thy name attired;
The home of virtue, truth and skill,
A refuge from the tyrant's will,
Strong nations first admired.

Selections.

The Great Cheshire Political Cheese.

Many readers, particularly the more elderly, have heard of Elder JOHN LELAND, of Cheshire, Mass., and of his power, pathos and eccentricities as a preacher. The following account of an incident now almost forgotten except by antiquarians, was furnished by Elihu Burritt to the Gentleman's Magazine, London:

Mr. Urban: How fare English or American readers can see or hear the name, Cheshire, without thinking of the rich and golden cheese associated with it! The mind, at the mere mention of the word, darts off to those great doublecons of the dairy which so distinguish the famous pastoral county of England. So indissoluble is the association, that the eldest daughter of the county in America, Cheshire, in Connecticut, a little Puritan town, felt, in taking and wearing the name, that next to the religious faith of its English mother, it ought to do honor to her reputation as a cheese-making community. And this it did. The Connecticut Cheshire was hardly a dozen years old, when it became noted as a dairy town, and turned out cheeses which would have done credit to old England's Cheshire. Nor was this all, nor the best. So fully and faithfully did the early settlers of the place cherish this relationship and association, that when a small colony of them pushed their way up into the hilly interior of Massachusetts, they not only called the town they planted and peopled there Cheshire, but they made it more famous still for cheese. One, the joint production of all the dairies in the town, was the greatest prodigy, probably, that was ever recorded in the history of milk and its manufacture; especially taking the motive into consideration.

Early in the present century, to use a popular saying, "politics ran high" in America. From the first a religious element was thrown into it, and made it glow with the hottest combustion of theological odium. Thomas Jefferson, the great democratic leader, was charged with being an infidel of the French revolutionary school. Never did the "No Popery" tocsin stir a Protestant community to deeper emotion than did this war-cry against democrats and deliverers in the New England States. The Puritan pulpits thundered against them and their chief with all the large liberty of pulpit thunderbolts. Only elect Thomas Jefferson President of the United States, and there would be an auto da-fe of all their bibles, hymn-books, and sermons; the altars of New-England would be demolished, and all their religious institutions would be swept away by an inrushing and irresistible flood of French infidelity.

In the little town of Cheshire, nestling among the western hills of Massachusetts, a counter voice of great power was lifted up from its pulpit against this flood of obloquy and denunciation that rolled and roared against Jefferson and democracy.—One of the most remarkable men that ever filled a pulpit stood up in this, and bent back the fierce current of this odium against the great political chief he honored with unbounded trust and admiration. This was Elder John Leland, one of the most extraordinary preachers produced by those stirring times. He was a plain, blunt man of keen common sense, trained for action by a combination of extraordinary circumstances—so that extent that he could hardly be called a self-taught man. His whole reading and thinking were concentrated upon two great books—the Bible and Human Nature. He knew by heart every chapter and verse of these two vital volumes of instruction. The rude and sturdy energy of his mind, which his religious faith did not soften, made him a kind of Hugh Latimer in the New-England village in which he was born. But these characteristics assumed a more pronounced type under the peculiar circumstances of which he was subsequently subject.

Both the preacher who made as intimate acquaintance with Thomas Jefferson while he was in Virginia. The great father of American democracy reciprocated the Elder's esteem, and confided to him his public life, and all the principles and opinions on which he sought to base the structures and institutions of the young Republic. Leland returned to New-England, and settled down as pastor for life, in Cheshire, Massachusetts. Soon after he commenced his ministry there, the country was shaken from north to south, and east to west, with the most vehement agitation that it has ever experienced. Jeffersonian Democracy or Hamiltonian Federalism was the question and issue depending upon the struggle. Leland threw himself into it with all the energy of his political convictions and mental life. Cheshire to a man followed his lead, and followed his convictions after he ceased to lead or live. Most of the New-England ministers led or sought to lead their congregations against the enemy they had come to "fear as a flood." If the term may be allowed, they smothered the name of Jefferson between Voltaire and Tom Paine. Democrats and infidels became equal and interchangeable terms of opprobrium. But the Puritan politicians were outvoted, and Thomas Jefferson was elected President of the United States by a large and most jubilant majority.

No man had done more to bring about this result than Elder John Leland, of the little hill town of Cheshire, in Massachusetts. Besides influencing thousands of outsiders in the same direction, he had brought up his whole congregation and parish to vote for the father of American democracy. He now resolved to set the seal of Cheshire to the election in a way to make the nation know there was such a town in the republican Israel. He had only to propose the method, to command the unanimous approbation and indorsement of his people. And he did propose it from the pulpit to a full congregation on the Sabbath. With a few earnest words, he inclined every man and woman who owned a cow, to bring every quart of milk given on a certain day, or all the curd it would make, to a great cider-mill belonging to their brave townsman, Captain John Brown who was the first man to detect and denounce the treachery of Benedict Arnold, in the Revolution. No Federal cow was allowed to contribute a drop of milk to the offering, lest it should leaven the whole lump with a distasteful savor. It was the most glorious day the sun ever shone upon before or since in Cheshire. Its brightest beams seemed to bless the day's work.—With their best Sunday clothes under their white tow frocks came the men and boys of town, down from the hills and up from the valleys, with their contingents to the great offering in pails and tubs. Mothers, wives, and all the rosy maidens of these rural homes, came in their white aprons and best calico dresses to the sound of the church bell that called young and old, rich and poor, to the great cooperative fabrication. In farm wagons, in Sunday wagons, and all kinds of four-wheeled and two-wheeled vehicles they wended their way to the general rendezvous—all exuberant with the spirit of the occasion. It was not only a great glad gathering of all the people of the town but of half of their yoked oxen and family horses; and these stepped of in the march with the animation of a holiday.

An enormous hoop had been prepared and placed upon the bed of the cider-press which had been well purified for the work, and covered with a false bottom of the purest material. The hoop, resting on this foundation, was then the curbing, the Elder lined it off, with his grave, generous voice; that is, he read two lines at a time, which the congregation sang; then he gave out two more, they coming up the same into equal bits, with good nothing spaces between them. He then dismissed his flock with the benediction, with an solemn an air as if they had been laying the foundation of a church; and they all filed away to their homes as decorously and thoughtfully as if they had attended religious service.

When the cheese was well dried and ready for use, it weighed sixteen hundred pounds. It could not be safely conveyed on wheels to its destination. About the middle of the following winter, when there was a good depth of snow all over the country, the great Cheshire was placed on a sleigh, and Elder Leland was commissioned to take the reins and drive it all the way to Washington. The distance was fully five hundred miles, requiring a journey of three weeks. The news of his political testimonial had spread far and wide, and the Elder was hailed with varying acclamations as the town through which he passed, especially in those where he put up for the night. The Federals equipped him, of course, with their satirical witticisms; but they caught a Tartar in the Elder, who was more than a match for them in that line of humor. Arriving at Washington, he proceeded immediately to the White House, and presented his people's gift to President Jefferson, in a speech which only the Elder could make. He gave him some of the details of the battle they had fought for his election and reputation; how they had defended him from the odium and malicious slander of the Puritans, and how they all, both old and young, gloried in his triumph. He presented the cheese to him as a token of their profound respect, as their soul-thankful to the popular ratification of his election. It was the unanimous and co-operative production of all the people of Cheshire.—Every family, and every cow in the town had contributed to it.

The President responded with deep and earnest feeling to this remarkable gift, coming from the heart of a New-England population; receiving it as a token of his fidelity to the equal and inalienable rights of individual men and States. This portion of his speech has been preserved: "I will cause this magnificent object to be placed upon the records of our nation, and it will ever shine amid its glorious archives. I shall ever esteem among the most happy incidents of my life. And now, my much respected reverend friend, I will, by the consent, and in the presence of my most honored council, here this cheese eat, and you will take back with you a portion of it, with my hearty thanks, and present it to your people, that they may all have a taste. Tell them never to falter in the principles they have so nobly defended. They have successfully come to the rescue of our beloved country in the time of her great peril. I wish them health and prosperity, and may milk in great abundance never cease to flow to the latest posterity."

The Steward of the President poured a long glittering knife through the cheese, and cut out a deep and golden wedge in the presence of Mr. Jefferson, the heads of the departments, foreign ministers, and many other eminent personages. It was of beautiful cadmic color, a little variegated in its appearance, owing to the great variety of curds completing it; and as it was served up to the company with bread, all complimented it for its richness, flavor, and color; and it was considered the most perfect specimen of cheese ever exhibited at the White House. The Elder was introduced to all the members of the distinguished party, who warmly testified their admiration of such a token of regard to the chief magistrate of the nation from him and his people.

Having thus accomplished his interesting mission, Elder Leland set out on his return journey to Massachusetts. The great cheese and its reception had already been noised abroad, and he made a kind of triumphal march all the way back to Cheshire. On arriving there, there was another meeting, hardly second in attendance and interest that around Captain Brown's cider mill in the summer. The Elder consented to his parishioners all the incidents of his reception, and presented to them the thanks of the President. Then they all partook of the great yellow wedge of their cheese, which they ate with double relish on the President's gift to them, as well as their love to him. Then the little hill town of Cheshire ratified, signed, and sealed the election of Thomas Jefferson, who has been called justly the father of American democracy. It was most worthy the intelligence, patriotism, and bonhomie of a New-England dairy town, and one which its successive generations will speak of with just pride and congratulation.

"A Good Steady Boy Wanted."

"Wanted.—A good, steady boy, of about sixteen years of age, to learn, the printer's trade. A Boy from the country preferred—must have a passable English education, and come with his mind made up to learn the Trade."

The above is from the St. Joseph county, Michigan, Democrat. The editor of the paper wants a good, steady boy, of about sixteen years of age," to learn the printing business, to commence at low but reasonable wages; to get the first principles of manhood, and to lay the foundation of a business life. He wants a boy who will come with his mind made up, to be manly, to give his employer his whole time instead of idling or shirking, who will work without watching, who will study to please, economize the property placed in his care, who will be honest, who will step in at nights, who will let liquor and cigars alone—in fact, the editor wants one of the old fashioned lads, such as were our grandsires.

Where will he find him? We ask the question of every young man about sixteen years old, A good, steady boy!" Were is he? Where can a better match his generate? Where is the young man who is willing to go at a business to make a business of it? Ah! that tells the story. The future girls in these words that [illegible] will not find him. He does not respect this employment, he is ashamed to go among people and say he is learning a trade. He does not respect industry. But will a boy from the country-side? Perhaps some may. Those faithful. The majority will work a week, a month, perhaps two months, and then, when they shall be able to earn a portion of their wages they get dissatisfied, discouraged, get wrong ideas of their usefulness and importance, and then, go away. Others, I ever to take up a new trade, fill to become a burst upon the town of hollow life, of no good to even themselves.

If they editor gets a good, steady boy," one who will fill the place to his satisfaction, you may look to see that boy become a man—a business man—a true man. He will be patient, conscientious, noble and industrious; he will strive to excel, understand without repeated information, to get up the ladder higher every month, and when he has finished his trade he will see that most time wasted a good, steady, competent man to assist in managing a paper—to take charge of an office—to become a partner in a paying business.

It is so in every business. It wants these steady boys—boys who will learn to learn—to grow up into useful men—to become energetic, raising, bustling things of the business world, instead of dolleal spectators of obituary wrecks. There is a place in this great country for every talent, industrious led to learn a trade or do business at fair wages. It may be hard to find a position for every day that pupils only arrives to make employers discontented here and there the modern youth. But let any lad with bold heart in daylight by himself into manhood and competition only says as would only put away the idea that work was never meant for him, and go plainly down and say as much to those for whom he would labor, and he will find open doors on every side. What the world wants most, and what is now the hardest to get, is "a good steady boy."

IRISH WIT.

The following colloquy at cross purposes once took place between an agent and an Irish voter on the eve of an election;

'You are a Roman Catholic?'

'Am I?' said the fellow.

'Are you not?' demanded the agent.

'You say I am,' was the answer.

'Come sir; answer—what's your religion?'

'The true religion.'

'What religion is that?'

'My religion.'

'And what's your religion.'

'My brother's religion.'

'And what was your mother's religion?'

'She took whisky in her tay.'

'Come, I'll have you send an answer do you are,' said the agent, piqued into an encounter of wit with this fellow, [illegible] baffling of every question asked of the latter.

'You bless yourself, don't you?'

'When I'm done with you I think I ought.'

'What place of worship do you go to?'

'the most convenient.'

'But of what denomination is that you won't find it out.

'What is your belief?'

'My belief is that you are punished.'

'Do you confess?'

'Not to you.'

'Come, I take you. Will [illegible] you send for if you were about to die?'

'Dr. G——'

'Not for the priest?'

'I mean first send a messenger.'

'Confound your quibbling—tell me, then what your opinions' best—your [illegible] opinions, I mean?'

'They are the same as my brothers.'

'And what are your brother's opinions?'

'Faix his opinions is, that I wont pay him the last penny that [illegible] owe him myself.'

A roar of laughter followed this answer; but the "doory agent at least declared that he must have a direct reply.

'I insist, sir, do you mean by it to say; are you a Roman Catholic?'

'I am,' said the fellow.

'And could you not say so at once?'

'You never asked me,' returned the other, 'I did,' said the agent.

'Indeed you didn't. You said I was a great many things, but you never asked me—you were going on with the odd crooked questions at me, and I got answers to match them; for sure I knew it was nonsense to cut out my behavior on your own pattern.'

An Irishman's Will.

In the name of God Amen! I, Timothy Deenes, of Berrydowndowry, in the county of Clare, farmer; being [illegible] sick and weak in my legs, but of sound [illegible] and warm heart—Glory be to God!—do make this my first and last will and codicil and my last testament. First I give my sowl to God when it pleases Him to take it, there no thanks to me for I don't help it this, and my body to be buried in the ground at Berrydowndowry Chapel, where all my kith and kin that have gone before, and those that live after, belonging to me are buried, pace to their ashes, and may the sod rest lightly over their bones. Bery me near my godfather and my mother who is separated all together, at the other side of the chapel, part. I give the last of ground containing two acres—rale solid Irish acres—to my eldest son Tim, after the death of his mother, if she lives to survive him. My daughter Mary and her husband, Teddy O'Rorke are to get the white cow that's going to have twelve black Rodes. Teddy, me noted boy, that was killed in the war in America, might have got his pick of poultry, but as he has gone I'll leave them to his wife who died a wake before him; I bequeath to all mankind fresh air of heaven' all the fishes of the sea they can take and all the birds of the air they can shoot, I have to the all the sun spots and stars. I leave to Peter Rafferty a pint of potheen I can't finish, and may God be merciful to him.

THE DUBLIN BILL.—The petitions in favor of this measure are pouring in from all parts of the country. They are very numerous, and cannot fail to have great weight with the counties council. If however they fail to carry it they will have to be replaced by others who will. We hope however they will give a favorable response to the appeal.

The petitions already from Cavan, Monaghan, Newcastle, Hope, Port Hope, Brighton, Murray, Brighton, Cramahe, Cobourg, Haldimand and Cotherne form when put together, a petition nearly sixty feet long.—Globe.

A Liverpool banking society, composed chiefly of operatives and small tradesmen, has been swindled out of £6,000 by two of its officers.

PARLIAMENTARY.

In Parliamentary matters there is very little to report. The School Bills were so amended in committee of the whole, that the Government by advice of Dr. Ryerson have withdrawn them altogether. The Grammar and Common School Laws therefore remain as they were.

The rejection of the Bills in the shape proposed by the Government is rather ominous of the influence of the Combination. And the fretful remarks of the Premier when asking that the Bills might be discharged, show that he feels keen'y the position in which he is placed.

The Common School Bill as proposed, contained several good things. Amendments that would have been received by the Country thankfully. But all those portions of the Bill that tend to curtail the power and influence of the people who pay the taxes, would meet with strenuous opposition.

There is another feature that has rarely been referred to, and that is, the fact that at the Conventions, Dr. Ryerson sought more to give his own ideas than to get the opinions of others; and hence the strong opposition of the House to the Bill. The Grammar School Bill was never discussed here, the Rev. Dr. declaring that we had very little to do with it, and that he had not time. The friends of education regret that the Bill is withdrawn entirely. Dr. Ryerson has done much for the education of the Country, and will always retain an honorable name in connection therewith; but if he had consulted the wishes of the people more than he did, this Bill would not have been framed as it was, and consequently not rejected.

Trustees and others concerned will therefore remember that there is to be no change in the School Law this year.

The County Court and Court of General Sessions of the Peace.

The court opened on Tuesday. His honor Judge Dennistoun presiding, and P. Fearce, Esq., associate Justice of the Peace.

The Grand Jury were—D. Haggart, Esq., foreman, and Donald Cameron, E. Allen, H. Collins, Wm. Deyell, Jos. Elmhurst, John Garbutt, J. G. Graham, G. W. Holcombe, Jas. McKibbon, P. W. Reynolds, J. Roche, C. Scollard, S. Stewart, J. Scott, J. Sanderson, J. Sawers and R. Waram, Esqs.

There being no business to come before them, they merely examined the Jail, and reported it in good order. All the prisoners being well satisfied with their treatment except Peggie Oakley. She would rather be on the streets again.

There were two or three appeals against decisions of Magistrates, two of these were dismissed with costs.

The case of most general interest was W. Weller against W. W. Armstrong, Esq., all of Blairton, for non return of convictions, contrary to the statute.

W. Armstrong and P. Preston had information laid before them of Mr. Weller selling liquor without license, and he was fined for so doing. The magistrates made out the conviction and signed it on the eighth of May. This ought to have been filed with the clerk of the Peace by the second Tuesday of June. But Mr. Armstrong waited till he would come to the County Council, and filed it on the 17th of June, just one week beyond the time required by Law. For this delay, Mr. Weller entered an action against the magistrate Mr Armstrong. Verdict for Plf. The fine is $80, fixed by statute.

This is a case of considerable hardship. No one suffered loss or damage by the delay, nor was it a breach against the peace or happiness of the community; it was merely an action to have retaliation for being fined, although the magistrates could not avoid doing their duty. Justices of the Peace would therefore do well to look out for such contingencies, and see and make the necessary returns of convictions. We intended to give the portions of the statute referred to, but want of space prevents us doing so this week.

Eliza Jane Stratton, 2nd B, 2 years.

PRESENTATION.—On Saturday evening on the occasion of Mr. Wm. McKeown leaving the EXAMINER OFFICE to enter an Office in Toronto, he was made the recipient of a handsome gift by the employees of the office. They also presented him with the following address:

ADDRESS
Presented to Mr. Wm. McKeown, foreman of the Examiner Office, Peterboro', by the employees of the same.

DEAR SIR:—We have learned with deep regret your intention of removing from amongst us to another sphere of labour; and we feel that we cannot allow you to leave without expressing in a tangible form our respect for you, and the esteem in which we have always held you.

In our connection in the office we have always found you kind and considerate, and by your many acts of kindness toward us, you have gained a place in our hearts which time will not easily erase. We, therefore, ask you to accept this gift as a small token of our esteem for you; and let not the value of it, but the spirit in which it is given, express the high degree in which we have always held you as an instructor and master.

In leaving us you carry with you our good will, and we hope that prosperity may attend you in the future, and that you may long continue a star in the "Art Preservature of all Arts."

Signed on behalf of the Office,
F. J. JAMESON,
JAMES DOREL,
GEO. J. CHALMERS.

Mr. McKeown has been Foreman in the office about six years, and during that time was highly respected both by his employer, and by those under his control. He is an amiable disposition, kind to almost a fault, and one of the best workmen in Central Canada. He carries with him the best wishes of his employer, and of all those in the office he has so long been foreman of.

CONTEST FOR THE MAYORALITY.—On Monday the nomination for the Mayoralty will take place at noon. Thos. Chambers is again to oppose Mayor Scott, and is confident of success. Mr. Scott is just as confident of gaining. There may be other candidates in the field by Monday. We hope the Electors will choose the best man.

Mr. Scott has the influence of the office and an agreeable disposition in his favor.—Mr. Chambers is an old resident of the Town and of course has numerous friends in his favour. The contest is likely to be closer than it was 2 years ago.

COBOURG AND PETERBORO STEAMBOAT CO.—We understand that the above Co. have made an arrangement with the Cobourg and Marmora R. R. for the carriage of goods and passengers for the space of nine years; and they purpose building a new boat this winter, that will make daily connections at Harwood. By this route, passengers coming from the East or West on the Grand Trunk, can be landed in Peterboro' as 12 o'clock, or 30 minutes ahead of present time. Our merchants ought to encourage the above Co. in opening this route, as this would tend to restrain any undue influence in freight charges.

PUR.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Mr. Lech in another column. He has been carrying on the manufacture of first-class furs for several years amongst us, and with great success. His manufactures command a high price in Port Hope, Cobourg, Toronto and Montreal. It speaks well for Peterboro that Muffs, Collarettes and other articles in fur can be manufactured here and sent to Montreal, and sold there to compete with city prices. Mr. Lech has shown us some Canada mink, of best quality, which he had manufactured for the market of those places mentioned, and which he assures us he retails at his own shop at what he wholesales them for in other places. In Montreal and Toronto they sell American and Russian mink as Canada mink, and to the uninitiated the difference is not easily detected, although Canada mink is worth nearly double the American or Russian.—Mr. Lech also assures us that Astrachan lamb-skin goods are often palmed off in the cities as Persian lamb, although the Astrachan is very inferior. In this way the public are greatly deceived. Even muskrat is called German mink, and sold at a high price, and yet such an animal as German mink is not known. Those who desire to purchase a first-rate article in fur, can do so from Mr. Lech, 15 to 20 per cent, he assures us, cheaper than in Montreal, Toronto, Cobourg, or Port Hope, and get a better article. This is very evident, as he supplies goods for all these markets. Purchasers would do well to give him a call, examine his goods and compare prices. In all probability those who go to Port Hope, Cobourg, or even to the cities to purchase, buy articles manufactured at home, for which they give 20 to 30 per cent more than sold for here. Id fact in every line of goods the dealer in Peterboro retails his goods at lower rates than retailers do in the cities; besides the latter knows with whom he deals when he buys in Peterboro.

Election of Officers of Loyal L. No. 169.

At the regular meeting of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 169, held in Orange Hall, Dec. 8th, 1869, the following were elected and installed officers for the ensuing year. Bro. R. H. McWilliams, Master; Bro. John Emery, Deputy Master pro tem; Bro. Agnew, Chaplain; Bro. Geo. Hunter, Secretary; Bro. Chas. Cook, Treasurer; Bros. A. Jeffrey, Jos. Thomson, Jas. Duncan, G. A. Robb, R. Tate, Committee.

LOYAL ORANGE LODGE NO. 484.

Also at the annual meeting of Prince of Wales, L. O. L. No. 484, held in Orange Hall, Dec. 8th, 1869. The following were elected and installed Officers for the ensuing year. Bro. John R. McWilliams, Master; Bro. John Smith, Deputy Master; Bro. Robt. Weir, Chaplain; Bro. M. Hall, Secretary; Bro. Wm. Brownscombe, Treasurer; Bro. M. Dunnigan, Master of Ceremonies.—Bros. Robt. Pallett, J. H. McWilliams, Geo. Saltburn, Robt. McFadden, and Andrew Tallister, Committee.

Mr. Alderman Glackmeyer's little bill of $1,800 for the use of his house by Prince Arthur and suite while in London Ont., is still unsettled. It was presented to the Agriculture and Art Association, lately in Toronto. The Alderman stated that $618 of it was paid for cab hire, the cabbies charged $c per hour. In connection with the visit Mr. Glackmeyer said no one could imagine the damage done table cloths, finger towels and stockings were taken. His sister was not left a pair but those on her, and the Alderman has his troubles to—In the room in which Col. Elphinstone stayed, a splendid brussels carpet was destroyed by spilling soup-suds on it, causing the carpet to be of one color on one side of the room, and on the other of a different color. The Board of Agriculture should pay the bill, as a token of their great loyalty, and hospitality toward the Royal Scion. $1,800 is nothing compared with a stain of having done honor to a son of Victoria.

The Toronto and Nipissing Railroad is to come to Lindsay, if the Town will grant a bonus of $60,000. If it does, should not a branch be extended so as to unite the Nipissing and Napoleon road at Peterboro'? This, with a branch to Norwood, would do a great deal towards opening up the back country.

NORTH RENFREW.—This now notorious Riding, has become a by-word for venality and corruption. And another stigma has been cast upon it, by the Returning Officers refusing to declare Mr. Deacon elected, although he had the greater number of votes.

In a speech of Wendell Phillips he says 900,000 dunces caused the great Rebellion. And he urged a system of compulsory education, that there might be no more danger to cause rebellion.

Mr. Carnegie is chairman of the committee on Wooden Railways. A wooden affair is sure to come out of it. Mr. Hulbert said before the committee that the road would last about five years.

FIRE.—Three barns and a stable belonging to Mr. Jos. Ashford, near Port Hope, were destroyed by fire last week. The barns contained implements and grain. The amount of insurance is $4,700.

The Toronto grocers have agreed to give no Christmas presents to customers this year.

Chicago papers warn intending immigrants not to stay, as there is not employment enough for those in the City at present.

The impression is growing stronger that the celebrated Redfenstein will be admitted to bail, and allowed to leave the Dominion.

Prince Arthur was informed by telegram on Saturday, that the Princess of Wales has been safely delivered of a son; both mother and child are doing well.

The Hon. J. Sandgeld McDonald has signified his intention to be present at a Railway Banquet to take place in Orillia, on Saturday.

Mr. Coyne has introduced a Bill to compel coopers to brand the name of the maker on all butter tubs, or firkins; and also the weight of the tub, under a penalty of $25.

A murderer in being sentenced to be hung in Terre Haute Indiana, not hearing the date, said coolly to the Judge; When did her Honor say that occurence would take place.

The Noel, the first merchant ship that passed through the Suez Canal, was wrecked in the Red Sea, about 86 miles from Suez.

Free Grants.

From the returns presented by the Provincial Secretary last Monday, with respect to the number of persons located on free grants, from the 1st January to the 1st November, 1869, with the number of acres and names of townships, and also with the number of acres sold to localities under the Homestead Act during the same period, we gather the following results; In the nine townships of Muskoka, Draper, Macaulay, Watt, Humphrey, Cardwell, Stephenson, Brunel, Monck; in the district of Muskoka the number of persons located during the time specified is 276, the number of acres located is 27,877, the purchasers of land number 40, the number of acres bought being 539. In the township of Foley and Macdougall, county Simcoe, 29 persons have located, with number of acres located 2,819; purchasers of land; number of acres, 10. In the townships of Chandos, Cardiff Anstruther, Minden & Stanhope, county Peterborough 40 persons located on 3,995 acres, with one purchaser of 17 acres. In the township Carlow, Dungannon, Herschel and Montcalm, County Hastings, 15 persons located 1,495 acres. In the township of Anson, county Victoria, 5 persons located on 395 acres. In Lonsdale & Grattan South Algoma, Alice, and Buchanan, county Renfrew, 11 persons located on 955 acres. In the township of Hagarty, district of Nipissing, 16 persons located on 1,066 acres. In the counties of Renfrew, Victoria and Hastings, and in the district of Nipissing, there were no purchasers, and consequently no land sold. The total figures show the number of persons settling on free grants during the year was 396; the number of acres located, 28,539, and the number of purchasers, 44; the acres bought being 566.—Globe.

SMITH COUNCIL.

Smith, Dec. 6, 1869.

The Council met. All the members present, the Reeve in the chair.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt and seconded by Mr. Sanderson,—That the Council of the Township of Smith embrace this opportunity of expressing our sincere regret at the sudden and unexpected death of Matthew Waram, our late Collector and Inspector, to recognize and acknowledge the kind, straightforward and faithful manner in which he has fulfilled the duties of said office for a number of years, and that we deeply sympathise with his widow and family in this sad bereavement.

That the clerk do transmit a copy of the resolution to his widow.—Carried.

A By-law to appoint Richard Waram Collector and Inspector, for the unexpired term of the late Matthew Waram was read a first, second and third time and passed.

Stingiest Husband on Record.

A Chicago court has granted one divorce for good and sufficient cause. The petitioner was Elizabeth Edgeworth, and the bill of complaint makes her husband out one of the meanest of men. After their marriage the man would carefully measure the contents of the sugar bowl after meals, estimate the size of the butter left and weigh the crusts of bread remaining, and take a general overhaul as to the rashers required during the day. He denied her access to the pantry, save when she put food in it and took it out, keeping it locked. He did not allow her wholesome or sufficient food, and was niggardly in the extreme. During the last six weeks they lived together he followed her to her bedroom when she went to make up the bed, remained there during the operation, and then locked the door, not allowing her to go in again until it was done. He would not allow her to stay in the house alone, and frequently when she had stepped into the back yard, he has locked the door and gone off, compelling her to remain outside until his return. She was a widow when married to Edgeworth, and had a child, which he promised to support; but after marriage, he turned the child out and forbade its return. She used occasionally, to furnish it with crust of bread but he discovered and stopped it. She was then obliged to leave him and work and support her child, but they both returned when Edgworth treated them so cruely that they were compelled to leave again. It is alleged that he is worth $15,000.

A MISGUIDED FATHER.—A gentleman residing near Belfast, had a son, who had fallen a victim to the vauntoons of our land, and become a miserable drunkard. Every effort was so effectually employed, for a length of time, to reclaim him. At last he determined to make an effort to reform; he signed the pledge against ardent spirit, but knowing the enemy that lurked in wine and ale, he wisely resolved to abstain entirely from all intoxicating liquors. He rapidly regained his former respectability. One day he accompanied his father to a large dinner party, but drank no wine. His father, vain! pressed him to take a glass of wine, saying it would be no breach of his pledge. But wiser than his parent, he refused. The father insisted, "take one glass, and don't make yourself an oddity." To please his father, and get rid of his importunity, he took a glass of wine. It was like pouring oil on a fire. His appetite for strong drink, which many thought had been destroyed, was immediately renewed and raged furiously. Having got one glass, he was unable to resist the temptation to take a second and third, till at last he became intoxicated. In this state he left the party, mounted his horse to ride home, but said to relate, he never reached it. On the way, he fell off the horse, broke his neck, and was carried home a corpse. Oh, parents! let the horrors of this not tempt your children to drink.

Rev. WM. REID, Edinburgh.

At a Public Meeting held in Belfast a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbors, that when a friendly people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of consumption, coughs, colds, sluggish liver complaints, and all other diseases incidental to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Great Vital Destroyer." Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

BURDOCK.
"My dear," said Mrs Grout to her husband, Christmas morning, "the coal which we have purchased from Mr Hawk, a year ago to almost did, and is all ashes and mortar."
"Well," said her husband, "and what's to be done? Shall I take it back to the coal yard?"
"No," said the husband gruffly; "they need for it when she wants it. Send, do you go down to Mr. Brown's and ask him to lend me his axe to chop some wood, this forenoon; corn is dull, and I saw him grind his last night. And, Jim, go to John Clark's and ask him to lend me his hammer; and do you hear? you might as well borrow a few nails while about it."
A little boy enters and says, "My father said she'd ask if you had taken quite as much which you borrowed a week ago last Wednesday: he wants to use it."
"Wants his axe, child? What can he want with it? I have not done with it yet; but if he wants it, I suppose he must have it. Tell him to send it back, though, as soon as he can spare it."
They sat down to breakfast. "Queer?"

An American correspondent writes down Mr. McDougall as a quarter sixteenth—tyrannical and overbearing to the backwoods. The mistake probably had its origin on Pembina, where a man with a short coat and good clothes would be looked upon with suspicion, as a person trying to put on airs.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISTRICT OF YUCATAN. This singular tract of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico—and still retain some of its peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a keg of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who, sickbeith for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patronage, while they sometimes lose their own. NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysms, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Alleviator, according to direction. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and 274 King St. West, Toronto.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH lately called at Rockville, in the instance of the collieries of Miss Caroline Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be no heresy in the eyes of the worldly in favor of the Great Shoshonean Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, honest it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and wealth they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation. And if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.—The memory of Dr. Wistar is emblazoned in the hearts of thousands whom his Balsam of Wild Cherry has cured of coughs, colds, consumption, or some other form of Pulmonary disease. It is now over forty years since this preparation was brought before the public, and yet the demand for it is constantly increasing.

A CLERGYMAN writing to a friend says, "My voyage to Kerrye is indefinitely postponed. I have discovered the 'fountain of health' on this side of the Atlantic. Three bottles of the Peruvian Syrup have rescued me from the fangs of the fiend Dyspepsia." Dyspepsites should drink from this fountain.

CATARRH, is a disease which distresses us and disgusts our friends, can be instantly relieved and quickly cured by using Dr. J. Briggs' Alleviator, an invaluable Remedy for all pain and inflammation. Sold by Druggists.

CONSUMPTIVES, try Dr. J. Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer. It will relieve and cure you.—For all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, nothing can surpass its beneficial effects. Sold by Druggists.

SUBSCRIBING FOR PAPERS.

Winter is the usual season of the year for renewing subscriptions to newspapers periodicals, and, therefore, the following reflections may be found reasonable:—

1st. In selecting a family paper, even more than in securing good seed for a farm, it is necessary to "get the best." To save the minds of the family with taxes, is the worst husbandry which any father of a family can practise, but a profane, infidel or even carelessly conducted paper is sure to do this in the most effectual way. As the family paper is, so is very great extent, will the family be; and papers that admit immoral or infidel articles or advertisements are almost sure to mislead the the family that reads them.

2nd. It therefore evidently behoves every father of a family to consider carefully this most important subject—important for himself but far more important for those dearest to him; and if he be at present taking in a paper of a low, reckless style of morality, to cut off without hesitation, and substitute a better. And how neighborly for one who takes a really good paper to induce the families around him to take it also!

3rd. In this connection, the MONTREAL WITNESS and CANADIAN MESSENGER may be confidently recommended as containing wholesome, entertaining, instructive and stimulating mental food in great variety, without any admixture of poison. Nor is it only for family reading matter that the Witness is celebrated. It stands in the first rank as a news and commercial journal.

For those who can afford to take a magazine, the NEW DOMINION MONTHLY, issued from the same office, but containing entirely different matter from the WITNESS and MESSENGER, and ornamented with engravings, one of them a fashion-plate, can likewise be confidently recommended.

The terms of the above publications are as follows:—DAILY WITNESS, $3; MONTHLY WITNESS [SEMI WEEKLY] $1; WEEKLY WITNESS, $1 per annum. Postage payable by readers at his office.

CANADIAN MESSENGER, (eight pages) 16 for a month 37½ cents per annum, or 7 to one address for $1.

THE NEW DOMINION MONTHLY, $1 50 per annum, or to a club of 4, $5.

THE MESSENGER and DOMINION Monthly being periodicals, have to be post paid by the publishers. All are payable in advance, and stop when the subscriptions expire, unless previously renewed.

The circulation of these newspapers is very large, and consequently they offer an excellent medium for unobjectionable advertisements, which are inserted on moderate terms.

All orders, communications and remittances are to be addressed to

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving merit is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to remedies, relative to the arts, or inventions. Next to enlighten, invention or discovery, has the highest position for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in this respect, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing affirmations are applicable to the discovery of its beneficial discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and in fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my home is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to give him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who doubt it, become very large quantities of it, and swiftly that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by his use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Freeman Fare, Chilblains, Corns, Bunions, Bad Nails, &c., are positively cured by the use of Dr. J. Bridges' Modern Curative. This Remedy has been compounded with great care, and, used as directed, never fails. Sold by Druggists.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alternative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pleurisie or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and in land superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for chafes, burns, br ises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain venders of Liniment to decry Dodson's Renovating Liquid. Whenever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one equal. Beware of Counterfeits.

A MYSTERY

AT

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the whirring, cooing music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sue or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shirted,
Quickly soon his eye uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of news?'
But no other word he uttered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'

'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.

So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me then to purchase

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Matchless Boots and Shoes.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound you need after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshoneen Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Brosseurs, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Osnecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Papineau, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞ Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Henry Kempt, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

DR. A. TRASK'S

MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—'I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of Inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trials, and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs, and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

DR. J. C. AYER'S

AMERICAN PILLS.

Ottawa, C. E., March 1, 1869.

Dr. J. C. Ayer, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to calm down a fiend stirred, which my stomach at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. V. FERRIER,
Clerk of Queens Bench.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Hill, of New York City.

Not only are your pills the best cathartic that we use, but in all bilious disorders, and liver complaints, we find their beneficial effects upon the liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any remedy we are acquainted with, and I cheerfully add my testimony to their superior worth to that of the millions of the people.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Jaundice, &c.

From Rev. D. C. Van Ness, Pastor of the M. E. Church, Ravenna, O., Feb. 15, 1869.

Sir: I have used your Pills in my general and family practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is truly wonderful, and consequently they are an unfailing remedy for many derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have related from a case of bilious disease an obstinate that it did not promptly yield to them. Professionally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Bolic, Worms.

From Dr. J. C. Grant, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best purgatives I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious disorders and derangements. Their searching action frees very completely and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

Dr. Ayer: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can conscientiously recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Worms, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 26, 1868.

Dear Sir: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent remedy to cleanse the system and purify the blood. Yours, TRULY,
HENRY C. HEADLEY, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, &c.

From Rev. J. E. Pringle, Montreal, Canada.

The result natural to end of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of your preparations have found their as efficacious as I have, they will have just to be known long to be the benefit of the human family. The one that completed, which, although had enough to itself, is the preparation of others that are worse. I believe the elements in original of the Sarsaparilla, from Rev. but pure Ayer's effect that expels and cures the disease.

From Rev. E. Short, Physician and Minister, Boston.

I find one or more large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent preventives of the colds and other kindred affections to which we are subject. They are very efficacious in purifying the blood and system. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

Pastor's House, Savannah, Geo., Oct. 6, 1866.

Honored Sir: I should be ungrateful if I omitted your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating rheumatic pains, which defied the skill of the best physicians here. Providentially I met the advice of your Cherry Pectoral, and in a few days I felt the effects of the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Savannah, Dr. Mordecai, I took your Pills. They effects were slow, but sure. In process of time I was entirely well.

Ringworm, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Sores, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Humors, and Skin Diseases.

Dr. Ayer: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Salt Rheum and Scald Head—a painful disease—from which I suffered for years. VINCENT ALDRICH.

Any Host of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in the hands of skilful physicians, is a dangerous drug in private hands. Ayer's Pills contain no mercury or mineral, and may be taken with safety.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

New Method of Washing Clothes,

Without Labor.

"THE DOMINION"

Steam Washing Boiler.

THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced by many qualified as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.

☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.

A MYSTERY

AT

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairy streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shined,
Quickly soon his eyes opined—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for or me messenger of news?'
But no other word he mattered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's some like
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Boots and Shoes?
'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse;'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
At his vanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me then to purchase
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Matchless Boots and Shoes.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or grey hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for inflamed complaints, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When neither the cunning of physicians, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Hoarseness and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all around the world.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Colley's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Wrought Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical motor wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 28th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by JAMES LEFFEL, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us therefor. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We will call special attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gauges, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Wooden Machinery, Webster-ton Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Catalogues containing full information furnished free to all applicants.

To Messrs. Chisholm & Co., Proprietors of the Chisholm Remedy, Peterboro, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY, of the Township of Dummer, in the County of Peterboro, Province of Ontario, Widow, aged 52 years, maketh oath and saith:

This is to certify that during the winter of 1868 I was taken with a severe cough, which gradually during the summer of 1869 developed to my lungs, and on 10 or 12 days in June I became so weak that I could not walk. I was confined to my chair. For about three years, while this weakness was coming on, I had advertisements, I caught cold and was sick, playing, at different times, these distressing pulmonic maladies of different kinds, pneumonia and friends, but of no avail. I continued to grow worse and worse, until the summer of 1869, when I was induced to try the Chisholm Remedy by reading the same pamphlet. At this time I had become reduced to such weakness in my hands; to feed I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Chisholm Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. There are some of whom this can be proven, but however, to all my neighbors and friends; and to anyone afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Chisholm Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Keene, County of Hastings, this sixth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEBB, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her sentiments to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was pronounced hopeless; and I know that the Chisholm Remedy, always acknowledged her recovery to the Chisholm Remedy. Whether or not by the peculiar properties of this medicine, this thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted similar to the performances of a miracle.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla
FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints, Scrofula in all its forms, Erysipelas, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and all Skin Diseases.

SARNIA, Lambton Co., Ont., Nov. 20th, 1869.

J. C. AYER & Co.: Gentlemen,—I have long known your Sarsaparilla as a valuable remedy for blood diseases, and have frequently used it in my practice with good effect. I have also used it in my own family, and found it to be a most excellent alterative. I have used it for a severe humor, which appeared on my face, and was very troublesome, until the use of your Sarsaparilla relieved me of it. I have also used it for my children, when troubled with humors, and it has never failed to cure them. I believe it to be the best alterative we can use, and recommend it to all. Yours truly, ALFRED B. MALLET.

St. Anthony's Fire, Tumor, Ulcers, Pimples, Erysipelas, Blotches, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Tetter, Eruptions, Scurvy, &c.

Dr. Robert H. Dodds writes from Salem, N. Y., Sept. 1869, that he has cured all these diseases in his practice, which, he says, is extensive, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He says he cures the scrofula, Erysipelas, Blotches, Pimples, Tetter, Ringworm, &c., by purifying the blood.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sylvester Spear of Prospect, Penobscot Co., Maine, writes: "There has been a great many cases of Goitre in this town, and I have cured them all with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In some cases it has taken a long time, but it has never failed to cure them, unless I had failed to get the patient to take it for a sufficient length of time."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Irregular, Painful, Uterine Discharges, Female Weakness.

Dr. J. B. Chaney, of New York City, writes: "I have used your Sarsaparilla in my practice, and find it to be a most excellent alterative in the cure of Leucorrhœa or Whites, Irregular and Painful Menstruation, and other derangements of the female system. I have also used it in cases of Scrofula, Erysipelas, Ulcers, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and other diseases of the blood, and find it to be the best blood purifier I have ever used in my practice, and I can cheerfully recommend it to the public as the best remedy for the above complaints that is known to the profession."

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Debility, Piles, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Pain, Nervousness.

Rev. Edward L. Hamline, of Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "A dangerous disease of the liver, which had defied all remedies, and which had fastened upon the stomach, was cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has also relieved me of dyspepsia, which had troubled me for many years. I have frequently recommended it to others, and in every instance it has proved the best of all remedies for the purposes for which it is designed."

Edward S. Bowen, of Fairfield, Conn., writes: "A dangerous disease of the liver, which had defied all remedies, and which had fastened upon the stomach, was cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has also relieved me of dyspepsia, which had troubled me for many years. I have frequently recommended it to others, and in every instance it has proved the best of all remedies for the purposes for which it is designed."

Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sores, Ulcers, Tumors, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scurvy, Blotches, Pimples, Pustules, Scrofula, Ringworm, Eruptions, Dyspepsia, Debility, Piles, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Pain, Nervousness, Female Weakness, Uterine Discharges, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Irregular, Painful Menstruation, Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck, Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint, and Diseases arising from Impure Blood.

Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Gentlemen,—I have received within the past year numerous letters from persons in different parts of the country, requesting information concerning your Sarsaparilla, and stating that they were troubled with Scrofula, Erysipelas, Ulcers, Pimples, Blotches, Boils, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and all kinds of Skin Diseases, and that they had been cured by your Sarsaparilla. I have myself taken it for Scrofula, and it has done me more good than all other medicines I ever used. I have also given it to my children for Scrofula, and it has cured them. I believe it to be the best blood purifier we can use, and recommend it to all. Yours truly, ALFRED B. MALLET.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by J. C. Ayer & Co.'s Agents in Peterborough, Rogers, Kempt, Gilmour, Cavilier, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR ALL THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES.

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, and for the Incipient Stages of Consumption.

This is a medicine of unsurpassed power over all the diseases for which it is recommended. Those who have once used it for Pectoral complaints will need no other remedy, and will take no other when they can get this. Its wonderful cures of Colds, Coughs, Croup, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, Influenza, Whooping Cough, and Consumption, are known in every community. Even the most skeptical are convinced by its effects upon themselves, of its superior excellence as a remedy for the class of complaints it is designed to cure. Once used, it is always sought when a cathartic is required. Its sugar coating preserves its virtues for any length of time, and renders it pleasant to take. Being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from its use in any quantity.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by J. C. Ayer & Co.'s Agents in Peterborough, Rogers, Kempt, Gilmour, Cavilier, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

Poetry.

What we all Think.

That age was older once than now,
In spite of looks sublimely sheol,
Or silvered on the youthful brow;
Truth takes make love and children wed.

That sunshine had a heavenly glow
Which faded with those "good old days,"
When winters came with deeper snow,
And Christmas with a solar haze.

That—mother, sister, wife or child—
The "best of women" each has known.
Were school boys ever half so wild?
Have young the grandpapas have grown!

That but for his our smile were free,
And but for that our lives where blest;
That some season yet to be
Ours cares will leave us time to rest.

Whene'er we groan with ache or pain,
Some common ailment of the race—
Though doctors think the matter plain—
That ours is a peculiar case.

That when like the babes with fingers burned
We count one bitter maxim more,
Our lesson all the world has learned,
And men are wiser than before.

That when we sob o'er fancied woe,
The angels hovering overhead
Count every pitying drop that flows,
And love us for the tears we shed.

That when we stand with tearless eye
And turn the beggar from our door,
They still approve us when we sigh,
'Ah had I but one thousand more!'

That weakness smooth'd the path of sin.
Is half the slips our youth has known;
And whatsoe'r its blame has been,
That nasty flowers on faults outgrown.

Though temples crowd the crumbled brink
O'er hanging truth's eternal flow,
Their tablets hold wit what we think,
Their echoes dumb to what we know.

That one unquestioned text we read,
All doubt beyond all fear above,
Nor cracking pile, nor cursing creed
Can burn or blot it: God is Love!

FRED HARFORD'S FIRST GREAT-COAT.

A CHRISTMAS STORY. BY NELSIE BROOK.

It was Christmas Day, and there was a 'row' in the house; not that mirthful hubbub, that merry and noisy music of childish enjoyment, which mothers are prone to call 'a row;' but a downright clatter of overturned articles of furniture, and the harsh, impious utterance of a man, mingled with the pitiful protestings of a woman, and the indignant voice of a boy interfering between the two. It was begun and ended within five minutes, the finale of it being the slamming of a door which shut out the hideous disturber of the house's peace.—Then the mother, with her face flushed by a blow, went round the room replacing the furniture, and the boy sank down by the fireside, buried his face in his hands, and said in a tone of bitter irony, 'Well, this is a Christmas Day, and no mistake!'

'How can I help it, Fred? I'm sure I'm sorry enough,' said Mrs. Harford. 'I've done my best to make it like Christmas.'

'I know that, mother; you can't help anything. But don't it seem just no use, to try? Look at that money that I brought home to you last night—all gone! It's a regular shame! I'll just give over trying to help. It's no use, if father gets everything away, and throws it in the gutter.—It's just as bad as throwing it in the gutter to waste it in the public-house; and I won't work and work to get money for that. I'll go off somewhere.'

'I wish you would, Fred,' said his mother, at which Fred looked up in great astonishment. 'Yes, Fred, I wish you would,' she repeated. 'Our home is like a sinking ship now, and I want you all to get away from it as fast as you can. I should like to see you in some respectable, comfortable place, doing yourself some good, getting food enough and tidy clothes, which you haven't got now, that's certain.'

'But you, mother? what would you do? You know sometimes you couldn't manage any way without the bit o' money that I bring home. But I could send you some unknown to father, to help you to keep house,' he said, with hope beaming in his face. 'P'raps it would be for the best if I went away, mother: I really think it would. I should have more heart, like, in trying to get on.'

'That's what I think, Fred,' said Mrs. Harford. 'And now you're getting a good age—fifteen—you ought to have a prospect of being something more than a grocer's errand boy; and I think you ought to be indoors somewhere. Now Mr. Fenton says he couldn't afford to take you into the house, and there's no other place in this little town where you could better yourself. Mr. Fenton 'ud give you a good character. I know, that would get you a place anywhere.'

'Yes, I hope so,' said the boy eagerly.—'And I should like to go to Birmingham, mother.'

'Well, that's the nearest large place,' said Mrs. Harford. 'Yet I'm almost afraid to think of it; those large places are so dangerous for young people. There are so many temptations.'

'Not worse than here, I should think,' said the boy. 'It seems to me they are thick enough everywhere. But I think I should be too much taken up with trying to get on to mind 'em, mother.'

'I hope so, Fred; and then you must ask God to guard you from evil, and strengthen you to walk in the right way.'

Just then the conversation was interrupted by entry of three or four younger members of the family. Christmas was the burden of their clatter: the idea of Christmas filled them with animation and expectation of something, they knew not what, and which, whatever it was, they did not get, poor things! The mother's heavy heart would not let her be cheerful; the children noticed her dejected air and flushed face, and guessed pretty well what the matter was. Their gaiety was fast giving way to gloom, when Fred, whose heart had been suddenly filled with hope before they came in, said, 'What chatter you are having about Christmas, you shivering little things! Just come and warm yourselves, and I'll tell you a tale the while. Christmas ought to be a happy time, but it isn't that here to-day. Let us make the best of it, though. We'll have some happy Christmases before we die; won't we, mother?'

'I don't know, Fred; but I hope we may,' she answered, not very hopefully.

'Ay, that we will!' said Fred, drawing youngest child between his knees, and chafing her tiny red hands before the fire.—'We'll have grand times yet. Some I and mine Christmas you shall have roast beef, and a plum-pudding all black with currants and goodies, and Christmas-boxes like grand folks, and more than all the fairies in the whole world could get besides.'

Mrs. Harford scarcely knew how to keep up heart any longer, things were getting so bad. Her husband was worse than ever, and Ned was taken up with companions who actually frequented his father's old haunts. The knowledge of it almost broke Mrs. Harford's heart. The boy was careful not to let his evil doings, and his mother feared to say anything, lest he should be turned away; though in one respect that would have been not much loss to her, as the boy brought her but a very small part of his wages; he drank and squandered it away somehow.—Had it not been for the small sum which Fred remitted to her secretly every week, she would have fared ill enough, poor body.

Often and often, during that year of waiting, the hope of seeing him buoyed her up in her seasons of despondency. Somehow, she felt that whenever he came he would bring with him a special blessing for them all—a gleam of sunshine which would glow and brighten, and never fade away. As soon as spring came, she began longing for winter, and all through the gay summer time and the glorious autumn she sighing for winter. At last it came, with its fogs and rain, snow and cheerlessness, but she heeded them not; she let them pass over her without a murmur, knowing that her son would come by-and-by in the midst of them.

And he came—very early in the morning, while the stars were yet shining, and scarcely any other step but his clanged along the frosty streets of the sleeping little town. As soon as the duties of the busy, busy Christmas Eve were done, he was free to go home; and so he set off in the cold silent night, careless of rest and self, and eager only to get to his mother.

Having reached his home, he proceeded to wake her in a novel manner. He commenced one of their old family carols, which he had many a time sung with the little ones at home. Not a jot cared he whether he awoke the whole neighbourhood or not with his resonant treble voice, so that he awoke his mother, and so that she recognised his voice. That was all he cared for.

But Mrs. Harford was already awake.—Thoughts of her boy had made her sleepless, and she had heard the swift footsteps clanging down the streets, and then stop suddenly at her door when the singing began; and altogether it made her heart leap, for she fancied she knew the step, and how well she knew the carol! But the voice? It might be her boy's, but if so, how changed—how deep and manly! A knock followed the carol, during the singing of which she had hastily dressed herself, tumbling over herself almost in her haste, and making a noise which awoke the children in the next room, thought it did not wake her husband. He was sleeping off a drunken fit, and it would have taken something a little less noisy than tenanting a cannon to arouse him.

Mrs. Harford was down stairs 'in a jiffy,' as she afterwards said; and taking a candle to the door, she at once recognised her son. Silent with the joy of a long hope realised, she drew him in, set the candle on the table, and took him in her arms, or rather he took her in his arms; for she was a little woman, and he was such a big fellow now that her arms could not entirely enclose him. After a long embrace she stood away to look him up and down, and after a fond survey, she said, 'How you are grown, Fred! and how well you look! and how well-to-do in that greatcoat; it makes you look quite the gentleman!'

'It's a real treasure, mother,' said Fred; 'and doesn't it keep the cold out!'

'I should think so,' said the mother, laying her hand upon it appreciately. 'It's a beautiful thick cloth, Fred. How did you manage to get it out of your small earnings, after what you've sent me? I'm sure I've been afraid that you did not leave yourself a penny scarcely.'

'You needn't have been afraid, mother. Why, I've got a watch, too! look here. I gave fifty shillings for it!'

'La, Fred! how ever did you manage it?'

'I'll tell you by-and-by, mother. Now please help me off with my greatcoat; for my hands have got the frost in them to-night. I had half a mind to bring the coat for father. But then, thinks I, it would soon be lodged at uncle's—easy come, go easy, you know—so I decided rather to tell father how to get one as I got this; he'll prize it all the more for getting it so.'

Having assisted Fred, Mrs. Harford began bustling about to get a fire with as much alacrity as a young girl. Fred wanted to take that business out of her hands, but his were so helpless with cold that she would not allow him. The sticks and bits of coal soon made a cheery glow in the room; and while Fred went up stairs to see his brothers and sisters, Mrs. Harford laid out the breakfast table in the best style her means would allow, and then called out to the young folks above that they might get dressed, and come and have an early break fast with Fred.

In a very few minutes they made their appearance, and being now in the light, they stared at Fred and examined him with as much interest as if he had been an importation from one of the Cannibal islands. They examined his greatcoat and watch with a special interest; and Ned tried on the greatcoat, and wondered how Fred managed to get it, and thought him a most lucky fellow. Ned sighed as he took it off again, and thought of his own shabby apparel; but he did not ask him how many greatcoats he had swallowed since Fred went away.

How merrily the breakfas-time passed, and what a happy day they hoped to spend! the sunshine was come into the house at last; it lighted up the faces of the sad mother and her children, and made all bright. Would it fade away? Mrs. Harford fervently hoped not, and fervently prayed, too. 'Let this be the dawn of a perfect day of blessedness!' she pleaded.

The stars paled without, and the silver gray light of the happy Christmas Day broke over earth. Towards nine o'clock the merry hubbub in the house awoke Mr. Harford; and learning that Fred was come, he set himself to the dreaded task of getting up.

Fred had some tempting-looking packages to open, but would not do so until his father came.

'We have had breakfast without him as we were obliged to, he said, "but he must take part in all the other doings of the day." So directly Mr Harford made appearance, and the greetings were over, Fred tried to arouse and thoroughly interest him by giving him one of the small parcels to undo. But it was more than he could do; his hands were so unsteady that he could not control them sufficiently even for that.

However, he backed on with great interest and actually smiled down upon the glad children as they held their present up to him to be admired; and once or twice Mrs. Harford caught him gazing at Fred with a half-proud, half-sorrowful expression as the young man bent over the children, making them laugh delightedly with his gifts. Among the good things brought for the day's cheer where a piece of beef and ingredients for a first-class Christmas pudding. 'Didn't I tell you one day,' said Fred, 'that we'd have roast beef, plum-pudding and presents like other folks? Here we are, then! the first time's come at last you see, mother.'

You, the mother saw, and the sight filled her eyes with tears. She was thinking, 'Ah, if it had but come from the hand of the house in need of from one of the children!' although she was truly grateful to have it any way.

Presently the church-bells began to chime, and Fred proposed that they should go to their house of worship. 'I shall be glad to see the familiar old place again,' he said. All the children wanted to go with Fred, and he wanted his father to go, too. He refused quite decidedly at first; it was out of the question, he said, and he never went to church now. 'All the more reason why you should go to-day, father,' urged Fred.

'But I've got nothing fit to put on, said the father.

'Yes you have, said the wife; 'your best coat is upstairs.'

'How came it there? he inquired in astonishment.

'Never mind about that now,' said Mrs. Harford; 'but just go and make yourself spruce, and go out with Fred the once. We may never meet together on a Christmas-day again—you know.

'Look at Fred's coat, what a beauty! cried Susie, as Fred took it from a peg behind the door.

'Why, Fred, you look as though you were getting on in the world, said his father. How did you manage to get that and your watch too?

'You must know I haven't spent a farthing of my wages on them, said Fred.

'Then how in the world did you get them?

'The price of half-a-pint of beer a day for nearly three years got these for me,' said Fred.

'All the fellows at our place are allowed half-a-pint a day. I told master that I'd rather not have any, and if he liked to make me any allowance for my not having it, he might; or I'd just have it, and say nothing about an allowance. He said he liked to encourage young fellows to be abstainers, and allowed me three half-pence a day. That has been faithfully given me for about two years and nine months, and has been something like six pounds five shillings in my pocket. With that, you see, I have been well able to buy my watch and coat, and to send home some little Christmas gifts last year, as well as to bring these.'

'Who'd ever ha' thought that that three half-pence a day saved would have run up to that in less than three years!' said Mr. Harford, thinking doubtfully of the many pence, and not only pence, but sixpences, he had spent day after day during that time, and for years before—sixpence that made many pounds which would have bought him coats, watch, and perhaps a house, too—so many had he squandered. Ned was trying to do a sum of the same kind in mental arithmetic, though with lower figures than those which came to his father's mind; and both began a series of self-reproachings, and both felt that they had been foolish in the highest degree.'

Mr. Harford stood for a moment lost in thought. 'I often look back with thankfulness to that day when I decided not to take even the half-pint a day,' said Fred; 'and I believe that had I not so decided I should have had no great-coat to my back, and little or no will to get one. I might have gone on and on, as many do who begin with taking just a little, and at this day I might as dragging along in some wretched way, with no tidy clothes, to say nothing about a nice little sum in the savings bank.'

'You did well—you did well, Fred,' said his father with a sigh.

'Now, will you get ready quickly, father?' said Fred; 'I'm afraid we shall be late.'

'I think I won't go—I'd rather not,' said Mr. Harford, undecidedly.

'Oh, yes, father, you must come with me just this once,' said Fred earnestly. 'You know I can't stay till Sunday, and perhaps we may never go to a place of worship again. Do come!'

Without replying, Mr Harford went slowly upstairs to get ready. In a few minutes he appeared, looking not ungreentable, but certainly taller than he had looked for many and many a long day. The coat on his back hung lower than it did when he bought it—long ago, and the cut was anything but the latest fashion. His goat was had saved some of the money received from Fred to get it from the pawnbroker's, so that he might look a little taller than usual before his son on Christmas Day. After considerable demurring they found themselves at last on their way to the house of God. It was a treat to Fred to see his worthy minister once more, and to sit in the familiar old place. It was a treat, too, to hear his simple, earnest sermon, so full of God's everlasting truth and hope and comfort. It seemed to lift up Fred's heart, and strengthen him; and it was also acting powerfully upon somebody else. Fred's father was being stirred by it; and old feelings that he had thought dead and gone for ever, came rushing back into his mind, and filling his heart with vague longings and hopes—for what, he could scarcely tell.

He leaned back in his pew, feeling quite ill. He had taken no food that day as an early stimulant, which he sometimes thought to have every morning directly he got up as surley as the morning came. The craving for it was so strong within him that once or twice during the first part of the service he could scarcely refrain from rushing out of the pew and into the nearest public house or his usual dram. But when the sermon began, it fell upon his restless spirit like oil on the troubled waters, and calmed him. He seemed to take it gratefully, as he leaned back and listened with an almost listless air. Fred seemed to understand how he felt; and directly they got out of the door he put his arm within his father's, and told the children to walk on in front. Before they had gone many steps Mr. Harford said, 'I felt so sinking, Fred, I must run in somewhere, and get a drop o'brandy, or something.'

'Oh'no, father; we shall be home directly. You want a good dinner to take away drinking feelings—jus that and nothing else. Don't even look at the public-houses, but let us be quick home, father.'

He made no answer, but walked on. Presently he said, 'So mean to say you've never bin into a public-house since you went away, Fred?'

'Not once, father; and what's more, I never mean to go.'

'If you do, you won't look like what you do now for long. Just look at the difference between you and me, Fred, and yet we how I've been on working for years and years, and yet ha' got nothing but this shivering bit of a coat as is a mile to big for me; and shouldn't ha' had even this to-day if mother hadn't got it somehow; and how she got it I don't know—she gets precious little from me. Why, when ye comes to think of it, we've got nothing; that's the fact. Ned ha' got nothing; you'll see he couldn't come out to-day for want of a tidy coat.'

'And yet he doesn't bring mother his earnings,' said Fred. 'What does he do with his money, I want to know?'

'Plays the fool with it, as I do, I suppose,' said Mr. Harford, with bitter self reproach. 'Oh, dear me!'

'What's that great sigh for, father? asked Fred, pleasantly.

'I don't know. I feel regular upset.—That sort o' yours have upset me, and the sermon have upset me, and I feels ill in myself.'

'Ah, you shall have a nice rest this afternoon after dinner,' said Fred. 'Now here we are at home.'

Mrs. Harford seemed much surprised to see her husband come in with the children, and to know, too, that he had actually had nothing to drink while out. It was better news than she had dared to expect; and it seemed to put so much life into her that she bustled about with smiles and merry words to get the unusually good dinner on the table, just as in the happy days of long, long ago.

Mr. Harford managed to eat a pretty good meal, and felt the better for it. When it was over, and oranges and other good things brought by Fred were being discussed, his listless air quite passed away, and he playfully helped the children to make wonderful things with orange-peel. By-and-by, he leaned back in his chair and said, 'I can't believe it's me sitting here at home like this—something like the poor fellow we our parson was reading of this morning, as was sitting 'clothed, and in his right mind.''

'Ah, it does me good to see you,' said his wife, quite shedding upon.

He looked down at her coat to avoid her glance, and said, 'This may look tidy, Fred'k, but it don't keep the cold out: I was regular nipped coming home from shop.'

'You ought to have a greatcoat like Fred'k,' she replied. 'You might easy get one, as he did, afore next winter.'

'Wust ! save three half-pence a day ! I s'pose I could, and I'll begin,' he said.

'But I did something more than that, father,' said Fred. 'If I hadn't, I might have gone on saving for a month or two, and then let it all go.'

'What did you do ?'

'Why, I just kept right away from the public-houses. They're the places to keep one from having a coat to one's back ; they starve you, if you frequent them ; but they'll never clothe you. You'll begin to save three half-pence a day for a greatcoat, father, as you say ; but will you do the same thing ? If you only would, I'll tell you what you'd get besides. Why, good wife, good lad, a watch in your pocket, clothes for the youngsters, good food and plenty of it, a comfortable, happy home all round, health of body, and a clear and peaceful mind.'

'Surely, surely !' chimed in Mrs. Harford, in a half-sad, half-hopeful tone.

'And only one thing robs you of all that blessed. You know what it is, and how to conquer it, too ; our minister told it all so beautifully this morning. God gives the victory over all evil, through our Lord Jesus Christ.' Only we must not be still, and leave the fighting to our Captain ; we must strive and struggle hard to overcome, relying on His help. You remember that text, father ?'

'Yes, I minded it well. It seemed all I thought then, if I could only [illegible] ught overcome. Others [illegible]sands of others—have [illegible] cursed habit of drink-[illegible]

'[illegible]d Mrs. Harford.—'Why, [illegible] already, James.—Think I you haven't had a drop to-day ! All you've got to do is just to go on as you've begun, that's all.'

'That'll be enough, I guess, as the days go on. Still, folks says as the first step is the hardest, and I've taken the first, you see !'

'Yes, yes.'

'Ah, and I feel it too. Fred, my boy, if we all live till next Christmas, we'll have a dinner of our own buying, please God, and not of yours ; and if you come to see us, I'll have as respectable a greatcoat on as you !'

'And I too,' said Ned, standing up very straight, to give emphasis to his words.—'No more o' my tin shall go into the publics, not if I know it. I knows a trick o' getting the value of it now, as I didn't think of afore I saw Fred's greatcoat.'

So, to make a long story short, it came to pass that Fred's greatcoat was an instrument chosen to work quite a revolution in Harford's home. Did you ever know a give in onewho commenced climbing upward and onward, with a strong determination, and relying upon God for strength and assistance ? Never.

No, he did not give in ; and the happy Christmas Day which they spent on the occasion of Fred's memorable visit was the first of a long series of happy ones. The sunshine that he brought did not fade away ; it brightned and brightned into a perpetual glow of comfort and peace.

Fred did come home again on the following Christmas, and walked to chapel with his parents and brothers and sisters ; but he was not the only one that went out of the house with a greatcoat on his back that day ; there were two others who had got them in the same way as he got his. He were the same one that he had appeared in on his first visit. "It still looks almost as good as new," he said, "and I shall keep tidy as I can. It has been the means of doing so much good, that I have a sort of a strong affection for my first greatcoat which I could never have for any other."

A Surprise Party at Peterboro.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

On Tuesday, the 7th inst., about three o'clock, the kind friends from Peterboro, Smith, Providence, Armstrong's and Bethel, crossed at the Bible Christian Mission House, and by six o'clock upwards of one hundred persons, male and female, had comfortable possession of the Mission House and vestry. After depositing the contents of their sleighs of useful articles for family use, &c. They had in a very short time two long tables prepared in the vestry and well spread with the good things they had provided. About half-past seven, an invitation to Bro. Butcher, pastor, his wife and family was given, and they had the happiness to associate with and take for the first time at a surprise party. All enjoyed themselves and seemed to be of one heart and soul.

Tea being ended, Bro. Chowen was voted to the chair, and spoke of the pleasure of meeting so many interested friends ; putting the question, "What could be done to promote a revival of religion, &c. ?"

The brethren, Ingram, Stephens (Wes. L. Preacher), Johnston and Elliott were called on to address the meeting, which they did in a brief and interesting manner. The choir did valuable service, in discoursing sweet music between each address.

A purse containing $20, in behalf of the present company, was given to Bro. Ingram by a young lady, to be presented by him to Mrs. Butcher, which he did in a becoming manner. Bro. Butcher then addressed the assembly briefly and with feeling. He concluded with thanks to the friends, from himself, wife and family, saying he did not depreciate what was presented amounting to about sixty dollars, but more highly esteemed the spirit which prompted the act of beneficence. He then read the one hundred and thirty-third Psalm,—"Behold how good, &c." After the usual votes of thanks to the choir and choir, the pastor engaged in fervent prayer, the benediction being pronounced, the happy company separated for their respective homes. That we may all meet in the heavenly home above, is the prayer of the writer.

ONE INTERESTED.

Examination of the Ashburnham School.

MR. EDITOR,—

The examination of the Ashburnham School, which took place on the 22nd., was highly creditable to both Teachers and Pupils. The Principal, Mr. John Wood, is like every successful man, earnest, methodical, persevering, and thoroughly at home in his work. At the close of the examination, the pupils presented him with a beautiful album, accompanied with a fitting address, which was read by Master Ormond, to which Mr. Wood made a suitable reply.

The junior Teacher, Miss Stratton, who has had a good training herself, evidently understands training her pupils. She is deserving of a higher position. Parents should attend these examinations more frequently than they do, as their doing so, encourages both teachers and pupils, and the trouble, (if such it be,) in so doing is always well compensated for, by the pleasure experienced at seeing the manifestation of the budding blossoms on these youthful trees.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1869.

GREETING.

The merry Christmas bells are almost ringing in our ears as we pen this greeting to our numerous patrons and friends who have kindly borne with our many shortcomings, and our endeavours to supply the current news of the past year. We are glad to be able to report progress, and that by the next issue we will be able to present ourselves in a new dress.

Already we have received a large quantity of new type and other fixings for our office, and to-day we expect the completion of our order for type. We have also ordered a new job press, that will enable us to perform more work than heretofore in the same time, so that notwithstanding severe losses during the past two years, through the steady support of our many warm friends, we are enabled to report favorably of the good people of this county and many, of the surrounding counties, who have believed in our Reform principles, and are willing to support them. We have set ourselves to work and are determined that the Examiner will be the best paper published in this section of country. It will continue to be the faithful exponent of the views of the people—the principles of Reform ; and the advocate of good and liberal government ; and will be found the steady and unflinching opponent of all combinations of adverse politicians unholy and corrupt and also of combinations, patent, which tend to corrupt the representatives of the people, and through them, the people.

Our columns will be open for the discussion of all questions of public importance or general interest, and also ready to defend the persecuted of every shade of politics nationality or religion.

Fully persuaded that these principles are just and reasonable, and feeling assured that they meet the views of the intelligent portion of the community, we have thus sketched out our future, which we intend faithfully to carry out trusting to the faithful support and co-operation of the great Reform party of this County to encourage and strengthen us in the work.

We again cordially thank our friends for all past favours, and solicit a continuance thereof ; and we sincerely hope that they may live long to enjoy the good cheer so abundant in this County, and Country. If the people are happy and prosperous, we shall participate with them. Once a year only does this joyful season return, and hence we should make the best of it. We wish all our readers and patrons the compliments of the season.—A merry Christmas to all.

OUR MEMBERS.

What have our members being doing during the session of Parliament ? simply nothing. The member for the west Riding has had "railway on the brain," and as wooden railways are his hobby, we may expect some wooden nutmeg affair out of it.

As we predicted on the Gas By-law, so it happened. Mr. Carnegie introduced a Bill at the beck of certain parties, one clause of which was to legalise the Gas By-law, to which we referred some time ago. But Mr. Carnegie had not the common politeness to send even the Mayor a copy of it—no, nor the Town Clerk, nor any one else except those who like himself are stock-holders. Now we are not opposed to gas, nor to a gas company, not a bit of it; but we are decidedly opposed to dodging and lobbying and illegal By-laws, and then asking Parliament to legalise these illegal acts. The member who represents our town should have furnished the items to those who would have let the people know what was going on. The Parliament is not a county agricultural association, the business of which merely affects a few, nor is it a place to which sullen, pettish, ill-tempered men should be sent, whose spleen and venom are co-existent with their possessor. And we ask the electors to remember that this spoiled child actually went to Parliament and asked them to make Acts, a word of which has never been submitted to either Council or people of this town. Mr. Read has wisely confined his doings to the East Riding, and the numerous acts, amendments, and advantages he has secured for that Riding are standing monuments of his ability as a legislature. This one thing we can say of him, that his temper never gets the better of his judgement, we wish we could say that much of the Western Local man.

The Dailies report one of his speeches which we give in extenso. Here it is :—"There seems to be great noise and little wool." A clever speech, we though it ought to have been little "wood."

MAYOR'S EXPECTANT.

On Monday, Mr. Thos. Chambers and Mr. W. H. Scott were nominated candidates for the Mayoralty.

Mr. Chambers was proposed by W. Rastland, Esq., and seconded by P. Ryan, Esq.

After nomination Mr. Chambers said, he had consented to his name being brought before the people for this important office at the request of a large number his fellow citizens, and he did so after fully weighing the importance of the office and the onerous duties thereof.

He say that there was a desire for a change among a large class of the citizens, and in consequence he was now a Candidate for their suffrage ; he hoped however that the contest would be conducted without personal feeling, and that whoever should be successful, both he and Mr. Scott would still be friends, as they had ever been. He knew there were many wealthier men and men of more business ability in Town, but though there was a greater interest in the Mayor and Council preparing, as it prepares one to watch it, or if it retrograded into apathy would affect property also in value also. He thought therefore the office of Councillors, the people should select the best men, for they made the laws, and regulated all affairs ; the Mayor only executed their work. In Peterboro', the council was of importance in Canada, the best men should be chosen ; but the Mayor could only use that the By-laws of the Council were duly carried into effect, and in this no one could go far astray, as the Council had a paid legal adviser, and the Clerk was very obliging and willing to communicate. With these remarks he would leave the matter with the Electors, by saying that if elected, he would do all he could to please all parties.

Geo. A. Cox, Esq., proposed Mr. Scott, and Councillor Doherty seconded the nomination.

Mr. Scott then came forward, and after thanking those who had brought him forward for this high honor, and who had always stuck by him when their aid was required. He referred to the cry that had been raised against him on account of his absence for nearly three months, but he remarked that this was caused by circumstances over which he had no control ; and that if such circumstances should arise again, he would most assuredly act in the same way.

Several charges had been made against him, by gentleman who had been always opposed to him. These had never been satisfied, and he supposed never would, and he did not do much to soften their feelings, or court their favor. These had often attempted to prevent his free action, because he was not a possessor of extensive property. He was ready to admit his poverty, and if these men did not like it, they could make him rich by gifts, which he would willingly accept if presented.

He then referred to the Police Court business of which they had said much, and declared that while fines during his incumbency were not over one-half in each case, that a greater amount had been brought into the treasury. He had never oppressed any unfortunate whose acts had brought him in to the Court, but had taken the fines as he could get them. And in this way had collected more than had been done during the four years previous to his election to the office. He courted an investigation of the Police Court books, in order to satisfy any doubts or fault-finders. He did not believe that the object of the Court was to bring in revenue, but to secure law, order and protection. And he did not believe that large fines would have as good an effect as moderation and discretion.—He again thanked his friends for their past support, and assured them if elected, he would discharge the duties to the best of his ability, and trusted that Mr. Chambers and he would still be friends, whoever would win.

THE UNION SCHOOL.

The examination in the different departments commenced on Tuesday. In the Ward School, there was a small attendance, and very few parents.

The pupils, through master Douglas Landy, presented Mr. Dixon, the Principal, a neat volume of Tennyson's Poems.

On the same day, the pupils of the entire School, presented Mr. Dixon a handsome Urn and Salad Plate, worth $25.

The presentation took place in Miss Borrowman's room. When all the pupils were crowded in, the sight was one of the grandest imaginable.

Masters John H. Burnham, son of Dr. Burnham, and Geo. Shaw, presented the address. It was read clearly and intelligently.

Misses Ada Martyn and Emma Boswell presented the Urn, &c.

The following is the address :—

To J. B. Dixon, Esq., M. A., Principal of the Peterborough Union and Grammar School.

RESPECTED SIR,—

Before separating for the Christmas holidays, we desire to express our gratitude to you for the kindness and sympathy you have ever manifested towards us. We are now about to seek amusement in our several homes, and we know not but that the hand of death may fall on some of us ere we re-assemble ; but we hope that you may be long spared to exercise your gentle sway over the pupils of the Peterboro Grammar and Union School, who now ask you to accept this memento as a slight token of their sincere regard.

To this Mr. Dixon read the following reply :—

MY DEAR PUPILS,—

I gratefully accept this your offering, being assured that its presentation is prompted by the kindest feelings and the best wishes on your part. It is a satisfaction to me to be able to state here, publicly, that your conduct has on the whole, been remarkably good, so that during the part year, I have not, in any case, been compelled to resort to severe measures, to secure order and discipline. There were times when but little mutual regard existed between Teacher and Scholar—when the one was a tyrant, and the other a slave, but those days have happily passed away. Now teachers often have a sort of parental affection for their pupils, and pupils, in turn, respect and cheerfully obey their Teacher. I feel particularly gratified when I bear in mind the manner in which this valuable "token of your regard" has been obtained. It is not the gift of any single Department, but of all the Divisions, and though, I understand, the scheme originated with the boys of the Second Division, all the other Divisions have contributed equally to produce the final result. Matters have been so wisely managed that small and large, poor and rich, male and female, have contributed equally. Rest assured that I shall continue to labor faithfully for your advancement, and that the Teachers who are associated with me are deeply concerned for your welfare. We all feel a lively interest in the success of this institution—an institution that is the pride of the town, and from whose Halls many of you shall go forth, I hope, to be an honor to yourselves, to your parents, to your country and to your race. To me, as you no doubt all know, neither the wealth nor the poverty of your parents has ever been a matter of any consideration. I believe in simple straight-forward justice, and try to act in accordance with my belief. I ask no question as to your parentage, nationality or religion ; it is sufficient for me to know that you are members of the great human family—equally possessed of human sympathies, and endowed with intellectual and moral powers of the same God-given stamp. To your faithful and diligent exertions we (the Teachers) look to sustain and improve the character of the School ; we rejoice to see you advance from Division to Division, and indulge the hope that you will ever be kind and forbearing one to another, rivalling each other in all that is noble, generous and manly. [illegible] Teachers [illegible] Trustees [illegible] Inspector [illegible] Treasurer [illegible] Secretary [illegible] Peterborough Examiner and Union School.

REMEMBER TEACHER,—

We, the pupils of your Division cannot let the present examination pass without expressing to you how deeply we feel and how warm we appreciate your untiring and faithful efforts for our improvement, you have ever been unwearied in the discharge of your duties as a Teacher, and we trust we appreciate your kindness, joined with firmness, we are convinced that you are labouring for our mental improvement. We, therefore, take pleasure in presenting to you this Workbox, not so much on account of the value of the article, as it allows us to express to you our feeling of regard and respect. Allow us in presenting it to wish you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, and to ourselves your affectionate pupils.

To which Miss Borrowman replied in very suitable terms, but being taken by surprise it was not written out.

Miss Borrowman has, we believe, taught eight years in the Union School, and it must be gratifying to her to find that as years come round, she occupies a warmer place in the affections of her pupils, and almost receives yearly indications of this, as the gifts presented, show.

It is certainly a very interesting Division, both on account of the teacher, the number of the pupils in the Division, and the age of those pupils, being just at the age when parents are most likely to take pleasure in their appearance and progress.

Wesleyan Sabbath School Anniversary.

The anniversary services of the Sabbath School in connection with the Wesleyans in this Town were held on Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Kines of Keene, preached both morning and evening, to large and attentive audiences. On Monday evening there was a Tea in the School room, of which about 250 to 300 partook. The room was very tastefully decorated with evergreens all round, and hung in wreaths. The choir of youthful singers was on a graded platform. The singing of the children was the great attraction of the evening. There were also short addresses of about five minutes each by D. W. Dumble, Esq. R. Richardson, Esq. of the Bank of Montreal, and the writer ; and longer ones by the Revds. Messrs. Sanderson, Kines and Davis. Jas. Stevenson ably presided and discharged the duties of keeping order, and confining the Speakers to time, in an admirable manner. The evening was very pleasantly spent, and we hope some instruction received.

The Report read by Mr. Mason, Secretary, was really well written ; pointing to the salient points of Sabbath School work, and of Sabbath School Teachers' duty ; as well as referring to the hindrances, and results, in a manner that elicited the warmest applause. We regret that want of space forbids our giving the report in extenso, but we cannot refrain from giving a few items of it.

After referring briefly to the pleasure of meeting so many of the parents and friends of the children, and to the devotedness of the Teachers and Officers to the work ; he remarked that the School had been enrolled among the number of those Schools that had joined what is called the "Wesleyan Sabbath School Union," under a constitution and regulations adopted by the Conference. He remarked further, that the Pic-nic to Lakefield had been as successful if not more so, than was anticipated ; about six hundred children and others availed themselves of the trip ; and after paying expenses the sum of $7.72 was saved to the Treasury.

The Abstract Statement shows, that during the year $107.49 had been received for the purpose of the School, and $115,48 expended in the work, libraries &c. The total number of scholars on the roll for the year was—334 ; boys 154 ; girls 180.

The average of boys side 99 ; the average of girls side 100.

Verses of Scripture recited by the boys 5,986 ; verses of Scripture recited by the girls 22,870. The girls reciting almost four times the number of verses recited by the boys.

The number of Teachers employed 26 ; the number of Officers employed 5.

A decrease of 8 or 9 during the year was reported, arising from some moving away, and some young men considering themselves too much the man to attend Sabbath School any longer.

The report gives four causes of decline in a Sabbath School, namely : the one already mentioned, the want of Teachers who will show their children how to work, and who have counted the cost and the sacrifice they will have to make every Sabbath.—The chief evil complained of in the report, is the withdrawal of the older scholars, because of their having arrived at a certain age, and therefore considering it infra dig. to attend Sabbath School with their juniors.

The report touchingly says : "we want these ; we cannot afford to lose them ; there is a work for them to do." How to retain them is then set forth in an extract from an address by the Rev. Alfred Taylor of Bristol Pennsylvania, in which he recommends a separate apartment for themselves, the choice of a Teacher, who understands young men, one who will not drive them away by tedious preaching, or doleful exhortations, by his austerity or grimaces ; but one who remembers he was once young himself, and who can therefore sympathise with them, and bear with, and direct them.

The items of the report should attract the attention of the young men, and stir them up to show that they do not require flattery or overstrained inducements to do right. From [illegible] they are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past two years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction where the directions have been properly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unsurpassed in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Phethisic or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, br ises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious cholic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

Price only twenty-five cents per bottle.

A MYSTERY

AT

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that castle path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shirted,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for me me messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'

'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me thus to purchase

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Matchless Boots and Shoes.

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yeamed after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Stores, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Camerons, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hovey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and in now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of Inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trials and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the tortering pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Keowsville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

The Cheese-Fly

Most dairymen understand pretty well battles at the cheese-fly. Many, however, do not know how to provide against its depredations. Some people profess to be fond of skippery cheese, and regard it as made of what the English understand as 'cheese full of meat,' that is, not in butter. And it must be confessed that the cheese-fly has great partiality for the best goods in the curing house. They do not so readily attack your "White Oak," and when milk runs low, hence the notion that cheese affected with the fly is rich in butter is not so far out of the way.

The primary cause of skippery cheese, of course is want of care. Cheese in hot weather should be closely examined every day. They require to be turned once a day in order to facilitate the curing process. The bandages and sides are to be rubbed at the time of turning in order to brush off or destroy any ova of the fly which may happen to be deposited about the cheese. If there are cracks in the rind or if the edges of the bandage do not fit snugly, they should at once be attended to, since it is at these points that the fly is most likely to make a safe deposit of its eggs. The cracks and checks in the cheese should be filled with particles of cheese that have been crushed under a knife to make them mellow and plastic. When cans filled a strip of this tough paper oiled and laid over the repaired surface will serve as a father protection of the parts. The cheese in the checks soon hardens and forms a new rind. Deep and bad-looking checks may be repaired in this way so as to form a smooth surface scarcely to be distinguished from sound parts of the cheese. It is a great mistake to send cheese that have deep checks or broken rinds to market. For, in addition to their liability to be attacked by the fly, they have the appearance of being imperfect and are justly regarded with suspicion. A few such cheeses in a lot will injure the whole, causing a larger depreciation in price on the whole lot than if the imperfect cheeses had been separated from the rest and sold by themselves for what they would bring.

Some dairymen think that a darkened curing room is best for cheese, and at the same is the best protection against the fly We think this is a great mistake. Cheese cures with the best flavor when it is exposed to light, and besides it can be examined more minutely from time to time, and freed from any depredations of skippers. August and September are generally the worst months in the whole year to protect the cheese against the attacks of the fly. Some years the trouble is greater than others, and various means have been resorted to for the purpose of avoiding the pest, such as rubbing the cheese over with a mixture of oil and cayenne pepper. These things generally do not amount to much, and are not to be recommended; the best protection is cleanliness, sharp eyes and good care of the cheese. Wherever a lodgment has been made, they must at once be removed. Sometimes it will be necessary to cut down into the cheese and remove the nest with the knife. But if the colony is young and small in numbers, a thick oiled paper plastered over the affected part so as to exclude the air will bring the pests to the surface when they may be removed. The oiled paper should again be returned to its place and the skippers removed from time to until all are destroyed.

If skippers begin to trouble the cheese, the best course to be adopted is to commence at once, and wash the ranges and tables on which the cheese are placed, with hot whey. This will remove all accumulation of grease and nits about the ranges, giving a clean surface which does not attract the flies. If the cheeses also are washed in the hot whey and rubbed with a dry cloth, the labour of expelling the trouble from the curing room will to greatly facilitated. We have seen this course adopted with entire success in many instances when much time and labour had previously been employed without effecting the desired object.

Keep the curing room clean and sweet see that the cheese have a smooth rind, that the bandages are smoothly laid at the edges; turn and rub the cheese daily, and there need be no trouble from the cheese fly.

STATISTICS OF THE GLOBE.

There are on the globe 1 288,000,000, souls of which 360,000,000 are of the Caucasian race, 552 000,000 are of the Mongul race, 190 000,000are of the Ethiopian race. 186,000,000 are of the Malay race, and 1,000,000 are of the Indo-American race. There are 3,642 languages spoken and 1,000 different religions The yearly mortality of the globe is 33,333 332 persons. This is at the rate of 91,554 per day, 3,730 per hour, 62 per minute. So each pulsation of the heart makes the decease of some human creature. The average of human life is 33 years. One-fourth of the population dies at or before the age of seven years. One-half at or before 17 years. Among 10,000 persons one arrives at the age of 100 years; one in 500 attains the age of 90; and one in 100 lives to the age of 60. Married men live longer than single ones. In 1,000 persons 95 marry and more marriages occur in June and December than in any other month in the year. One eighth of the whole population is military. Professions exercise a great influence on longevity. In 1,000 individuals who arrive at the age of 70 years, 43 are priests, orators or public speakers, 30 are agriculturists, 23 are workmen, 32 are soldiers or military employes, 26 are advocates or engineers, 27 are professors, and 24 are doctors. Those who devote their lives to the prolongation of that of others die the soonest.

RELIGIOUS GEMS.

Better be upright with poverty, than unprincipled with plenty.

The Bible is a window in this prison of hope, through which we look into eternity.

The merit of our actions consists not in doing extraordinary actions, but indoing ordinary actions well.

Uprightness in all our dealings with one another is a matter not of human convenience, but of divine requirement.

The grand gem of all manly character is veracity, or the habit of truthfulness. That virtue has at the foundation of everything said.

Amidst all disorders, God in ordering all wisely and justly, and to them that love him, graciously; therefore we ought not to be dismayed.

No person can be so feeble or so poor that he has not a duty to perform; which being performed, makes him one with the highest and greatest.

Aristotle, on being censured for bestowing alms on a bad man, made the following noble reply:—"I did not give it to the man; I gave it to humanity."

The rays of the sun shine upon the dust and the mud, but they are not soiled by them. So a holy soul, while it remains holy, may mingle with the vileness of the world, and yet be pure in itself.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

THE GREAT FEMALE REMEDY,

JOB MOSES' PERIODICAL PILLS.

THIS well known medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstructions, from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution.

To Married Ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will, in a short time, bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of Barrenness and Spinal Affections, Pain in the Back and Limbs, Heaviness, Fatigue on slight exertion, Palpitation of the Heart, Lowness of Spirits, Hysterics, Sick Headaches, Whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

These Pills have never been known to fail where the directions on the 3rd page of pamphlet are well observed

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the glossy and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has any thing won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for confirmed consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although called Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral, its complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully sustained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical, or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in no case leaves any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. We refer to gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through ague localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver to healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold by Druggists around the world.

PRICE $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

CONCENTRATION the great principle. The system of infinitesimal doses of medicine diffused in gallons of injurious substants exploded. All useless material discarded. The active principle only of the most powerful and efficient remedies known, concentrated in a small, convenient form HABITUAL CONSTIPATION CURED. All diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, permanently relieved by using Dr. Colby's ANTI-COSTIVE AND TONIC PILLS, Sugar-Coated. Recommended by the Medicine Profession.

GLAD TIDINGS FOR ALL. —Those who have no hair may have it.—Those who have so hair may have it.—Those who have plenty, may preserve and beautify it. Those who are losing it may have its loss arrested. The hair strengthened, beautified, restored, by using HURD'S EGYPIAN HAIR GLORS, cheapest, cleanest, best. Don't rest till you have tried a bottle. Sold by all Druggists.

SUCCESS begets envy. Hence the efforts of certain vendors of Liniment to decry JACOBS' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. Wherever introduced, it drives all others from the market. Pain positively annihilated by its use. We have not room to enumerate the virtues accorded to it by the thousands who have used it. No medicine ever invented is capable of more extended application. It has hundreds of imitators, but not one RIVAL. Beware of Counterfeits.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Colby's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. P. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by JAMES LEFFEL, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. GLEN, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. GLEN's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gears, Head-cutting and Mid-cutting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Muley Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

To Messrs. Churchman & Sharp, Coverings of County of Lennox, Ontario, Dominion.

Hamet, Shannyglen Mountain, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the spine, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not stand, but was confined to my chair for about two years, while this weakness was creeping on me, and afterwards, I consult medical advice, and paying, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but all no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shantokonia Remedy by reading the cures mentioned in a pamphlet. At this time I had to carry in both the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shantokonia Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The cost of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shantokonia Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Hamet, County of Hastings, 9th ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEGG, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her cure was doctored hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shantokonia Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, any thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performances of a miracle.

The Best in the World!
THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.
$1,500 Cash. For 1867. $1,500 Cash.
A Valuable Premium for all.
This splendidly illustrated weekly journal of POPULAR SCIENCE, MECHANICS, INVENTION, ENGINEERING, CHEMISTRY, ARCHITECTURE, AGRICULTURE and the kindred arts, enter its TWENTY-FIFTH YEAR on the first of January next, having a circulation far exceeding that of any similar journal now published
THE EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT of the Scientific American is very ably conducted, and some of the most popular writers in this Country and Europe are contributors.—Every number has 16 imperial pages, embellished with fine Engravings of Recent Inventions, Tools now coming into Use, Farm and Household, Engineering Works, Dwelling Houses, Public Buildings.
A journal of so much intrinsic value, at the low price of $3 a year, ought to have, in this country, A MILLION READERS.
Whoever reads the Scientific American is entertained and instructed, without being bothered with hard words or dry details.
TO INVENTORS AND MECHANICS.
This journal is of special value, as it contains a weekly report of all Patents issued at Washington, with copious notices of the leading AMERICAN AND ETROPEAN INVENTIONS. The Publishers of the Scientific American are the most Extensive Patent Solicitors in the world, and have unequalled facilities for gathering a complete knowledge of the progress of Invention and Discovery throughout the world; and with a view to mark the quarter of a century, during which this journal has held the first place in Scientific and Mechanical Literature, the Publishers will on January first the large and splendid Steel Engraving by John Sartain of Philadelphia, entitled:
"MEN OF PROGRESS—AMERICAN INVENTORS,"
the plate costing nearly $4,000 to engrave, and contains nineteen likenesses of Illustrious American Inventors. It is a superb work of art.
Single pictures printed on heavy paper, will be sold at $10, but any one subscribing for the Scientific American the paper will be sent for one year, together with a copy of the the engraving, on receipt of $10. The picture is also offered as a premium for clubs of subscribers.
☞ $1,000 CASH PRIZES ☜
In addition to the above Premium, the Publishers will pay $1,500 in CASH PRIZES for lists of subscribers sent in by February 10, 1870. Persons who want to compete for these prizes, should send at once for prospectus and blanks for names.
Terms of Scientific American, one year $3.00; six months, $1.50; four months, $1.00 To clubs of 10 and upwards, terms $2.50 per annum. Specimen copies sent free. Address the Publisher
MUNN & CO.,
37 Park Row, New York.
How to get Patents.—A pamphlet of Patent Laws and instruction to inventors sent free.

New Method of Washing Clothes
Without Labor.
"THE DOMINION"
Steam Washing Boiler.
THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention. Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.
☞ Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.
The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of "eterborough.

Poetry.
MY MOTHER'S GRAVE.
I'm kneeling by thy grave, mother,
I'm kneeling all alone;
And stars are shinning sweetly down
From the celestial throne.

I'm thinking of the past, mother,
Of joys forever fled;
I'm weeping all alone within
The city of the dead.

I'm thinking of the cot, mother,
Where once we used to dwell;
The rippling brook that murured by,
Adown the mossy dell.

I'm thinking of the birds, mother,
That sung so sweetly there,
At morn, when we together knelt,
You breathed a happy prayer.

And O! I'm thinking of the time
You told me you must die—
That you must go and live with God;
And bade me not to cry.

But when I saw life's flickering lamp
Had ceased to burn—thy brow
So pale, so cold and marble like,
I wept—I'm weeping now.

I'm thinking of that day, mother,
The sad and mournful sound
That echoed from the old church bell,
Close by the burial ground.

I'm kneeling by thy grave, mother,
My thoughts are far away:
And zephyr winds are whispering
A sad and mournful lay.

And on the winds I seem to hear
A soft and heavenly strain:—
"Weep not, lone one, but trust in God,
In Heaven we'll meet again."

The Little Heathen Boy.
A godly minister had a careless and idle son, who left his home and sailed to a foreign land. His sorrowful parents could only pray for him, and send him good advice when they wrote to him. The ship which bore their boy reached a distant port, and was waiting to take in a fresh cargo, when the sailors went on shore and brought back with them a little native boy, who could play some curious kind of music.
He amused them for a long time; but at last he said, "You must now take me on shore."
The sailors told him that he must not go yet.
"O, indeed I cannot stay any longer," replied the little black bob; "and I will tell you why. A kind Christian missionary has come near the village where I live.—From him I have learned all I know about Jesus Christ. This is about the hour when he meets us under a tree to tell us more; I want to go and hear him."
The sailors were quite overcome by the boy's entreaties and at once rowed him ashore.
The minister's thoughtless son was struck with the words of the little heathen boy. He felt condemned by them. "Here am I," he said to himself, "the son of a minister, knowing far more about Jesus than that poor boy, and yet caring far less for Him! That little fellow is now earnestly listening to the Word of Life, while I am living quite careless about it."
In great distress of mind he retired that night to his hammock. There his father's instructions came back to his thoughts, and reminded him how he might seek and find that salvation he so much needed. He became a sincere christain; and great was the joy in his home when the happy tidings reached his parents.

HINDOO WEDDING.
In the celebration of marriages, in the East at the present day, many of the peculiar customs of ancient times are observed. "At a Hindoo marriage," says a modern missionary, "the procession which I saw some years ago, the bridegroom came from a distance, and the bride lived at Serampore, to which place the bridegroom was to come by water. After waiting two or three hours, at length, near midnight, it was announced in the very words of Scripture, 'Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him.' All the persons employed now lighted their lamps, and ran with them in their hands, to fill up their stations in the procession; some of them had lost their lights, and were unprepared; but it was then too late to seek them, and the cavalcade moved forward; at which place the company entered a large and splendidly illuminated area, before the house, covered with an awning, where a great multitude of friends, dressed in their best apparel, were seated upon mats. The bridegroom was carried in the arms of a friend, and placed in a superb seat in the midst of the company, where he sat a short time, and then went into the house, the door of which was immediately shut, and guarded by Sepoys. I and others expostulated with the door-keepers, but in vain. Never was I so struck with the Lord's beautiful parable as at this moment—'And the door was shut.'"
The journal of one of the American missionaries in Greece contains an account of an Armenian wedding, which she attended; and after describing the dresses and previous ceremonies, she says that at twelve o'clock at night precisely the cry was made by some of the attendants: "Behold the bridegroom cometh," and immediately five or six set off to meet him.

Absinthe Drinking in New York.
It is alarming the extent to which absinthe is coming to be used in this metropolis. Most of the bars retail it out in the same manner that they do at Bourbon. Young and old go out to drink, and while one calls for a whiskey cocktail another will order absinthe. One of the most brilliant writers on the New York press has nearly ruined himself physically and intellectually by the use of this pernicious sedative for only a year and a half. I saw the other day a talented lady, the wife of one the most prominent professional men of the city, who has absinthe. She first took it to allay pain she now takes it to allay appetite. Her selfcontrol is wholly gone. She totters upon the brink of the grave looks forward with joy to death and frequently undertakes to put an end to her mental sufferings. A beautiful home, loving husband and five children, together wit all the enjoyments which wealth and refinement can bestow, are not sufficient to deter her from indulging in this evil and body destroying drug. The effects of absinthe seems to be swifter and more fatal than those of either opium or morphine. It obtains an all powerful control over its votaries, deadens the sensibilities and is, indeed the guillotine of the soul."

Prohibition in Boston means five hundred places open where liquor is sold openand in defiance of the statute, not only on week days but on Sundays.

THE DYING DRUNKEN BOY.
Two gentlemen were going over the battlefield at Donaldson, mounting in caring for the wounded. Suddenly they paused before a sight touchingly beautiful where all was either pathetic or horrible. A fair-haired boy, with his head pillowed upon a stone, lay before them, surrounded by dead or mangled bodies, in every conceivable form of mortal agony. His face was calm. Almost a smile lingered around the sweet mouth. Death seemed to have come to him bereft of its terrors. As they bent reverently to raise the slender form, the boy's pale lips moved and they heard a faintly whispered prayer:
"Still all my song shall be,
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee—Even—if—It—Be."
There was one fluttering sigh, and his spirit fled upwards on the wings of prayer, and a smile of surpassing sweetness settled around the half-closed lips.
The drummer boy had fought his first and last battle and gone to his reward.
Deeply moved and interested, Mr. Moody made inquiries about the lad and learned that he had been a faithful Sabbath School Scholar. There were those who remembered how earnestly he had listened to his teacher's instructions, often joining in singing the Sabbath school song which was the solace of his last hours. We give one verse from the song, singularly appropriate to his condition. Indeed the whole song might have been written for just the circumstances in which he was placed, so perfect is its adaptation and so fully does it express his probable emotions:
"Though like the wanderer,
Daylight all gone,
Darkness be over me,
My rest a stone;
Yet in my dreams I'd be
Nearer, my God, to Thee,
Nearer to Thee."
Mr. Moody is well known for his devotion to the Sabbath School, and related this to prove that the seed sown there is not lost.

A TEMPERANCE TALE.—Several gentlemen were discussing the merits of the prohibitory law. Objections were raised, various opinions expressed, and at last a decision reached that a license law was preferable. A lady had been a silent listener to their conversation.
One of the gentleman—a physician—suddenly asked, "what is your opinion, Mrs. C.? Surely you have good reasons for mitigating the sentence of King Alcohol."
"I would gladly see it banished from the country."
"How can you speak so strongly?" he asked. "Do you fail to remember that, in your low state of health, I recommended whisky as a never failing remedy?"
"Yes, Dr. R., I remember all this and more. I remember when I was a drunkard's child, and that I trembled with terror when my father came home in a state of intoxication from the place where rum was licensed to be sold. I remember a mother's tears and a father's oaths, and the secret hiding from one who would have been able to protect had not the temptation of an open grog shop transformed him into a monster of cruelty. Yes," she continued bitterly, 'I remember when I was made fatherless, and my mother a widow, with the dreadful sound in our ears, 'My drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God.' Yes, more; I remember a darling brother—a sweet boy of fifteen—enticed into one of those respectable drinking saloon, and from thence borne away insensible to linger in a state of half-idiocy until death closed the scene. Tell me not," said she, "of a law too stringent to prevent a recurrence of such a scene, nor compare the benefit accruing to this poor perishing life to the loss of eternal life in the future kingdom."

WHAT ARE CLOVES?
Cloves are the unopened flowers of a small evergreen tree that resembles in appearance the laurel or the bay. It is a native of the Moluccas or spice Islands, but has been carried to all the warmer parts of the world, and is now largely cultivated in the tropical regions of America. The flowers are small in size, and grow in large nutasbers, in clusters, at the very ends of the branches. The cloves we use are the flowers gathered before they have opened, and whilst they are still green. After they have been flattened they are smoked by a fire, and then dried in the sun. Each clove consists of two parts, a round head, which is the four petals or leaves of the flower rolled up, inclosing a number of small stalks or filaments; the other part of the clove is terminated with four points, and is, in fact the flower cup and the unripe seed vessel. All these parts may be distinctly shown, if a few cloves are soaked for a short time in hot xater, when the leaves of the flowers soften and readily unroll. The smell of cloves is very strong and aromantic but not unpleasant—their taste, which unmixed with other substances, is pungent, acrid and lasting. Both the taste and smell of cloves depend on the quantity of oil they contain; that is so great that it may be pressed out with the finger. Sometimes the oil is separated from the cloves before they are sold and the odor and taste in consequence is much weakened by such unfare proceedings

A Mother's Love.
One very cold day in winter, a woman was obliged to cross a mountain with her little baby-boy in her arms. When she got to the top of the mountain, she became very cold, and began to fear that she and her little babe would freeze to death; but she resolved to take some of the clothing from herself and wrap it around her child, and save his life. So she folded her shawl all around her infant, then she laid him out of the wind in a cleft of the rock. The next morning she was found dead near by, but the babe in the cleft of the rock was quite well and warm.
When that child grew he must have loved that mother very much, for he knew how she had died to save his life.
He could not remember her face, for he was to young when she died; but he loved her, and was not ashamed of her though was a poor woman. If he had been, I think the boys in Scotland would have felt like taking him to some high mountain, and leaving him there to freeze to death.
One day, many years after, a minister was relating this story, when a soldier came forward, and, with tears in his eyes, said: 'That was my mother; she died to save my life; she hid me in the cleft of the rock. I love her; but I can never tell how much I owe my Saviour, who, when I was in danger of dying the 'second death,' said to me, 'I will put the in cleft of the rock, and will cover thee.'"

LIFE AND DEATH.—While we are reasoning concerning life, life is gone; and death, though perhaps they receive him differently yet treats alike the fool and the philosopher.
—Hume.

A SAD ROMANCE ABOUT.—Two years months past a poor woman, recently died, who have been noticed sitting on the corner of Plum and Longworth streets, morning after who never came. Her sad history is told in a few words. Her husband died in the army. She would never believe that he was dead, and was full in faith that he would again return to her. Constant brooding began derangement. An improver told her that if she would take her stand at one of the street corners every day her absent lord would soon be back to her. She did so, and every morning the poorest weather was found at her post, waiting wearily despite wind and weather, and regardless of the jeers and smiles of passers by, she peered anxiously into every face or passed hungrily around the town, in search of one no doubt, but the whose features shall never more gladden her eyes. For that sure she was and every watcher failed to uncover a glance of joy and many were the inquiries as to herself history. But the faithful soulmate has left her accustomed stand, and her vigils are ended. The officers came yesterday and rent the pitiable creature to the Longview Asylum, where, perhaps, she will await her unreturning husband until called upon to join him beyond the dark river.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

CHRISTIAN MANNERS.—The highest style of manners shown in quietly grown out of a special state of the affections, rather than of the intellect. Who has not met with individuals whose fame would be a passport to any society, and whose manners, the unstudied and spontaneous expressions of their inner selves, make their visits welcome wherever they go, and attract unbounded confidence toward them in whatever they undertake? They are frank because they have nothing to conceal; affable because their natures overflow with benevolence: unfurnish, because they dread nothing; always at home, because they carry within themselves that which can found itself to anywhere, and everywhere—purity of soul with fullness of heart. Such are our best guarantees for finding at home in all society to which duty takes us, and in every occupation upon which it obliges us to enter.

ONE DROP AT A TIME.—Have you ever watched an icicle as it formed? You noticed how it froze one drop at a time until it was a foot long or more. If the water was clean the icicle remained clear, and sparkled brightly in the sun; but if the water was but slightly muddy, the icicle looked foul, and its beauty spoiled. Just so our characters are forming. One little thought or being at a time adds its influence. If each thought be pure and right, the soul will be loving and will sparkle with happiness; but if impure and wrong, there will be final deformity and wretchedness.

HAPPINESS.—Now let me tell you a secret worth knowing. This looking forward for enjoyment don't pay. Even what I know of it, I would as soon chase butterflies for a living, or bottle up moon shine for cloudy nights. The only true way to be happy is to take drops of happiness as God gives them to us every day of our lives. The boy must learn to be happy while he is plodding over lessons; the apprentice while he is learning his trade; the merchant while he is making his fortune. If he fails to learn this art, he will be sure to miss the enjoyment, when he gains what he sighs for.

IMMORTALITY OF A THOUGHT.—Beautiful is to understand and know that a thought did never yet die; that as thou, so creation, for therefore has gathered it, and from the whole past no thing will be lost to the whole future. It is thus that the hope in heart, the seeing eye of the first dream still feels and stands ever consummated and spiritually embraced by a crown of witnesses and brothers; and there is a living literal communion of saints, wide as the world itself, and as the history of the world.

A SERIOUS AFFRAY AT A WOMAN.—On Saturday evening, at Jarrettsville Harford county, Md., Miss Cairns shot and Killed Nicholas McComas. About twenty persons were seated on the porch of the village hotel, Miss Cairns suddenly appeared, and drew a pistol and fired three shots at McComas. The alleged cause of the murder was seduction. Miss Cairns had previously sued McComas for breach of promise of marriage.

While several men were drawing up the schooner Restless by means of a capstan, at Owen Sound, on the 20th inst., the hawser, under the immense strain, broke, and one of the men, John McKendry, received a blow by the recoil, which fractured the posterior portion of the skull. It is feared the injury will prove fatal.

Last Drops of Wisdom Past.
If you do good, forget it; if evil, remember and repent of it.
VANITY.—The vanity of man. He is like a river, constantly passing away, and yet constantly coming on.—Dean Swift.
LEARN in childhood, if you can, that happiness is not outside, but inside. A good heart and a clear consciousness bring happiness, which no riches and no circumstances alone ever do.

EARTH CLOSETS.
A correspondent of the Country Gentleman sends the following account of his method of applying the dry earth system in his own domestic establishment.
The house is built in the usual manner. Under the seats I have a drawer made of two inch stuff, put together with hot paper and white lead, made so that it can be drawn out at one end of the house. I cover the bottom of the drawer with about three inches of dry earth and then sprinkle a shovelful of plaster over it. The drawer is cleaned out once a week and the contents go to increase my manure pile. So far, I have not found any smell coming from the arrangement, although we have had a pretty hot summer, and the privy is within fifteen feet of my house. The drawer runs on to slides, and when in place is covered by the ends by doors. This is my earth closet. An improvement would be to have a box in each appartment full of dry earth, and a scoop, so that more earth

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1869.

PARLIAMENT PROROGUED.

The assembled of wisdom of Ontario dispersed on Friday last, after a session of about two months. The most of the time was spent in discussing rival railway interests, and claims for charters, or for amendments to existing charters.

The Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company is hereafter to be known as the Midland Railway Company, and powers have been given the company to extend, and also to issue $600,000 worth of bonds for that purpose.

The Cobourg and Peterborough Railway Company has amalgamated with the Marmora Iron Company, and numerous newly proposed Companies have obtained charters.

The Assessment Law is amended, but owing to the fact that we never received a copy of the proposed amendments, we cannot refer to the changes.

The Toronto daily papers furnish us with so much of the details as enables us to know that one of the most desirable changes proposed was lost through the manoeuvres of our poor creature from the West Riding.

There was a strong disposition in the House to compel government employees to pay taxes on their salaries, the same as other men, whose salaries are not as sure nor so regularly paid. The choice of the country is tending to this, and justly so.

Why should a clerk in a merchant's office, or a school master be expelled to pay taxes on his salary, or even a merchant on a supposed income, while men in the pay of the government of Ontario are exempt? But the Western Local at the beck of John Sandfield came to the relief of his fellow-tipping master, and by moving an amendment that was equivalent to still exempting the government clerks, saved John S. a crushing defeat by a majority of one. The vote was 37 to 36. Thus Mr. Carnegie's own vote has perpetrated a glaring injustice in our assessment law.

The government failed in their School Bills. Nothing more than this proved the inability of the present government, and its utter unfitness to grapple with any of the great questions of the day.

Mr. Cameron and John Sandfield were both compelled to acknowledge that the bill was entirely Dr. Ryerson's; that they know nothing of its details or merits, and were reduced to the humiliating position of asking to withdraw it to meet the wishes of their chief, the Chief Superintendent of Education.

An overwhelming majority of the house declared their want of appreciation of the merits of the bill as introduced in such a way as to vote for amendments, that so altered it that its originators would not acknowledge the bill as their offspring.

Just before prorogation, there were evident signs of great weakness creeping over John Sandfield, and the patent combination. His followers were getting restive, and were quieted only by promises and threats according to circumstances. Some think John S. will never face the peoples' representatives again for fear of a humiliation that he could not endure.

The attempt to buy off Mr. Blake was so completely unsuccessful, that the heart of the Premier grew sick. He had learned the dodge of purchasing opponents from John A., but could not work the matter as well. He didn't meet with the right man.

Mr. E. Blake deserves the thanks of the country for thus rejecting the mercenary offer of the Combination.

Messrs. Blake, McKenzie, McKellar and the faithful opposition, manfully withstood the efforts of the government to force abnormous legislation upon the country. It is true, that in every case they were not successful, but their earnest opposition to unwise legislation is nothing the less praiseworthy, because beaten by government majorities.

On the whole the work of the government was literally nothing. The drainage bills got up to buy support, just as the sayluma, at London and Belleville were intended, may fail by perverting their object, and if so, thus will fail nearly the entire work of Ontario government.

The time of the early part of the session was dwindled away doing nothing, and at last the business was hurried indecently through.

A NEW PROJECT.

We believe there is a movement on foot to build a new gravel road through North Monaghan in the direction of the present line of the railway, entering on the boundary near where it is intersected by the railroad at Fraserville. It is one of the easiest lines for a road that could be. The whole tract is level, not an elevation to be overcome in seven miles. This would shorten the distance from the greater part of South Cavan and South Monaghan, by about five miles.

Cadarville by this road would be only ten miles from Peterboro, Bailieboro or Bloomfield about twelve, and Millbrook about thirteen miles. The land through which the proposed road would run can be obtained easily. The road will be easy travelled, and would ensure almost the entire trade of South Monaghan and East Cavan to our market.

The late agitation for the separation of Durham from Northumberland, awakened the idea in the minds of several influential farmers in Cavan, in favor of uniting, the east half of this fine township to this county.

This proposed road would tend as a link to draw tighter and closer the bonds existing between this county and Cavan and Hastings, and many ere long be the very means of uniting them to us.

The Town Council is likely to move in this matter, and they no doubt will receive the earnest support of the people in doing so.

RED RIVER AFFAIRS.

The latest news from the West, represents Col. Dennis as returned to Pembina. to Mr. McDougall. He narrowly escaped with his life. It is said that if he had been caught by the revolted half-breeds, he would, most assuredly have been killed, for attempting to arouse the Indians. Mr. McDougall's representations as preparing to leave Pembina for Ottawa on the 10th or 11th. instant.

The Royal Proclamation appointing Mr Dougall Lieutenant Governor, has been promulgated, and in all probability sent to him. Despatches from Ottawa lead to the belief that, messengers will leave there today for Pembina with dispatches to Governor McDougall. There is no indications of a cessation of the rebellion.—Perhaps when once fully armed with power and the proclamation, the discontents will see the wisdom of at once receiving him, and making the best of their new position.

Moderation on his part, and a wise administration of the affairs of the Territory, will do much to bring about a happy issue. The present state of the settlement could not long remain; either it must be a part of Canada or of the United States; and it may be that American sympathisers are at the foundation of all this trouble.

There is one sure thing that Poor Willie is in a tight place. Nor is it to be wondered at that the people feel aggrieved to be sold and bought without being consulted. But this is only a piece of Tory tactics, and a sorry affair it may turn out.

The Rebels never can succeed, but they may cause trouble to Canada, and loss to themselves.

The Approaching County Elections.

It is a pleasing feature in our municipal institutions that generally honest men are honored and rewarded by the people.

The members elected by acclamation, to the offices of Reeve and Dep. Reeve, are amongst the best working members of the County Council.

Messrs John Walton, Esq. and I. Garbutt, Esq., of Smith; these are undoubtedly the safest men to keep down taxes, Smith could send.

John W. Gilmour, of Monaghan, is also an old an efficient Councillor.

T. Coughlan, Esq., and Mr. Brown, of Asphodel, are both old and tried men, and so is Mr. Moher, of Douro.

S. S. Peck, Esq., and F. Peck, Esq., have proved themselves active, careful and economical as possible, and efficient Councillors.

Mr. Shaw, of Harvey, is a new man, but we feel satisfied that he will prove an efficient member of the County Council.

Several of the other members have to stand a contest, not because they were inefficient or careless in their duty, but to test their popularity, or to make way for some other person, who aspires to the high honors of the position.

It is useless to speculate on the election contests pending. The strongest men will win. Let us hope that the people may also select the best men—whether they be old men or new ones. By doing so, they will show the wisdom of granting them the blessings of self-government.

Union School Examinations Continued

On Wednesday, Mr. Dixon's own department, and the senior department were examined, and the pupils acquitted themselves favorably on the whole.

The fifth division, girls, prescribed to Miss Hatton, their teacher, a very neat writing desk, well furnished, and a gold pen and a gold pencase.

Miss Bella Clark, and Miss Clemesha making the presentation on behalf of the others.

The following is the address :—

Miss Hatton,

DEAR TEACHER.—We, the pupils of the Fifth Division of the Union and Grammar Schools, Peterboro, embrace this opportunity of expressing our high appreciation of your services and our regard for you, our Teacher.

We feel that you are deeply interested in the educational interests and future happiness of your individual pupils; and we are convinced that no efforts on your part have been spared to render our progress rapid and thorough.

If we by any inconsistency have caused you pain we assure you that it was done unintentionally, and trust that you will fully pardon and overlook it. Having been benefitted by your kind remonstrances and encouraged by your advice, we are resolved that the sky of our future school days shall be cloudless; and hope that the wheels of our progress may gather sufficient strength at every revolution, to enable us with ease to surmount the countless mental difficulties, with which every student has to contend.

We thank you for your kindness and forbearance, and now as a small token of affection and remembrance permit us to present you this Writing Desk. May it for many happy years to come awaken in your heart pleasing associations in connection with the history of our education.

The end of the last School Session of the year eighteen sixty-nine is now approaching and the School is about to closes; but before we part, permit us one and all to wish you a pleasant vacation, a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

To the address Mr. Dixon made a reply on behalf of Miss Hatton, as she had been taken by surprise and was entirely unprepared to do more than return her sincere thanks.

The pupils of the fourth division presented to Mrs. Flavelle, their teacher, a writing desk, and her junior division, over which she has been so long, gave her a very nice toast-rack. Mrs. Flavelle is well suited for the position she has long occupied, and this token of their kind regard for her must tend to draw the cords of teacher and pupil together, and also lessen the onerous labors which she is daily called upon to perform.

The following is the address :—

DEAR MRS. FLAVELLE.—We, the scholars of the Fourth Division, have felt that we cannot allow the present school term to close without expressing to you our gratitude for your willingness to take charge of the classes in this Division, at the time when our esteemed teacher Miss Beattie, was so suddenly compelled, from illness, to discontinue her labors in the school, which we trust will be only temporary and we pray that you will rejoice with us that she is now recovering, and we trust that she will be able, after the holidays, to entrust her duties to our Division with restored health. And now dear Mrs. Flavelle, as we know not if the relation will be continued after the Christmas vacation, which has to our advantage, so happily subsisted between us, be assured that we shall ever cherish with grateful remembrance the instructions we have received from you, as well as your kind counsel, in which you manifested an earnest interest for our welfare. We therefore beg your acceptance of this writing-desk, as a small token of our affectionate regard. Wishing that you may have a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.—

On behalf of the division,
SARAH CROFT.

Mrs. Flavelle thanked the pupils for their great kindness to her, and for this token of their good will.

The other examinations were somewhat marred by the number of presentations, at which all desired to be present if possible, thus drawing the attention of both pupils and visitors. In Mr. Dixon's reports, however, he speaks favorably of the teachers, and of the state of their different divisions.

THE REUNION.

On Wednesday evening the pupils of the Union and Grammar School gave a very pleasant entertainment in the Music Hall, which Mr. Hill had fitted up for the occasion in a very attractive and elegant style. The dialogues and recitations were clearly and intelligently given; and the charades were admirably performed. Miss C. Boswell, Miss Shaw, Miss Clark, Miss McWilliams, Miss E. Stratton, Miss C. Gamble, and Masters Lithgow, Sawers, McIntyre, &c., all appeared equal to their parts. Miss Shaw excelled in her part.—The music by Miss Hatton, Miss Shaw, Miss C. Boswell, and Miss Martyn was encored, somewhat of a new phase in these entertainments. The evening's amusement was certainly far ahead of any of these flying entertainments that sometimes draw large houses. If a splendid night's entertainment is ever required, the same performers would be the very best to employ. They had a bumper house on Wednesday night, and the audience was perfectly delighted.

STRANGE.—Last week Mr. Charles Bresly, who lives about three miles from Town, lost several head of cattle and horses. Mr. B. cannot account for any cause, and yet the animals exhibited all the symptoms of being poisoned in some way.

Mr. Andrew Young had been at his place threshing, and until the time of threshing, all his cattle were healthy and well. Just after the finishing up of the threshing, one cow was found dead in the barn yard. Next morning two of his horses took sick and died. Mr. Thos. Beatty was sent for, but before his arrival the animal was dead Mr. Young left on Wednesday evening for Douro, and on Thursday morning one of his horses died with the same symptoms, as if poisoned. Mr. Bresly declares there was no poison about the place, none in the stable or knowingly placed in or about the grain. The cause of the death of the animals therefore remains a mystery.

The friends of the Wesleyan Methodist Church intend having a "Social" on Thursday evening next, the proceeds to be in aid of the building fund. They have erected a most parsonage of white brick, and the object of this meeting is to enable the building committee to furnish the house when completed. Twenty-five or fifty cents spent in this way will never be missed by the donors, and still will prove acceptable and useful to the committee.

Mr. Stanton, whose name was so prominent during the American War, is dead.

OBITUARY.

It becomes our painful duty to record the decease of Robert Morrison, Esq., of Dummer. Mr. Morrison was a native of Ireland; he came to Canada when about 12 years of age, and settled with his father in Dummer, in the year 1826, where he resided till his death. He was more than one elected to the office of Reeve and in the discharge of his duty was considered faithful and obliging. He was also an active Magistrate, and in this respect faithfully served his Country, if not as advantageous to himself as it ought to have been. Mr. Morrison was highly respected by his neighbours, and by all who knew him, as a plain outspoken honest man.

An attack of Lung disease lately made inroads on his constitution, and confined him to his house, but he was able to move about until about seven weeks ago, when bleeding of lungs, began to be serious, and has at length caused his death, at the age of 50 years.

His Funeral Cortege was very large, over a mile long. His remains were interred in the Norwood Cemetry.

Died, in Peterboro, on Friday morning, 24th inst., Jas. Ince, Esq., aged 75 years.

Deceased who was best known as Sergt. Ince, was a native of Norfolk, England, being born at Colchester, May 12th, 1795. When very young he entered the British army, and served in the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusileers for 26 years. He served in the war of 1812, and was with Wellington at Waterloo, in which he received two gun shot wounds—one through the leg, and another on the cheek which narrowly missed its fatal aim by glancing along his face.

He came to Peterboro in 1842, where he remained till his decease. Since that period he has served in the Sedentary Militia as Major, and was paymaster to old pensioners in this district. When he left the army, he retired as Sergeant Major, and drew a pension for his services. Mr. Ince was a hale, hearty man, never was ailing in life, never was a day confined to bed through sickness.

About three months ago, he lost the use of his sight from neuralgia, and this confined him more to his house, but oft he was able to move round town. On Thursday night he went to bed in his usual health, but about one o'clock suffered from apoplexy, from which he never rallied.—His remains were interred on Sunday in the Little Lake Cemetery.

He was respected li. life, and a large number of friends accompanied his remains to their last resting place. He leaves a wife and an only daughter, the wife of Wm. Coulter, Esq., Druggist, to survive him.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Bishops of the Ecumenical Council seem to be enjoying the holidays. The infallibility is not likely to be discussed.

John Dinkey, who was convicted in New Jersey, of the murder of his wife and a friend, committed suicide by hanging himself in his cell.

Two bar keepers in Boston have been convicted and sentenced to pay $50 each, for selling liquor. Boston don't grant licenses to sell rot-gut.

WATCH NIGHT.—The usual watch night services will be held in the Wesleyan Church, on Friday night, commencing at 10 o'clock, p. m. The Rev. Mr. McDonnell, of the old kirk, will preach the sermon.

In Cincinnati, 42,000 barrels of saloon washings are re-distilled every year, and produce about 2½ gallons of spirits per barrel. The slops being about $2 per barrel. How economical the Cincinnati trade must be.

The weather has been remarkably variable during the past month—snows, thaws, rains, snows, thaws, rains, alternately, every day or two, which must be to the Doctors advantage, but cannot be good for the health of the people.

There has been a very active revival in connection with the Wesleyan Methodists at Keene. The Rev. Mr. Kines, who has lately come to the Keene circuit, has been holding a series of religious meetings, and his labors have been blessed to the people. We understand that the greatest interest is taken in these services by the people.

The Review has discovered, now that Port Hope is not yet to be the County Town of Durham, that farmers from within two miles of Lindsay, around Millbrook, and even from beyond Rice Lake, bring their pork to Peterboro market. What will the Mercury say to that? We trust the Port Hope Mercury will not omit this item.

While the Rev. Mr. Kines, of Keene, was in Peterboro at the Wesleyan Sabbath School Anniversary Services, some parsons or persons whose love for the commandments was not strong enough to prevent their stealing, broke into his house and took all the money they could find, about $15 in all. Those who appreciate the earnest and effective labors of Mr. Kines will no doubt make good his loss.

ACCIDENT.—The Millbrook Messenger says, that Mr. Sevey Miller, in Mr. Noodler's Grist Mill, in that place, was caught in the machinery while oiling it and was dragged in between the cogs of the wheels. His right arm was broken near the shoulder, and the flesh of his hip and thigh fearfully torn and lacerated. Mr. Noodler who was in the Mill at the time, was unable to extricate him, and had to go for help. Under Dr. Turner's care, the Messenger says he is progressing as favorably as can be expected.

SALT.—Mr. H. Calcutt has just informed us that a Company has been formed to prosecute the salt enterprise, on the lot east of Ashburnham, known as the "Salt Lot." The old Petroleum Guy's Derrick has been purchased, and will be removed to the lot to-day. We are told there are to be Trustees consisting of some of our most trustworthy citizens, and an earnest attempt will be made to prove whether Salt can be obtained in this locality. We hope the effort will receive the encouragement it deserves, for if successful, it would be the commencement of bright prospects for Peterboro. We wish they may be successful in boring. The drills will hardly stick this time.—

On Wednesday evening last, Col. Haultain held a meeting in the First Presbyterian Church, in favor of the French Canadian Mission. Mr. Richardson occupied the chair. The weather was very unfavorable, and the reunion in connection with the Grammar and Union School being on the same evening, tended to limit the audience. The Colonel's address was very earnest, and his advocacy of the mission and its work, eloquent. He certainly looks well, and is no doubt quite at home in this work—advocating the claims of the gospel. The society has the right man in the right place—an earnest christian, an active laborer, a cheerful givor, and one devoted to the work.

The old South Monaghan bridge is almost rotten. In summer the people of South Monaghan are unwilling to trust their precious bodies to its safe keeping. By this they are compelled to come round by the new bridge. The greater part of the Township, east of the quarter line, prefer coming to Peterboro to do their marketing, provided they could come by the old bridge. Would it not be wise in the Town Council to aid the County, and the people of Monaghan to repair the bridge. We have every reason to believe that the Monaghan people will aid in the work, if undertaken. As the County Council will soon meet, our enterprising City Fathers should bear this in mind, and if possible set the ball a rolling in this direction.

On Thursday last, Mr. R. Hall, late teacher in School Section No. 7, Otonabee, held his closing examination of the pupils. There was a large attendance of parents and friends of education, who appeared very much interested in the proceedings. In the evening the scholars gave a reunion or exhibition, in which they performed their different parts to the evident satisfaction of those who attended. Several of the young women who took part in it performed these parts admirably, and some of the boys were clear and distinct in their recitations. At the close of the whole the pupils presented Mr. Hall with a very neat and costly book, as a token of their esteem for him and good will towards him as a teacher. Mr. Hall replied extempore, as he had not been made aware of their intentions before hand. Mr. Hall is very much respected by both the pupils and their parents.

MELANCHOLY SUICIDE.—In the village of Sweetsburg, last saturday, a man named Frank Perry, Deputy Prothonotary, cut his throat from ear to ear with a razor.—He had been drinking very hard for days previously, and his mind was effected thereby. He was about thirty-five years of age.

No change in the markets.

GRAND OF BRITISH TEMPLARS.

The December Session of the Peterboro County Lodge of British Templars was held by the Village of Westwood, on the 28th Instant, at which a large number of delegates from the different primary lodges throughout the county were present. Bro. W. J. Jackson, W. C. T. of Westwood lodge, occupied the chair, when the session was opened under the "Degree of the Heart." The reports of the officers showed the lodges in the county to be in a very favorable condition. Under the head of unfinished business, the following were elected officers for the next term;

Bro. W. J. Jackson, W. C. T.
Sister M. Scott, W. V. T.
Bro. John Cooper, W. Sec.
Bro. Christopher Lancaster, W. Treas.
Bro. Godfrey, Rev., W. Lecturer.
Sister Jane Lancaster, W. Counsellor.
Bro. — Thistlewaite, W. Chaplain.
Bro. John McNamarra, W. Financier.
Sister Ashenagan, W. Recorder.
Bro. Harry Reader, W. Marshall.
Sister Mary Lancaster, W. D. Marshall.
Sister Jane Christie, W. A. S.
Bro. R. Christie, W. O. G.
Bro. Hugh Collins, P. W. G.

The usual sessional business was then transacted, during which several important matters relating to the order was brought forward and freely discussed by those present.

On motion, the lodge adjourned, to meet again in the Village of Norwood, on the first Tuesday of March next, at 2 o'clock.

After the session, all present sat down to a bountiful repast prepared by the ladies of Wellington Lodge, Westwood, to which ample justice was done. A vote of thanks was then tendered to the ladies for the excellent tea which they had provided; after which the meeting broke up, every one seeming well pleased with the first session of the county lodge held in Westwood, and all, evidently, satisfied that they were connected with an association that has for its object the suppression of the liquor traffic and the extension of the principles of Faith, Hope and Charity.—COM.

ASHBURNHAM.

The pupils of the Ashburnham School were examined on Wednesday 22nd. inst. A lively interest was taken in the proceedings of the day, as was manifested by the respectable turn out of parents and others. The junior department, under the charge of Miss Stratton, was examined in the fore noon. The pupils, although young, acquitted themselves very creditably. The reading in this division was good, geography remarkably good, considering the age of the pupils; tables and mental arithmetic very satisfactory. The senior department under Mr. Wood was examined in the afternoon. The classes in this division showed a high degree of proficiency in the various subjects in which they were examined, and gave very satisfactory evidence of good sharp teaching. The order of the School was excellent, and it was pleasing to notice the kindly feeling which appeared to exist between the pupils and their teachers. It must have been very gratifying to the teachers to observe how well their labors were appreciated by the trustees and others, and to have such favourable testimony borne to their success.

At the close of the examination flattering addresses were delivered by some of the gentlemen present, after which Mr. Wood was presented by his pupils, with an address, and a very handsome album, to the address he made a very suitable reply, when all were dismissed by singing the National Anthem.—COM

MR. EDITOR,—

Can you tell us what could have induced our worthy M. P. P. to introduce a motion in the House to exempt the incomes of the government officials of Ottawa and Toronto from taxation? Was it to please John Sandfield and his colleagues, and save them a few dollars annually; or was it from a conviction that those poor (!) officials should be exempt from taxation? If so why did he not think of the officials in other cities and towns in the land, and exempt them as well? May be he will himself condescend to answer these queries for

AN ELECTOR.

Peterboro, 23th Dec., 1869.

Upper Canada College.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Any one who has read the doings of our legislature at its late sitting in Toronto will have noticed the investigations by the Education Committee into the operations of U. C. College. They will also have observed that one of the members of that committee wished to report to the Assembly, that the charges made of the mismanagement of that institution had not been proven; that another moved that the Chairman report that it would be disastrous to the interests of higher education in the Province, if the endowment of U. C. College were withdrawn; that both these motions were objected to, and that finally the Committee rose without coming to any conclusion as to a report.

That there are legislators who will sanction say, and every, management of a public institution and the squandering of public funds and endowments, is patent to the most casual observers of passing events; but that a journal like the Globe, which wields such an influence throughout the country, should come out as it lately has done, in advocating the existence of such an institution that was begotten in fraud, and has been carried on by the most shameful expenditure of the people's money, is to me, at least, one of the speculative proofs of the fallibility of the very best of men to err. Who, I ask, was amongst the foremost of our public men in 1847-48 to stand forward and maintain the people's right against an unscrupulous oligarchy then monopolising and squandering a princely endowment for education? It was the Editor and Proprietor of the Globe, and to him, perhaps, more than to any other man, are we indebted for the liberation of our noble Universities from sectarian control. Unfortunately for the country, the Act of 1850 embraced the continuance of the U. C. College on the endowment fund, when a fine opportunity existed for cutting it adrift. It was a blunder, for which the country has had to pay heavily ever since, and is likely to do so for some time at least.

But though our patriotic statesmen then blundered, it is no reason why we should not endeavor to remedy their blunder, and the Globe may rest assured that no monstrous an institution will not be allowed much longer to be a blot on the educational institutions of our country.

No one knows better than the proprietor of that paper that the establishment of the U. C. College was only devised and sanctioned by the Legislature, because the University was in the hands of Bishop Strachan and his party, and that in agreeing to its establishment at all was upon the supposed conditions, that it was to do University work, and be supported from the endowment fund. In place of which it has never done University work, but does that in its reality number more now less Grammar School; that in place of being supported from the University endowment, it has wrongfully had a share of the land, over 40,000 acres made over to it; has had for years an annual grant of over $4,000 besides tuition fees and other emoluments. Notwithstanding all which it has been running into debt, and has been drawing from the University fund to liquidate it. The objections taken against the institution are chiefly that its endowment, as it has ever been conducted, is contrary to the conditions agreed upon; that it is an exceedingly extravagant institution, squandering funds that belong to the Grammar Schools in the country; and not doing work at all commensurate with its profligate expenditure. It cannot be and it will not be, that enlightened Canada will much longer tolerate the existence of this fog end of the family compact's infictions. That a united voice will ascend from Cornwall to Sarnia:—"rase, rase it, even to the foundations thereof," and so says your humble servant,

The Reeve was instructed to get legal advice about withdrawing certain lands at the recent sale of lands for taxes, and to act on that advice.

Council adjourned to the 10th. of January 1870.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

In a cause which affects them to so great an extent in all their various relations, why should we not have the co-operation of women? The wrongs of women growing out of the drinking habits cannot be estimated. Our daily papers teem with accounts of the savage cruelty to which women are subject at the hands of drunken husbands yet, numerous as are the heart-rending cases of savage violence, only a small proportion of the whole meet the public eye. How many women suffer in secret, and hide their wrongs from the world! Besides it is impossible to estimate the number of children who suffer from the same, day by day witnessing a parents drunkenness and brutality, pining in want, and having the passions awakened at a tender age. Who can wonder that discipline of such a kind should drive thousands of children to vagrancy and crime!

Wives! mothers! sisters! do you want your husbands and sons and brothers to become drunkards? We know you do not; and if not, then we beseech your aid in behalf of the movement which strikes at the cause of all this evil.

But suppose these your relatives are all safe, because they have taken the pledge. —Then think of the hundreds of thousands of your sisters who are suffering poverty, shame, degradation and misery not to be described by the intemperance of their relations, and have pity upon them.

Almost omnipotent, woman of America, is your influence in this movement. You have it in your power to do more than any others to dry up one chief source of human misery—especially of woman's misery—and to assist plenty to reign, and the voice of gladness to resound again, through many a place of habitation where now pinching poverty oppresses and sighs and lamentations are uttered. Will you, then betake yourselves to the furtherance of this glorious enterprise?

Begin at home, drive from the pantry and the side board all that can inebriate; press truth home upon every member of your family. Enlist not them your efforts, but your female friends together; discuss the matter with them; bind yourselves in associations that seek by personal example, influence and the circulation of printed pages the removal of this great curse.

Do this, woman of America, and millions shall rise up to call you blessed!—Nat. Tem. Advocate.

The population of Great Britain on June 1, 1869, according to the estimates of the Registrar General, amounts to 31,016,294 souls, or, excluding the army (the navy and overseas service, and including only the persons in the United Kingdom 30,021,451 —namely, 21 989,607 in England and Wales, 3,208,481 in Scotland and 3,823,363 in Ireland. This is an increase of 266,644 as compared with the numbers in the United Kingdom in the middle of the year 1868—namely, an increase of 226,230 in England 17,386 in Scotland, and 23,028 in Ireland.

DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT OF CAMBOC.—On Monday, April 13th, Mr. James Robinson died at his residence, near Melbourne, after an illness of about five month, borne with Christian fortitude and resignation. Mr Robinson settled in Canada about forty year ago, when that section was an almost unbroken front. He was a leading member of the Regular Baptist denomination, and and also took an active part in temperance movements, being one of the managers of the Good Templars in his neighbourhood. He was esteemed by all who knew him, as a man upright and honourable in all his dealings, and leaves a large circle of friends and acquaintances to lament his death.

OVER THE FALLS

Visitors to Niagara Falls a few years since, a few years since, a gentleman was playfully tossing a child in his arms to amuse the fond mother sitting at his feet on the edge of the precipice, when the little burden escaped from his grasp, and in a moment was gone—a speck in the foam below. We can only imagine the anguish of the man whose charge so suddenly passed from happy life to a fearful death.

But surely this is a trivial thing compared with the parental sacrifices seen daily everywhere. How carelessly do loving hands fling young souls, by the power of unholy influence, upon the tide of mortal ruin, whose vortex is the 'perdition of ungodly souls.' To trifle, however fondly, with one body is enough; but lightly to yield the undying nature, and cast it on the sweeping current of worldliness and dissipation, is awful pastime.

The song and smile of mirth by both the destroyers and the destroyed, becomes the abyss is out of sight, does not delay the tragedy of the soul, nor sweeten the bitterness of remorse when it is soon too late.—'That dress, said the dying daughter of Dr. H——, who had induced her by the offered adorning to stifle her convictions in a festive scene, 'is the price of my soul.'

'Father,' exclaimed a youthful inebriate at the gates of death, 'I drank my first glass at your table.'

These are only examples of betrayed trust, whose victims are passing the ordeal of destruction of both soul and body in hell.—American Messenger.

ADVICE TO YOUNG MEN.—The present season has been an exceedingly fruitful one, and as a consequence, money is plentiful, and business is proportionably good. The farmer has long since harvested his crop, and can look forward to the coming winter with feelings of satisfaction and compensative assurance. As the result of the farmer's prosperity, the business of all other classes of society is receiving a healthy impetus, and we predict a time of universal plenty and genuine thrift. To many the winter season is a time of comparative leisure, and affords an opportunity of storing the mind with that knowledge which is more valuable than gold. To all such we would say, fit yourselves for intelligently and manfully prosecuting those business pursuits which you have marked out for yourselves in the future. Get a thorough qualification for doing business expeditiously, systematically and safely. In a word—get a thorough business education. There are numerous places and ways for doing this, but we know of no better facilities than are furnished at some good business college. All who attended the late fair in this city must have been favorably impressed with the beautiful specimens of penmanship, exhibited by the London Commercial College. Prof Mann is a master of his profession and an honor to our city, and has certainly proved himself the champion penman of Canada. He was awarded the first prize for his work, and he richly deserved it. We know, furthermore, by personal experience and observation, that it is not in penmanship alone that this college excels, but that in all its other departments the course is in highest degree satisfactory and thorough. The admirable system of actual business training which is carried out, imparts such a knowledge of business transactions and forms as can be acquired in no other way. We would therefore say to all our young readers: "If possible make the necessary arrangements and spend a few months in taking the admirable business course of this College, and we doubt not that many of you will in future years feel to say as was said by one man at the fair. In speaking of having sent his son to the college, he asserted that he was fully convinced that it was the best investment that he had ever made."—Advertiser.

WHAT SHALL THEY DO.—Who? Why, the young men. In our business operations, we should never be ignorant of the true course of our affairs, and we can only be in possession of the requisite knowledge from having conducted our business systematically and with the utmost precision. No man is capable of doing this, however, without long years of practice accompanied with innumerable failures or by having gone through training which has accomplished the same purpose in shorter time. Everybody and especially every young man and woman, should improve every opportunity that presents itself for securing practical knowledge, and to those who are prepared to do so, there is probably no surer means available than taking a course in a good finishing school or business college. Of these institutions, we feel confident there is none better or more efficient than the one located in London. It must have been evident to all good judges who attended the late fair, that the specimens of penmanship executed at this college by Professor Mann, far excelled in beauty of design and skill of execution, any and all other which were exhibited on that occasion. But it is a well known fact, that the college also bears a most excellent reputation for the thoroughness of the instruction imparted in all its departments. Come, then, and spend your winter months there. It will cost you much less for board than in any other city, and we feel assured that you cannot acquire as much really useful knowledge in the same time at any other place.—Prototype.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied, to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped itself by magic, the bounds of a separation, and coupled by electric wires, can converse together at moneidury will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Fenian President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to irritate the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to it is eliminate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvellated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig wealth for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. SUBSCRIBING FOR PAPERS.

Winter is the usual season of the year for renewing subscriptions to newspapers periodicals, and, therefore, the following reflections may be found reasonable:—

1st. In selecting a family paper, even more than in securing good seed for a farm, it is necessary to "get the best." To sow the minds of the family with tares, is the worst husbandry which any father of a family can practise, but a profane, infidel, or even carelessly conducted paper is sure to do this in the most effectual way. As the family-paper is, to a very great extent, will the family be; and papers that admit immoral or infidel articles on advertisements are almost sure to mislead the the family that reads them.

2nd. It therefore evidently behoves every father of a family to consider carefully the most important subject—important for himself but far more important for those that are dearest to him; and if he is at present taking in a paper of a low, reckless style of morality to cut off without hesitation, and substitute a better. And how neighborly for one who takes a really good paper to induce the families around him to take it also!

3rd. In this connection, the MONTREAL WITNESS and CANADIAN MESSENGER may be confidently recommended as containing wholesome, entertaining, instructive and elevating mental food in great variety, without any admixture of poison. Nor is it only for choice reading matter that the Witness is celebrated. It stands in the first-class as a news and commercial journal.

For those who can afford to take a magazine, the NEW DOMINION MONTHLY, issued from the same office, but containing entirely different matter from the WITNESS and MESSENGER, and ornamented with engravings, one of them a fashion-plate, can likewise be confidently recommended.

The terms of the above publications are as follows:—DAILY WITNESS, $3; MONTREAL WITNESS [SEMI WEEKLY] $2; WEEKLY WITNESS, $1 per annum. Postage payable by receiver at his office.

CANADIAN MESSENGER, (eight pages) twice a month, 37½ cents per annum, or 7 to one address for $2.

THE NEW DOMINION MONTHLY, $1 50 per annum, or to a club of 5, $6.

THE MESSENGER and DOMINION MONTHLY being periodicals, have to be post paid by the publishers. All are payable in advance, and stop when the subscriptions expires, unless previously renewed.

The circulation of these newspapers is very large, and consequently they offer an excellent medium for unobjectionable advertisements, which are inserted on moderate terms.

All orders, communications and remittances are to be addressed to

A MYSTERY
AT
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As I entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shirted,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Boots and Shoes!'
'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down dejectedly,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely sought to me what people's goods you sell!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them,
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me thus to purchase
WHITE & McCULLAGH'S
Matchless Boots and Shoes.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are strong, undeniable and incontestable facts sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound presented after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Brewstown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Cosseon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Henry, of Pagasse, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and in new well? Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞ Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempf, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

DR. A. TRASK'S
MAGNETIC OINTMENT!
CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—"I have tried Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of Inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test true and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Jelling, of Knoxville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT

[illegible] the most astonishing cures. As quick as [illegible] are the changes the body undergoes after the use of this truly WONDERFUL MEDICINE.

Every Day an Increase in Flesh and Weight is Seen and Felt.

Scrofulous, Consumptions, Syphilitic, cancerous and healthy tainted Venereal, in its many forms; Glandular diseases; Ulcers in the Throat, Mouth, Tumors, Boils, Blotches, Fever Sores, Scaldhead, Erysipelas, Rose or Black Spots, Worms, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Scurfiness, Leprosy, Mercurial Diseases, Mercurial Affections, Sore Eyes, Diseases of the Womb, and all Wasting and Painful Discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all [illegible] by the use of mercury, are within the terrible range of RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and a few days' use of it will prove to any person using it the truth of our assertions.

It is only from the Sarsaparillian Resolvent that all kinds of mercurial poison, in the cure of Chronic Rheumatism, Constitutional Skin and Syphilitic Diseases, has it the only positive cure been found. Ulcerations in the throat, Mouth, Tumors, and Wasting Diseases, Ulcers, Fever Sores, Scaldhead, Erysipelas, Rose or Black Spots, Worms, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Scurfiness, Leprosy, Mercurial Diseases, Mercurial Affections, Sore Eyes, Diseases of the Womb, and all Wasting and Painful Discharges, Night Sweats, Loss of Sperm and all [illegible] by the use of mercury, are within the terrible range of RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and a few days' use of it will prove to any person using it the truth of our assertions.

Send a stamp to RADWAY & CO., No. 87 Maiden Lane, New York, and get a book of 100 pages, containing advice, and many certificates of cures. Sold by druggists.

17 YEARS

[illegible] BODY are the [illegible] that perpetuate social [illegible]. Diseases all arising from WASTING INCREASE, either MALE or FEMALE, of the [illegible], or [illegible] whether Locomotor Ataxia, Impotency, Impediments of every kind, or from violence of "Self-Abuse," from the Genital Glands, or Venereal disease, [illegible] or, in short, from any cause whatever, [illegible] RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent, and the [illegible] restored, and the ruptured organs healed.

THE TRUE THEORY OF CURE.

RADWAY'S Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies the system, through the blood, nerve, sweat, and structure-building constituents, with Tissue-making Principles, Heat or Chyle, and Life-Sustaining elements. All of its constituents are scientific, purifying, and regenerating. Repairs, Heals, Restores, and Arrests Decay and Waste, the peculiar [illegible] of Decay and Corruption. CONSUMPTION, SWELLING, DROPSY, SYPHILIS, CANCER, TUMORS, &c., are all of a scrofulous constitution, and as such are within the curative range of Sarsaparillian Resolvent.

That Scrofula, by whatever name designated, is a result of defects from the blood, indeed or caused by Chronic Inflammation. That those depositions rise from the blood to poor, weak, watery, unnatural building to sustain in proper action [illegible] or from the presence of some virus or poison in the blood, as Mercury, Cutaneous, Corrosive Poisons, which the corrective Qualities of Mercury or other agents given in medicine and which occur largely in the common advertised Sarsaparillas, ARE ARRESTED OR DRIVEN BACK FROM THEIR NATURAL CONDITION.

Just unless the repairs or nutriments are supplying those whose systems that decomposition is still subversive, and the powers of life become exhausted.

2. That the dying body cannot be sustained on any treatment of medicines that exhausts the system, or fails to nourish the blood, the only medium through which the vital forces are preserved, and on which the growth of the body depends.

3. That Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent supplies a vital power lacking possessed or known in Chemical Science, which has been brought to such a perfect system of cure, is exhibited as follows:

1. The first power in assimilating the food in its first stage of digestion in the process of digestion, by [illegible] and style with the nourishing elements of blood, separating from these liquids refuse and inert quantities being they are taken up by the lacteals and are formed into blood. Here we see that by its wonderful power it restores the system with the very essences or principle that forms the vital powers of the body, and its operation upon the blood in its primitive and complete condition, separates every atom of refuse material or element, out of which the virus of disease is formed.

2. That the blood thus prepared, and supplied with [illegible] naturally by proper [illegible], becomes strong, [illegible] and healthy, and leads to [illegible] power [illegible] through the Sarsaparillian Resolvent [illegible] the vitality of the body with sound and healthy blood. Here we see that by its wonderful strengthening [illegible] Resolvent exerts on the blood and juices of the system, that no virulent [illegible] or poisons will exist for which Deposits are [illegible].

3. That the vitality which the Sarsaparillian Resolvent [illegible] and consequences [illegible] powers through all Blood, Breast, Urinal, and other fluids, preserves the constituent [illegible] of each [illegible] organ, establishing functional harmony throughout the system; through its action and power over the Secretions, the Liver secretes its natural [illegible] of bile; the Kidneys [illegible] the Lungs carbon; [illegible] that this wonderful medicine not only establishes health in a sick body, but preserves the system in health.

4. Here is shown the principle on which disease is formed, as well as the only possible theory of cure, we claim that the range of cure of the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is unlimited, as that every [illegible] that is of a Chronic, Scrofulous or Organic [illegible], is properly within its special range.

in this [illegible] consists in the selection of ingredients containing curative and nourishing properties in such [illegible] and general accord with each [illegible] in a condition of disease and [illegible] generally, the decline of [illegible] with the combination of several ingredients that form the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

If the constituent of Cayenne was exhausted from the atmosphere air, life would become extinct. So, when the blood becomes exhausted of its vital [illegible] it [illegible] by [illegible] and diseased humors, depositing [illegible] and diseased humors in the body, and the elements of decay and death [illegible] changes. Its [illegible] Sarsaparillian Resolvent [illegible] to the blood and general system when [illegible] is to the atmospheric air; it supplies the life principle, and enables the blood to hold in solution all its principal constituents.

DAILY CHANGES

take place, for as the sarsaparillian increases the strength and purity of the blood, all deposits are [illegible] and where there are tubercles formed in the lungs, the further deposits are arrested, and others that are established or forming dislodged, expelled, and restored to the position of the diseased lungs restored, and the consumptive, scrofulous subject receives good, if not sound health.

BLIND LADY CURED.

[illegible], a commercial traveller, in Canada, [illegible] Leg. Bleeding from the [illegible] cured under date of April 17, last, from [illegible].

The SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT is in great demand, and [illegible] wonders. Mrs. Mount, of Strathroy, [illegible] says: "I am a lady whom a woman WAS BLIND, but by the use of the SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT, one sure eye is restored, and the other is [illegible], but does not wish to be bothered with [illegible]. Illustrate call to see [illegible] case is regarded as wonderful [illegible]."

Mr. [illegible], of Toronto, [illegible] says: "I can conscientiously recommend [illegible] as a person who [illegible] Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent, as it [illegible] powerfully on the blood, and that all may take it knowing [illegible] sound and healthy."

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions and equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The composition of this extraordinary medicine is a subject of considerable importance to the sufferer, which is only surpassed by the importance of a perfect knowledge of its virtues. Innumerable cases of scrofulous disease, of the most malignant character, and apparently incurable, have been perfectly and cured by its powerful and searching influence, and hundreds, who for years have been tortured by the excruciating pains of Rheumatism, have been relieved by the powerful antidote. The public may rest assured that no reasonable expense or exertion will be spared to maintain the reputation which this remedy has acquired, and to render it worthy of the confidence of the afflicted.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unsuspected enemy of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of carbuncles or fatal diseases, without exciting a thought of its presence. Appearing to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into sore or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla in admissible, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find instantaneous relief, and, at length, cure, from the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pustule, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other evidences or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Tic, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various grievous sufferings of the mucous or and nervous systems.

Syphilitic or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a less time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine, but long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaints. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of corrosive matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, which arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does it does always,—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cases are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action,—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstruction which causes it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally sufficient.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pulsation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent dose to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous when no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

[This cut represents Mr. O. A. Colby's Mill at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by JAMES LEFFEL, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Molay Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c. &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

Peterboro, October 7th, 1868. -ly

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & HUNT, Conway P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Madoc, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 5th, 1867.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the spine, which gradually during the spring of 1867, continued to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on the, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, and employ, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the testimonials, given by the Chamberlain Medicine Co., in pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel that weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try The Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOHERTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WEBB, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doherty for the last three years, and is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I heard that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Scrofulous Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 8th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co.: Sirs, I am only doing a acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having labored under a severe form of Scrofula, from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in tumors on my hands and arms; sometimes it settled in my throat and destroyed my voice. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my neck and face with sore scabs, which was pronounced by physicians the worst form of Scrofula. I was under the treatment of the best physicians, but without much relief from any therapy. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was induced to read in the Record Republican of the cures effected by your Sarsaparilla, and I have been prevailed upon to try it. I have been using it for about six months, and must almost three bottles. Now my health is restored, my skin is clear, and I am entirely free from scabs. I am well before that I feel I am not saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the greatest of the age, and remain ever gratefully,

Yours,

The Best in the World!
THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.
$1,500 Cash. For 1869. $1,500 Cash.
A Valuable Premium for all.
This splendidly illustrated weekly journal of POPULAR SCIENCE, MECHANICS, INVENTION, ENGINEERING, CHEMISTRY, ARCHITECTURE, AGRICULTURE and the kindred arts, enters its TWENTY-FIFTH YEAR on the first of January next, having a circulation far exceeding that of any similar journal now published
THE EDITORIAL DEPARTMENT of the Scientific American is very ably conducted, and some of the most popular writers in this Country and Europe are contributors—Every number has 16 imperial pages, embellished with fine Engravings of MACHINERY, NEW INVENTIONS, TOOLS FOR THE WORKMAN, FARM AND HOUSEHOLD, ENGINEERING WORKS, DWELLING HOUSES, PUBLIC BUILDINGS.
A journal of so much intrinsic value, at the low price of $3 a year, ought to have, in this country, A MILLION READERS.
Whoever reads the Scientific American is entertained and instructed, without being burdened with hard words or dry details.
TO INVENTORS AND MECHANICS.
This journal is of special value, as it contains a weekly report of all Patents issued at Washington, with copious notices of the leading AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN INVENTIONS. The Publishers of the Scientific American are the most Extensive Patent Solicitors in the world, and have unequalled facilities for gathering a complete knowledge of the progress of Invention and Discovery throughout the world; and with a view to mark the quarter of a century, during which this journal has held the first place in Scientific and Mechanical Literature, the Publishers will on January first the large and splendid Steel Engraving by John Sartain of Philadelphia, entitled:
"MEN OF PROGRESS—AMERICAN INVENTORS,"
the plate costing nearly $4,000 to engrave, and contains nineteen likenesses of Illustrious American Inventors. It is a superb work of art.
Single pictures printed on heavy paper, will be sold at $10, but any one subscribing for the Scientific American the paper will be sent for one year, together with a copy of the the engraving, on receipt of $40. The picture is also offered as a premium for clubs of subscribers.
$1,800 CASH PRIZES
In addition to the above Premium, the Publishers will pay $1,500 in CASH PRIZES for lists of subscribers sent in by February 10, 1870. Persons who want to compete for these prizes, should send at once for prospectus and blanks for names.
Terms of Scientific American, one year $3.00; six months, $1.50; four months, $1.00 To clubs of 10 and upwards, terms $2.50 per annum. Specimen copies sent free. Address the Publisher
MUNN & Co,
37 Park Row, New York.
How to get Patents.—A pamphlet of Patent Laws and instruction to Inventors sent free.

New Method of Washing Clothes
Without Labor.
"THE DOMINION"
Steam Washing Boiler.
THIS Washing Boiler operates upon purely scientific principles. It is self-acting, and dispenses entirely with labor and the wear of clothes. The hot suds and steam, by the action of fire, are driven up through the chambers, poured upon the clothes, and forced through the fabric with astonishing rapidity, cleansing it perfectly without rubbing. It has been thoroughly tested, and pronounced unequalled as a clothes washer by those who have used it. All fabrics, from the finest laces to the best blankets, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the washboard. For flannels it is invaluable, as the rubbing, rolling and pressing process must necessarily full them more or less. It is truly a labor and clothes-saving invention Washing will no longer be a hardship, and washing-day a terror and dread to housewives. The invention can be used in any boiler, and the low price of the article places it within the reach of every family.
Ladies are requested to give it a trial, and if it don't give satisfaction, to return it.
The Boilers can be had at the stores of THOMAS LANNIN and JAMES STEVENSON and from the undersigned, who have purchased the right for the County of Peterborough.
JAS. McFADDEN.

Poetry.

THE PLEDGE.

BY THE REV. J. PIERPONT.

Thou sparkling bowl! thou sparkling bowl!
Though lips of birds thy brim may press,
And eyes of beauty o'er the roll,
And song and dance thy power confess,
I will not touch thee; for there clings,
A scorpion to thy side, that stings!

Thou crystal glass! like Eden's tree,
The melted ruby tempts the eye,
And, as from that, there comes from thee
The voice, "Thou shalt not surely die."
I dare not lift thy liquid gem,
A snake is twisted round thy stem!

Thou liquid fire! like that which glowed
For Paul upon Melita's shore;
Thou'st been upon my guests bestowed,
But thou shalt warm my house no more,
For wherever thy radiance falls,
Forth from thy heat a viper crawls.

What, though of gold the goblet be,
Embossed with branches of the vine,
Beneath whose burnished leaves we see
Such clusters as poured out the wine!
Among those leaves an adder hangs!
I fear him! for I've felt his fangs.

The Hebrew, who the desert trod,
And felt the fiery serpent's bite,
Looked up to that ordained of God,
And found that life was in the sight;
So, the worm-bitten's fiery veins
Cool, when he drinks what God ordains.

Ye gracious clouds! ye deep cold wells!
Ye gems, from mossy rocks that drip!
Springs, that from earth's mysterious cells,
Gush o'er your granite basin's lips,
To you I look; your largess give,
And I will drink of you, and live.

EYES OPEN.

'Our minister said in his sermon last evening,' said Mrs. Beach, the wife of a prosperous wholesale dry-goods merchant on Market street, as she dusted her mantle of porcelain and marble on Monday morning, 'that he who wanted to be good must be on the constant lookout for opportunities, that God does not find our work and bring it ready fitted and prepared to our hands; but he spreads the world before us and we are able to walk through it as Christ and his apostles did, with eyes open, looking for the sick and suffering, the poor and oppressed.'

'Now I am certain,' continued the lady, as she replaced a marble Diana in the centre of the mantle,' I should like to do some good every day—one feels so much better when they go to rest at night; and I'll just keep my eyes open to day, and see if I come across any opportunities that under ordinary circumstances I should let slip.'

Half an hour later Mrs. B. was in the nursery with the washerwoman, who had come for the clothes.

'I wish, Mrs. Simms,' said she, as she heaped the soiled linen into the basket, "that you would get Tommy's aprons ready for me by Wednesday; we are going out of town to remain until Saturday, and I shall want a good supply on hand for such a careless little scamp as he is.'

'Well, I'll try, ma'am,' said the washerwoman. 'I've got behind hand since Sammy got the whooping cough; but now he's better I must try to make up for lost time.'

'Has he had the whooping cough? Poor little fellow. How old is he?' questioned the lady.

'And Tom is four,' mused the lady.—'Look here, Mrs. Simms, won't you just open the lower drawer of that bureau, and take out those four green worsted dresses in the corner? Tom's out grown them, you see; since last winter, but they're almost as good as new. Now, if you want them for Sammy, they'll do without altering, I think.'

'Want them, Mrs Beach!' answered the washerwoman, with tears starting in her eyes; 'I haven't any words to thank you or tell you what a treasure they will be.—Why, they will keep the little fellow warm as toast all winter.

'Well, I'll place them on top of the clothes,' said the lady smiling to herself as she thought, 'My eyes have been open once to-day.'

Not long afterwards Mrs. B. was on her way to market (for she was a notable housekeeper) when she met a boy who had lived a short time in her family, the year before, to do errands, wait on the door, &c. He was a bright, good natured, merry faced boy, and had been a favorite with the family, and Mrs. B. had become interested in him; but this morning she was in quite a hurry, and would have passed the child with a cordial but hasty 'How are you, Joseph, my boy? Do come and see us,' had it not struck her that Joseph's face did not bear its usual happy expression. She paused as the memory of last night's sermon flashed through her mind and she asked 'is anything the matter with you, Joseph?

The boy looked up for a moment, with a half-confiding expression, into the face of the lady; the latter triumphed. 'Mr. Anderson's moved out of town,' he said, pushing back his worn but neatly brushed cap from his hair: 'so I lost my place, and little Mary's sick, and that makes it bad just now.'

'She is down,' answered Mrs. B. her sympathies warmly enlisted; but eager mind Joseph, I remember, only night before that my brother said he would want a new errand boy, in a few days, for his store, and he will give a good one two dollars a week. Now, I'll see him to-day and get the situation for you if you like.'

The boy's face brightened.

'I should be so glad of it, Mrs. Beach.'

'And see here, Joseph, I am going to market and perhaps I can find something nice for little Mary.'

The lady remembered that Joseph's mother, though a poor seamstress was a very proud woman, and felt that this would be a delicate way of presenting her gift.

So she found some delicate pears and grapes and a nice chicken to make some broth for Mary, who, as she learned, was ill with a fever, before she proceeded to do her own marketing.

But it was a pity that the lady did not see Joseph as he sprang into the chamber where little Mary lay moaning on her bed while her mother sat busily stitching in one corner, and hold up the chicken and fruit, crying, 'Good news! good news! I've got all those nice things for Mary, and a place at two dollars a week!

It was evening, and Mrs. B. sat in the library, absorbed in a book, when she heard her husband's step in the hall. Though the morning had been so pleasant, the afternoon was cloudy, and the day had gone down in a low, sullen, penetrating rain.

Now Mrs. B. loved her husband dearly, but he was not a demonstrative man, and the poetry of their married life had settled into a somewhat matter of fact existence. But her heart was warm to-night—warm with the good deeds of the day, and remembering her resolution of the morning, she threw down her book and ran down stairs.

'Henry,' said the soft voice of his wife, 'has the rain wet you? Let me take your coat for you.'

'Thank you Mary, I don't believe I am anywise injured, but you may help me just for the pleasure of it;' and he stood still while she removed the heavy coat with all the softness of touch and movement which belongs to a woman. She hung it up, and then the husband drew her to his heart with all the old lover tenderness.

'You are very thoughtful of me, my wife,' he said.

And there was music in Mrs. B.'s heart as she went up stairs—music set to the words 'Eyes open! eyes open!'

MASONRY.

This theme is worthy the contemplation of the great, the good and the wise, whether they belong to the ancient Order of Masons, or view it from a different stand point. Independent of the mysteries which encircle our Order, its antiquity should command itself to all who are willing and desirous to investigate the Truth, for the Truth's sake. Masonry again commends itself to the attention of all men, because it is the only human institution which has come down the stream of time from the most remote antiquity, bearing with it LIGHT AND TRUTH, to shine upon the pathway of man.

It is true, we have many ephemeral associations, endeavoring in many respects to imitate our excellent Order, but these institutions are like the flowers which open with the morning's eye, diffuse all their fragrance through the day, and when the day closes, having performed their mission the night of death comes, and their loveliness and usefulness are clouded forever. Not so, however, with Masonry; she stands, in the dignity of her manhood, as she stood fifty-eight centuries ago, with no mark of age upon her brow, and with all her principles unchanged, unaltered and unabridged. She stands clad in the beauty of perpetual innocency, as beautiful and chaste as she did, when the Great Architect of the Universe proclaimed:—"Let there be light, and light was."

It was then the heaven born mission of Masonry commenced her glorious career.—Light diffused itself everywhere. The world was formed, but yet a blank remained until God created man after His own image and invested him with TRUTH, as the twin sister of LIGHT. Man, therefore, was the first divinely formed piece of architecture, so perfect that God pronounced the man after God's own heart, in contemplating his own formation of a never dying soul encased within a mortal body, [illegible] eloquently and truly [illegible] fearfully and wonderfully made.

This wonderful piece of [illegible] in which he can read the [illegible] God is said to [illegible] the moral law of living [illegible]. To him was given a system and [illegible] by which he could contemplate the attributes of Deity—his own immortality—and the duties appertaining to life. We look back upon the past fifty-eight centuries with mingled emotions of pleasure [illegible] sadness. Here and there along the pathway of time we find some Masonic principle fully developing itself—again, the same principle sinking into obscurity. But it was reserved for the wise King of Israel not only to collect and develop, but to concentrate all these principles at the erection of the most magnificent Temple ever erected on earth.
This Temple was built on Mount Moriah twenty-eight centuries since, and one thousand years anterior to the Christian religion. From that period to the present time Freemasonry has existed in an organized form—which neither the revolution of governments nor the crumbling of thrones, nor the dying out of empires, could annihilate or destroy. By the power of its own omnipotence, by the harmony and beauty of its moral-ying principles and by the heart ennobling feeling, which thrill through its membership, she proclaims to the world, God, with the blessings and prayers of the widow and [illegible] and the approbation of their own [illegible] as they labor for the welfare of the Craft, its principles and its perpetuity.—Keystone

Flowers and their Missions.

A hanging plant at a window is a sign of gentleness and grace inside. No bad people hang plants in their windows. Beauty never assimilates with badness. No evil spirit can go through a window where there is a flower. They avoid flowers as Satan does the fresh of the cross. Show me the poorest hovel with a plant in its window, and I will show you a home of that fond goodness and gentleness, although clad in the rags of poverty. I have seen, in my walks about town, perhaps in the fourth or fifth story of some mercantile building, a little plant set out upon the high window ledge. I always stop and say good morning to that plant and its owner. I came very near hugging a horse the other day on Clark street. He was attached to a buggy and standing near the sidewalk. In front of him was a cart load with flowers, into which this horse would bury his head, sniffing the odors without injuring a plant or disturbing a petal. 'And, as I stopped and said to the horse "Good morning, my dear fellow, I wish you had a human soul in you, so that we could talk to each other,' I wondered if he and the flowers did not talk together in their own sort of way. I would trust that dumb brute where I wouldn't trust a man who is not fond of flowers. I cannot conceive of the composition of that man who dislikes flowers. I believe they have the most graceful offices in the economy of nature. I do not believe the smallest violet which blossoms in the wood, or the tiniest flower which grows on the most distant prairie, was [illegible] at a purpose by Him who used them more than all else in his teachings to man. They go with us from the cradle to the grave. They brighten and bless the sick-room. They crown the marriage feast. They accompany us to the long rest, and they blossom over us when we are gone. Their breathe is magical.—The perfume of a rose will [illegible] all a long buried memory you had supposed to be dead forever. A little anemone you stumble upon in the woods will set in motion a train of thought carrying you back to scenes you had forgotten. A withered rose leaf, or a pressed dud, is a connecting link which makes life more beaut

THURSDAY, JANUARY 6, 1870.

ECUMENICAL COUNCIL.

This celebrated Council of Bishops has now been in session several weeks, and only the preliminary arrangements seem to have occupied their attention. Seven to eight hundred Bishops are present; of these about 300 are Italian Bishops. So that making due allowance for discussions and contentions among the Bishops from France, Spain, Austria, America and other places, the Pope will be able to control the Council by his Italians voting as one man.

Correspondents of English newspapers say that all things are so arranged that there can hardly be free discussion in the Council, and the Latin which all must use in their speeches, and documents has to be revised by the church, so that in all probability the force of opposition to papal encroachments may lose in this wise revision of the language of each.

Several of the sittings are held with closed doors, should this system prevail nothing short of a complete rupture can ever reach the outer world, and that way the apparent unity of the Church may be preserved for a season. The Austrian Bishops do not enter into the work as harmoniously as the others do. It is also rumored that there is a silent effort being made to smuggle through the dogma of the Pope's Infallibility, while there is a strong desire on the part of many to prevent it.

There is no possibility, it is said, of any subject being introduced without the knowledge and consent of the Pope, and he then can prohibit its discussion.

The correspondent of the London Times thinks that the temper of many of the Bishops may add fuel to the flames, and cause no small stir. These are all surmises, not at all likely to occur, as there will be great watchfulness to prevent any thing being introduced that might cause disaffection on the part of any member. In all probability the Bishops will return to their own countries again, if not convinced, at least afraid to speak a word against the doings of the Council.

TOWN ELECTION.

W. H. Scott, Esq., was reelected Mayor by a majority of 14.

The Poll stood, North Ward, Scott 79; Chambers 94.

Centre Ward, Scott 73; Chambers 24.

East Ward, Scott 91; Chambers 81.

South Ward, Scott 43; Chambers 73.—Total for Scott 286. Chambers 272.

Councillors:—South Ward, A. Smith 73; J. Ryan 42.

East Ward, R. A. Morrow 89; J. F. Denaistoun 84; Sydney Smith 2.

North Ward, A. Rutherford 98; W. H. Wrighton 78.

R. A. Morrow and A. Smith are new men, and will no doubt be reliable men.—Mr. Smith is a man of good business habits; and Mr. Morrow a young man of promise, and considerable property. Mr Denistoun would also have made a good Councillor.

The excitement over the Mayoralty was very great; a good many felt like work on both sides. Mr. Chambers although defeated, got a respectable vote indeed.

In the Town Hall about four o'clock the people got a little boisterous, but with the exception of a little wooling, there was no harm done.

TOWNSHIP ELECTIONS.

In Otonabee, Jas. Millar, Esq., is elected Reeve; and T. Blizard, Esq., Deputy Reeve. Messrs. John Millar, John Mather and Wm. Kindred Councillors. The following is the vote:—For Reeve, Jas. Millar 229, Jas. Anderson 176; For Dep. Reeve, Thos. Blizard 223, H. H. Burnham 176. Councillors, J. Millar 343, Wm. Kindred 218, John Gillespie 153, Jas. Stuart 153, John Mather 189; R. H. Matchett, (withdrawn.)

BELMONT.—W. W. Armstrong, Reeve; and Wm. Burgess, Robert Sloane Mr. Halcomb and Young were reelected,

NORTH MONAGHAN.—Messrs. Geo. Birney, Geo. Tully, W. Robson and R. Lang, all old men, were elected.

DUMMER.—T. G. Choat, elected by a majority of 22.

The Councillors are John Kidd, Alex. Smith, Hugh Drain and H. Spence.

MINDEN.—S. S. Peck, Esq., Reeve.—Councillors, A. Baker, Wm. Archer, Robt. Thompson and J. Mitchell.

SNOWDON.—F. Peck, Esq., Reeve. Councillors, H. Philips, J. Newel, A. Stata and W. McElwin.

DYSART.—A. McDonald, Esq., Reeve—Councillors, D. McFarlane, Wm. Illman, W. Smith and T. S. Moore.

STANHOPE.—Mr. D. Buck is reelected Reeve. Councillors not heard of.

GALWAY.—John Hunter, Esq.' of Kinmount, Reeve. Councillors not heard from.

ENNISMORE.—Jeremiah McCarthy, Esq., Reeve. Councillors, C. B. Sullivan, P. Brick, M. Costello and T. Murphy.

BURLEIGH, &c.—Dr. S.W. Clegg, Reeve. Councillors—Francis Middleton, John Young, Richard Spencer and Samuel Edgar.

It is a satisfactory indication of the good sense of the people of Burleigh, &c., to return the old Reeve. He is really an honest and judicious councillor, a trustworthy Reeve, and a man that wishes to do the best he can for the Burleigh Road people. The members of the Council, too, respect him for his honesty and straightforward conduct. He will put Burleigh, Anstruther and Chandos out of debt, and then prudent management will keep out of it.

RED RIVER NEWS.

Tuesday's intelligence is to the effect that Mr. McDougall is on his way to Canada; to there await further developments. He thinks not more than 400 have at any time taken up arms against his authority; and also that about 200 were in active rebellion. Dr Schultz, who has been very active in favour of Annexation, does not appear to be judicious in management of affairs. The Insurgents have compelled him to cease his advocacy of annexation, and have taken possession of his house, and whatever arms he may have had. Governor McTavish has also lost control of the people. The Rebels consider they have a perfect right to set up any form of government they desire, as the country is not yet under the government of Canada, nor is it under the Hudson Bay Company; hence Bruce and Riel the leaders consider their government the only existing one, and the only Legal one. The priests are represented as at the bottom of the whole matter, for fear that immigration might make a change in their affairs, not to their interest. The English and Scotch half-breeds have not joined any demonstration, more than signing the Bill of Rights.—There is no appearance of desiring Annexation to the United States; although sympathisers from the U. S. no doubt have done much, and are still at work among the malcontents. There is also some blundering on the part of the Ottawa government, they did not await the Queen's proclamation, declaring the West a part of the Dominion; and hence the uprising is not against any regularly constituted authority. They have also countermanded the payment of the £300,000 to the Hudson Bay Company, until they obtain peaceable possession of the Territory, and thus tacitly admit the claim of the Company to the Territory, which may yet complicate matters if the rebellion strengthens, and Canada should be delayed in obtaining the Country. In all probability Mr. McDougall will remain at Ottawa till spring, when another attempt will be made to get to Fort Garry peaceably. The Globe's Ottawa correspondent says there is a rumor that Mr. Athens will be asked to resign his seat in the Cabinet, in order that Mr. McDougall may resume it. But Mr. McDougall will be allowed to retain the position and emoluments to which he has been appointed, until the final result be determined.

Book Notices.

The Canadian Builder and Mechanics' Magazine comes out for January greatly enlarged and beautified. It contains four large Engravings, and a great amount of reading matter. All the Departments are edited by practical men, who are engaged in the various Trades and Professions which they write about, thereby making it thoroughly reliable in all its hints, recipes, directions for manufacturing, &c. Every trade is represented, as well as the professions of Architecture, Engineering and Surveying. The Illustrations are all first-class, and will consist of Designs for Buildings, Views of New Inventions, Machinery, Ornamental Stone, Iron and Stucco Work, &c., &c. Terms 50 cents per annum. Published monthly by DYAS & WILKENS, London, Ont.

COUNTY OF PETERBORO' DIRECTORY.—Mr. J. C. Conners, publisher of a Directory of this town and county, left a copy of it at our office. It contains a great quantity of valuable information for merchants, mechanics and farmers. The Directory is neatly got up, and will prove of interest to every inhabitant of the county.

VICK'S FLORAL GUIDE.—We have received a copy of The Floral Guide and can recommend it to all who are desirous of obtaining the best flowers.

The Law for the sale of lands for taxes has been amended. The stipend or salary of a Minister in actual connection with a church, is exempt from taxation, to the amount of a thousand dollars, and the parsonage occupied by him with two acres of land, not exceeding in all $2,000, is also exempt from taxation

A man may own several parts of lots in one municipality, not exceeding 200 acres, and the whole shall be rated and charged for statute labour as if the whole were one lot, and also against any acres of said parts in the same manner.

In reference to the sale of lands for taxes; the lands hereafter need not be sold unless so directed by the municipality at the adjourned sale, and the owner cannot buy the lands unless he pays the amount of taxes due, in full.

These amendments will save considerable amounts to the municipalities, as under the old law the owners of wild lands would not pay their taxes until the lands went to sale, and then they bought them in at a fraction of the taxes, and put the cost of advertising, &c., on the settlers.

THE PROTESTANT HOME COMMITTEE acknowledge with thanks the donations from friends herein mentioned, during the month of December, 1869:—A turkey and large quantity of cold meat, from the St. Andrew's Society meeting, per Mr. A. Hall; a friend, load of straw and turnips; Mr. T. Donnelly, load of wood; Mr. T. Robinson, quantity of carpet rags; Mr. White, Monaghan, quantity of mutton; a friend, apples, a turkey and lard; Mr. W. Laing, piece of beef; Mr. Hook, bag of potatoes; Miss Nicholls, a goose and quarter of mutton; Mr. Barnes, fifty cents; Captain Rubidge, quarter of beef; Mr. David Hamilton, of Douro, 50 lbs. of flour; Messrs. Munroe & Dawson, 100 lbs. of flour. Several members of the committee, as usual, sent extra good cheer for Christmas, in the shape of turkeys, geese, mutton, plum pudding, cakes, apples, sausages, and gifts for old and young; nor were the out-door poor forgotten; a quarter of beef, with appropriate allowances of tea and sugar, being distributed amongst them on the Wednesday proceeding Christmas day.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening there will be a meeting of the Directors of the Peterboro Literary Club in Mr. O'Donnell's office, at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is particularly requested for the transaction of important business.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

The Ontario Farmer is now published by T. & R. White, Hamilton

The Hearth and Home, for January, 1870, is an excellent number.

Jefferson Davis has been left $10,000 by an English woman.

Mr. Raskin, who sold out in North Renfrew, is to get a Collectorship in New Brunswick.

It is said that eight dollars worth of gulp was found lately in the gizzard of a California goose.

It was determined by the friends of Mr. Stanton, at Washington, to give his family a New Year's gift of $100,000.

The Victoria Warder comes to us this week enlarged. It has a very respectable appearance indeed.

President Grant received a Christmas turkey weighing 40 lbs., from his Poughkeepsie admirers.

Rev. Mr. Allen, Rural Dean of Cavan, was presented by his parishioners with a purse containing $64, during the holidays.

The Blackfeet Indians of Montana Territory, long at peace with the whites, are now on the "war path." The number about 7000.

There is an alliance formed to obtain the annexation of the City of Montreal to Ontario. It will hardly succeed.

The Christmas Tea Meeting at Springville, in connection with the Presbyterian Church, realised nearly $120.

During one week in December 5000 additional troops were sent to Ireland. This indicates fear of an attempted uprising of the Fenian brotherhood.

Wm. R. Haight, a convict in the Auburn, N. Y. Penitentiary, has fallen heir to $32,000 by the death of his mother. It is well if he does not know how to squander it.

Pork packing at Louisville closed two months earlier than last year. There is about 13,000 of an increase over last year. The total number is 186,600.

On Saturday last, Mr. Bigelow, of Port Hope, came to his death by falling down stairs in the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. R. C. Smith. He was about 83 years of age.

Messrs. Robinson & Co., of the Lindsay Post, have purchased the Port Hope Guide. The Guide will continue a staunch reform newspaper, and new vigor will no doubt be infused into it.

There was a rumor on Sunday, in Havanna, that the Cuban revolution was at an end, because of the failure of filibustering expeditions from the United States.

Spain has not yet succeeded in getting a king, and in consequence the people are looking towards forming a Republic, which has virtually existed ever since the flight of the queen.

Thomas Dixon, of the steamer "Pierpont," at Kingston, on Thursday last, stepped into the lake and was drowned, while attempting to get on board the vessel. He was intoxicated at the time.

A foolish fellow in Hamilton had a large sum of money in $20 bills in his cellar, but the water got in and reduced his bills to pulp. This is a warning to put surplus bills in the bank, or lend them to honest men who will repay them with usury.

The Boston Traveller says the population of the rural districts of New England has decreased, in consequence of the developement of resources requiring less labor; surplus laborers have therefore gone where labor was needed or to the west.

There is a prospect on foot to connect the Boston and English Channels by a canal. If executed it will be 59 miles long, 124 feet wide and 21 feet deep, available for screw-colliers and vessels of large tonnage. The estimated cost is $3,500,000.

MECHANIC'S INSTITUTE.—J. B. Dixon, Esq., M A., will deliver a Lecture on Thursday evening, 13th inst., under the auspices of the Institute. Subject: "The Tendencies of the present Century." The well known abilities of the Lecturer should ensure a full house.

FIRE IN LINDSAY.—On Wednesday evening last, Duncan's Hotel was consumed by fire, Kennedy's Carriage Shop; also a frame building owned by Mr. C. B. Robinson. The hotel and carriage shop were both insured to the amount of $800 each. Mr. Robinson had no insurance on the frame building.

An insane man named Walter McGregor, about 40 years of age, of the Township of Brock, died in the Lindsay gaol last week from starvation, having refused to take food. He was in gaol awaiting removal to an asylum at the time.

The Toronto Telegraph is very severe on the manner of Col Dennis's retreat from Fort Garry. It is said that he left in the habiliments of a squaw. And this is the noble Colonel sent to conduct military affairs at Red River, for the Ottawa Government.

The late Earl of Derby left behind him a fortune of $1,000,000 a year. It increased about two thirds of that sum in his life time, through the increase of property in Lancashire, caused by the growth of manufactures there.

In the Township of Wakefield, Lower Canada, whilst a young man named Pelliser was chopping a tree on which another was lodged, the axe glanced and hit him on the head, splitting his skull across the temple, and cutting an eye in two. It is supposed, however, that he will recover.

A Washington telegram of the 30th ult, says a petition from the Merchants of Victoria, Vancouver Island, asking for annexation to the United States, has been presented to President Grant. It is all a hoax. The people of Vancouver Island and British Columbia are in favor of annexation to Canada, and no favor is shown to the few advocates of looking to Washington, or even remaining as they are.

The Daily News, Montreal, says that a set of petty swindlers got a quantity of Provincial notes of one dimension, and set to work to tear a piece off each, sufficient when put together to make an entire bill, and yet not sufficient to destroy the old notes. This is a new way of making a "raise." The News advises parties not to take mutilated notes, as the payment may be refused.

CATARRH, in a disease which distresses us and disgusts our friends, can be instantly relieved and quickly cured by using Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor, an invaluable Remedy for all pain and inflammation. Sold by Druggists.

CONSUMPTIVES, try Dr. J. Briggs' Throat and Lung Healer. It will relieve and cure you.—For all diseases of the Throat, Chest and Lungs, nothing can surpass its beneficial effects. Sold by Druggists.

The ratepayers are, in all probability, likely to be asked for $15,000 or $20,000 for water works during the present year. We do not fully understand the merits of the scheme proposed, but suppose some one or his friend has an axe to grind, and the work of expending $20,000 would afford an opportunity for considerable expertness. We are not in a position at present to recommend any course, but we think that there should be caution in undertaking works until the matter is fully ventilated, and the exact costs estimated. There is just as great a liability to fire and to loss with water works as without, and a good steam fire engine would be more likely to be available in case of fire. Water works are costly, and when out of order, are useless. If we are to have water works we should first know the estimated cost, and next who are to construct them, and thirdly what interest is at work to induce the town to undertake their construction

Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe is about to publish, in book form, a vindication of her article on Byron. She promises to prove every assertion against Byron, and more than has been written. Mr. Henry Ward Beecher, lately lent his influence to free love, and in this case his sister is against it. She is certainly on the right side, let her assertion against Byron prove to be true or untrue.

ACCIDENT.—We understand that on Monday, while going to the election, the bolt of the sleigh on which Mr. Geo. Buck, of Otonabee, was riding, flew out, and the horses going fast at the time, when the tongue fell, the sleigh dashed round against a stump, against which Mr. Buck was thrown, and received severe injuries, but we are glad to learn not serious. Mr. Armstrong, who was also in the sleigh, got his hand slightly hurt.

SOUTH DUMMER.—The new Church erected by the Wesleyans at South Dummer, will be opened on Sunday, the 16th. inst. There will be a Tea on Monday evening, 17th. This is a fine season of the year for Tea meetings; farmers have time to attend and a little to give; and this is a good cause, to which there need be no scruples, to give of their abundance.

The following members elected to the County Council, have been reported. S. S. Peck, A. McDonald, C. Buck, J. Walton, I. Garbutt, J. W. Gilmour, J. Millar, T. G. Choate, T. Coughlan, J. Brown, W. W. Armstrong, R. D. Rogers, J. McCarthy and W. Moher. (These are old men. The new men are—C. Shaw, J. Hunter and J. Blezard. These are very safe men indeed:—There need be no fear of wrong doings by the Council of 1870.

RUNAWAY.—Yesterday, while Mr. Jas. Cameron's team was on the Market Square, and while his son, who was with the team, was getting a load of pork weighed, the horses took fright and ran away. After going round one square they were caught. Fortunately no harm was done.

The Evening Mail is the name of a new paper just issued in Ottawa. It is in the interest of the opposition, and will be of interest to the reform party. The first number contains the following sentences, which indicate the character of the Mail:

"Boldly and fearlessly we hang out our flag, upon which we have written Reform, scorning to use the thread-bare sign of "Independence," which really means "to let" or "for sale" There will be no misunderstanding in the public mind as to the course we shall pursue. A fearless outspoken journal is required at the Capital, and that we intend to make THE EVENING MAIL, or go under attempting it. All right-minded men who take this paper home with them this evening will acknowledge, when they consider calmly the condition of our country that it is in a deplorable plight, and that only by a tremendous exertion can we hope to overcome the difficulties of our situation. Being purely Canadian, we love our country with a love unspoken, and therefore we take our stand on a national basis. We do not "straddle the fence." Canadians have been too long led by the nose by political tricksters, whose nepotism has become notorious and whose selfishness is broadly apparent, making us appear miserables in England and ridiculous in the United States."

A Reform journal was much needed at Ottawa. The publishers have our best wishes for the success of the enterprise.

REIFFENSTEIN.

Never in the history of Canada has British law and usage been set at such utter defiance as in case of the unfortunate man whose name stands above. He has been made a scape-goat to bear the sins of many who, we are sorry to believe, were glad to get rid of the consequences of their mis-deeds by proxy. "Like master like man," is an old saying and one that will apply as well in this case as any other, and, if the truth in its nakedness were known, Mr. Reiffenstine would have company, as distinguished in the same line of business as he is supposed to be, in the dry dock of Carleton Hotel. We do not hold that he is innocent of the crime laid to his charge, but we contend that he should at least have the benefit of British law and justice which holds a man innocent until he is proved guilty. The facts of the case are well known and display the most violent abuse of authority by both the Minister of Justice and his satellites; and if such things are allowed, how slight are the guarantees of liberty to any one of us? As if urged by a malicious vindictiveness almost unparalelled, the obsolete process of a Writ of Extent was put in force against a man whose destruction seemed to have been pre-determined, and, when forced by its provisions to seek safety across the border, the circumstances was seized as a pretext to darken still further the picture of his presumed guilt. When, to the great surprise of his persecutors, he returned and took his place for trial, the Government Council were unprepared to go on with the case, but instead, they managed to create a formidable indictment containing some thirty-two counts, upon every one of which a protracted inquiry was held, from which the public were excluded, reviving in fact, the Star Chamber of former days. On some he was found guilty on others he was acquitted, and for each of the former enormour bail was demanded; as a consequence, through inability to meet this new style of persecution, and as an effect of the unreadiness, to call it by no worse name, of the prosecuters, he has had to submit to a lengthened term of imprisonment.

Personally we know nothing of Mr. Reiffenstein, but we do know that he is a man against whom heavy charges are laid, and who has been treated in a manner which is a disgrace to our boasted institutions, and which would deserve execrations if applied to the worst of criminals. Before the bar of public opinion all engaged in these disgraceful proceedings must eventually appear and it needs not the gift of prophecy to foretell the verdict.—Evening Mail.

The following "List of Rights," was adopted at a meeting held at Fort Garry on the 10th. of December:—

LIST OF RIGHTS.

1. That the people have the right to elect their own Legislature.

2. That the Legislature have the power to pass all laws local to the Territory over the veto of the Executive by a two-thirds vote.

3. That no Act of the Dominion Parliament (local to the Territory) be binding on the people until sanctioned by the Legislature of the Territory.

4. That all Sheriffs, Magistrates, Constables, School Commissioners, etc., be elected by the people.

5. A free-homestead and pre-emption Land Law.

6. That a portion of the public lands be appropriated to the benefit of Schools, the building of Bridges, Roads and Public Buildings.

7. That it be guaranteed to connect Winnipeg by Rail with the nearest line of Railroad, within a term of five years: the land grant to be subject to the Local Legislature.

8. That for the term of four years all Military Civil, and Municipal officers be paid out of the Dominion funds.

9. That the military be composed of the inhabitants now existing in the Territory.

10. That the English and French languages be common in the Legislature and Courts, and that all Public Documents and Acts of the Legislature be published in both languages.

11. That the Judge of the Supreme Court speak the English and French languages.

12. That treaties be concluded and ratified between the Dominion Government and the several tribes of Indians in the Territory to ensure peace on the frontier.

13. That we have a fair and full representation in the Canadian Parliament.

14. That all privileges, customs and usages existing at the time of the transfer be respected.

All the above articles have been severally discussed and adopted by the French and English representatives without a dissenting voice, as the conditions upon which the people of Rupert's Land enter into Confederation.

The French representatives then proposed, in order to secure the above rights, that a delegation be appointed and sent to Pembina to see Mr. McDougall and ask him if he could guarantee these rights, by virtue of his commission; and if he could do so, that then the French people would join to a man to escort Mr. McDougall into his Government seat. But on the contrary, if Mr. McDougall could not guarantee such rights, that the delegates request him to remain where he is, or return, till the rights be guaranteed by Act of the Canadian Parliament.

The English representatives refused to appoint delegates to go to Pembina to consult with Mr. McDougall, stating they had no authority to do so from their constituents, upon which the Council was dissolved.

Befriending Young People.

When John Wesley saw a young man in danger of falling into the share of evil associates, he did not turn the cold shoulder to him. He did not watch him sharply at a distance, and speak of his short comings to others, predicting that he was "on the high road to ruin."

He invited him to his table, and by a genial, affable manner, sought to give him good subjects, for thought, or hints conduct. Advice thus hospitably enforced was very impressive. He would draw out a young man in conversation, and learn what studies he was most dificient in, which were essential to his success, and then assist him to acquire the mastery of them.

Another most valuable way of aiding a young man whom social dangers threatened, was to make him acquainted with well disposed, religious young men, who would lead him into good paths. Then he watched over their future career with a father's interest and tenderness. Then in a very simple manner he accomplished a vast amount of good, besides preventing a world of evil.

This Christian duty of hospitality is too much neglected by Christians. They lose by inhospitality many precious opportunities of doing good and of getting good.—There is nothing that endears the heart of th. young and of the stranger more than a warm home welcome from those on whom they have no claim. It opens the heart's door wide to receive impressions of good and fills the memory with grateful remembrances.

"That Woman is a Christian if ever there was one," said a poor painter boy to me about a kind old lady who had befriended him in his loneliness and poverty. She had given him many a meal when hungry, or called him into her pleasant doorway to receive a pocketful of cakes, and once when sick, had taken him into her home and nursed him with a mother's tenderness.—That boy is a man now, but the memory of those little kindness will never fade from his heart.

If you wish to do good to the young, prove yourself indeed a generous, loving friend to them.—Sunday School Times.

IT HAS RUINED MY SOUL.

J. L. Pike, who murdered Thomas Brown and his wife at Hampton Falls, N. H., in May, 1868, when about to be hung last month, made a speech to the audience present, in which he said:—

"I don't shrink from my fate; I don't dread to die. I know how worthless my life is, and have faith in Christ for a better hereafter. But I wish to leave a warning in my last words to those who are inclined towards intemperance. It has decided my fate and ruined my soul. I entreat those who deal in intoxicating drinks, to stop that dreadful work; and oh! I implore their victims to stop before it is too late.

Alas! In our Canada, how many there are, to which those dying words can be applied; and yet, hundreds are filling dishonored graves. How long will this state of affairs continue? God only knows.—

TO THE YOUNG MEN.—London not only has the honor of containing the oldest Commercial College in the Dominion, but we believe that this Institution is also the only one which has furnished Principals and Professors for other Institutions of a similar kind.

Nobody can dispute the skill of Professor Mann as a penman, and the fact above noted clearly indicates the efficiency in the other departments of the College is fully equal to that which characterizes the department of Penmanship.

Board is always an important item in the expenses of a student, and we all know that good board is considerably cheaper here than in other cities of the Province.

Everybody should certainly have a business education, and we honestly think that those who are determined to get one cannot do better than to attend this College.—Free Press.

SUNDAY SICKNESS.

This disease is of the intermitting kind, attacking the patient by violent paroxysms, which return every seventh day. These paroxysms return only on the Lord's day, and hence is called Sunday Sickness; but by the faculty is technically known by no other name than "Dei Dominici Morbus."

2. It partakes somewhat of the nature of ague, especially as it is attended with a great degree of coolness. This coolness is first apparent early in the morning of the Lord's day; in many cases raising the patient before he has left his bed. But it begins in the region of the heart, and is attended with dullness of the head, followed by yawnings and lethargy.

3. The patient is sometimes deprived of the use of his limbs, especially the legs and feet, so that he is indisposed to walk to the house of God.

4. In some cases this attack has come upon them after they have gone to the house of God, and has been attended with yawning and slumber.

5. In other cases, there has been great uneasiness in the house of God, and a disposition to complain of the length of the sermon, though they have been known to sit very contentedly in a playhouse the night before, several hours at a time.

6. Persons affected with this disease never mourn on account of their confinement from public worship, as many afflicted with other diseases often do.

7. These persons often surprise their neighbors with their great activity and health on Monday, however unfavorable the weather may be.

8. Most of the faculty agree that there is a low feverish heat, technically called febris mundi, or fever of the world, which may be detected in these patients, during the intervening day of the week.

9. There also seems to be a loss of appetite for savory food, and a want of relish for panis vike, bread of life, which, in this case is the indispensable remedy for the disease.

10. Persons affected with this disease, generally have a disrelish for private religious exercises of the closet and reading of the Scriptures.

A "RIBBON" WARNING.

The Ribbonmen of Ulster have posted a "proclamation" on chapel doors and walls in the county of Cavan, which has caused some alarm in the district. It runs thus:—

"Whereas it has come to our knowledge that several Catholics are in the custom of having their work done by Protestant millers, artificers and others; we do hereby give notice to such parties, and all others concerned, that we have cognisance of the abuse; and, as it is punishable in no other court but ours, we do distinctly charge our officers to report the names of all Catholics who go to William Matchell's mill, of Killyconnell near Strabane, to have their work done there, or any other artificer or tradesmen, in order that we may define the amount of punishment; and we have given orders to disperse this our proclamation, in order that no Catholic may plead ignorant of our will and command. We further give notice to all heretics of every denomination, and damned Orangemen, that we have given orders, should they transgress our laws, that we we will consume them by night in their houses. Remember Wild Goose Lodge and Scullabogue Barn, and tremble. Done at our Council Chamber, 20th Nov. 1869."

The Follies of Great Men.

Tycho Brahe, the the astronomer, change color and his legs shook under him on meeting a hare or fox. Dr Johnson would never enter a room with his left foot foremost. Julius Cæsar was almost convulsed by thunder, and always wanted to get into a cellar or under ground to escape the noise. To Queen Elizabeth, the simple word "death" was full of horror. Even Talleyrand trembled and changed color on hearing the word world changed. Marshal Saxe, who met and overthrew opposing armies, fled and screamed in terror at the sight of a cat. Peter the Great could never be persuaded to cross abridge; though he tried to master the terror he failed to do whenever he set foot on one he would shriek out in distress and agony. Byron would never help any one to salt at the table, nor if any article happened to be spilt on the table, he would jump up and leave his meal unfinished.

Two gentlemen from Pembina called today on General Hancock, commander of this district, and presented him with a copy of the document transmitted to Washington by the people of Pembina, asking protection from the Sioux Indians from the British side of the border. They requested General Hancock to send soldiers to Pembina to protect the American settlers, who are now arming themselves against a probable attack from the North. Colonel Dennis also called on Hancock to-day, and had a warm discussion. He urged him to take no action based on reports published in the St. Paul papers, explaining that they came from insurgents and that there is no truth in the reports that the Sioux or any other Indians intend to trouble the Americans. General Hancock will forward all information in his possession to Washington and ask for instructions.

PARAGUAY.—The first result of the Allies in Paraguay has been the proclamation of a satisfactory charter by the Provisional Government established at Assumption. It is said the charter contains ample and liberal concession of individual rights, which leaves nothing to be desired by the most ardent well-wishers of the country. It declares all men equal before the law; grants the right of petition; prohibits any punishment except by legal process; ensures the right of public property and the tolerance of all religions. In short, it invests the Paraguyan people people with all the privileges enjoyed by the freest of free peoples.

OCEAN POSTAGE.—It appears not to be generally known that since the first of the present month the new post office order reducing the rate of postage on letters passing between Canada and the United Kingdom has been in force as follows:

If sent prepaid, by Canada Mail Packet via Quebec (Portland in Winter) or Halifax 6 cents per ½ oz weight.

If sent prepaid, via New York, 8 cents per ½ oz weight.

Letters for the United Kingdom, posted unpaid, or prepaid less than the proper rate will be charged on delivery with double the amount of deficient postage.

Kindness to Milch Cows.

Mr. Willard says, in the Utica Herald: "We have often wondered why men of naturally strong disposition, who would be shocked to see a pint of milk spilled in the milk-house, should allow quarts and gallons to be lost in kicking cows with heavy boots, striking them with stools and keeping the animals on a constant strain of nervous excitement and fear. We have no doubt that the quality as well as the quantity of milk is influenced by undue excitement and nervous agitation." It must be the experience of every one familiar with practical dairying, that cows will lessen their milk when frightened; that they will do this for days in succession if the fright be continued. It has been noticed that any unusual noise or disturbance will have an effect. Be kind to Brindle and she will reward your kindness; for docility is a quality of her nature, and needs but to have full play.

BLOWING 300 MUTINOUS COOLIES OVERBOARD.—The Inman Company's steamer "City of Brooklyn" which arrived at Liverpool on Thursday from New York, brings some additional tidings of the recent fearful mutiny on board the French coolie ship "Margaret Candar," and the murder of Captain Black-it, two passengers, and five seamen. The tragedy took place when the "Margaret Candar" was lying off Bryon Islands, becalmed, with about 300 Kasea coolies, who were all on deck at the time receiving presents, &c. Suddenly, and before the captain or any of the officers or crew could be made aware of the fact, they were set upon by the Kasakas, and the captain, two passengers, and five of the crew instantly killed. After a desperate struggle, the chief officer and the remainder of the crew managed to get below, where they were besieged by the coolies. A consultation was held and it was agreed to make a vigorous struggle for life—by blowing up the upper deck. A quantity of gunpowder was then procured, and placed close beneath that portion of the deck where the Kasakas had assembled. A train was laid, and the besieged having retired to tolerably safe distance, the chief officer fired the train, and terrific explosion occured, shaking the ship from stem to stern, and blowing up the deck in fragements. As soon had cleared away the sailors made for the deck, and found that the coolies had either been blown overboard or had jumped into the sea, as they were making for the shore in numbers. The following is a list of the killed and wounded.—Killed—Captain D. Blackett J Crest and J. B. Lathin passengers, and, five seamen. Wounded—Victor Whose, steward, and three sailors. Escaped—Charles M. Stewart, second officer, and five seamen.

ST. PAUL, MINN., Jan 4.—The Press to-day has an editorial on the Pembina news telegraphed yesterday. It says:—We have private advices from the party at and in Red River Settlement, stating that the Sioux Indians have been incited by partizans of Canada to attack the people of Pembina and St. Joseph. This conspiracy has been set on foot by some of McDougall's adherents for the purpose of retaliating upon Pembina for aid giving the rebels, and the matter is deemed of sufficient importance to have it officially laid before the authorities at Washington. This is partially corroborated by Col. Dennis, whom he claimed to have prevented a large party of Sioux from crossing the boundary and attacking Americans, and the question arises how this large party of Sioux happened to be on their way to fight Americans. It seems that their movements were controlled by Dennis' orders, for his influence could stop them. When Col. Dennis claims that he stopped them his cause was crushed, and he was a fugitive fleeing to American soil to escape from the indignation of the insurgents. His boasted merit of stopping the Sioux when his personal safety depended on it, does not atone for the iniquity of setting them in motion for the purpose of killing Americans, at Pembina. We hope these seemingly authentic reports which reach Pembina, of preparations for an Indian raid, may prove untrue. If we could believe the partizans of Canada wicked enough, we could not believe them rash enough to undo se the horrors of a Sioux raid upon our border.

A SQUABBLE FOR TERRITORY.—The governments of Portugal and Great Britain severally claim possession of the island of Bolamain—the western coast of Africa—and to certain portions of territory opposite to the island on the main land. The possessions are valuable only in connection with facilities for carrying on the slave trade. Unable to settle the question of possession themselves these governments have chosen the President of the United States as umpire. The time for filing their respective documents at the Department of State expired to-day.

A rumor, from a not very reliable source it is true, is being circulated in Montreal to the effect that Mr. C. J. Brydges, of the Grand Trunk Railway, will shortly resign, his place to be taken by Mr. Thomas Swinyard, of the Great Western Railway.

THE NEW YORK Sun of the 6th inst. pertinently remarks:

Fifty-three exchange newspapers were received in the Sun office yesterday, containing accounts of the Philadelphia fire. All but four introduced the disaster with displayed head-lines. In but two of these was a reference made to the loss of life; but all were impressed with the calamitous loss of "Over Thirty Thousand Barrels of Whiskey!" a melancholy fact which they announce in type or a large size. The Boston "Journal," printed in a city where liquors are supposed to be contraband, fixed its heading thus:

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS A WORD.

For every word in the following Certificate found untrue, after writing to the parties named, and to the U. S. Consul, at Rio Janeiro, the sum of one hundred dollars will be paid

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 28th, 1868.

Messrs. Raynaud C. Lerr & Bro:

GENTLEMEN:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Matos Pimenta (a large proprietor in the Cidade de Campos) was staying at my house, he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tonoco, who is thought a great deal of in Campos, but the fever, instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tinoco declared that there was not the slightest hope of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One tea-spoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the Relief pure on the Chest, back and wrists; three (of Radway's) Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one dessert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed, to the astonishment of every one, who witnessed the miracles of Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen
Your very obedient servant,
JOAQUIM PINTO FALCAO, Merchant.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or invention. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The almighty of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is DR. WISTER'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

PILES may be caused by anything that will irritate the lower bowels, producing a determination of blood to the rectum, as drastic cathartics, from the extensive use of which in past years the disease has become very common, habitual constipation, straining at stool, diseases of the liver, much riding on horseback, tight stays, sedentary habits, high living, living, irritating food, &c. Dr J. Briggs' Unrivalled Pile Remedy, remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction. All who have tried it do not hesitate to recommend it in the highest terms. Sold by Druggists and country Merchants generally. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway N.Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

THE SARSAPARILLA DRINKERS OF YUCATAN—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this potent, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. [Boston Commercial.

INVERTED TOE-NAIL is a very painful disease, generally the result of wearing tight shoes, and is usually accompanied with more or less inflammation, and, at times, ulceration. The great toe is the one usually attacked. At first, there is only a little uneasiness, which ceases when the shoe or boot is removed from the foot; after a time the part becomes tender or inflamed, and the corner or edge of the nail is found pressing deeply into the flesh, while the whole nail is narrow, and much arched across Ulceration eventually ensues, proud flesh appears, and the pain becomes very severe. For the sloughing of the proud flesh, healing the ulceration, and eventually curing the toe, use Dr. J. Briggs' Modern Curative, according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, Broadway, N.Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order.' They appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy. Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affection. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitchings. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N.Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

THE ŒCUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshonee Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

A MYSTERY

AT

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shifted,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's none like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'

'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me thus to purchase

Matchless Boots and Shoes.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound praised after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. Y. Miller, of Kneestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or, that of John Hosey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞ Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy the large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

DR. A. TRASK'S

MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—"I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of inflammation of the Lungs, inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trial and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subduing the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.

ALL NEW GOODS, AND THI

Packing Butter.

A few [illegible] ago, who had a [illegible] dairy of fourteen cows for sale, went for a noted butter maker to learn the secret of making a high priced article. The man came and looked over the premises and the only advice given was, you need the finest sweet, well-ventilated cellar, for storing butter, and it must be used for nothing else. Then get oak firkins, heavy hooped, air-tight and make just as handsome as the best cooper can turn them out. You need not change in your process of manufacture. This is all you have to do, and I will warrant you success.' These suggestions were at once adopted, and quick sales, large prices and heavy profits were the result. A dirty looking package will often lose if good sale. It should have a fresh, clean, sweet appearance when it reaches the customer, that will please the eye of the most fastidious. There are only a few kinds of wood that are fit to pack butter in. Wood of the ash is extensively used in some sections. It contains an acid very objectionable to butter, and should be rejected. Spruce pine and gummy woods should be shunned. They impart a disagreeable flavor to the butter. White oak makes an excellent package, but the wood should be thoroughly scraped before using. Many tradesmen interably select poor packages because they are cheap. To save a few cents on a package, they are willing to run the risk of losing a considerable sum on the butter which is to fill it. If sold immediately after packing, the loss may fall on others [illegible] buying, but should be poured into them, to soak for twenty-four hours. Then fill with strong brine for two or three days, turn out and rinse with pure cold water. Tubs after being filled should be headed [illegible] in the [illegible] fill [illegible] spaces. Then [illegible] covered with a clean piece of muslin, upon which is spread a layer of fine salt, [illegible] upon this a wooden cover. Store in a clean, sweet, well-ventilated butter cellar until ready for [illegible]

Wintering Sheep.

Mr. Quimby said he should speak with particular reference to wintering sheep. Experience had taught him the most profitable sheep (especially ewes for breeding) were those from three to five years old—would select ewes with twins, as likely to be the most profitable. Wintering sheep in the open air is not good policy, nor indeed any other farm stock. Barns should not be made too tight, as the animals will suffer by being kept too warm. Sheep should have free access to water especially in winter. Snow is not a good substitute; can keep sheep through the winter on straw and a gill of corn per day, with an occasional feed of roots. High keeping is not good, especially for sheep, but they should be kept in good heart. Always has salt in reach of his sheep. Keeps them in open sheds, where they can run in and out at will. Oats are a rich food for them. Closely connected with the question of wintering is that of improving the animal, and this can be done only by keeping over the most promising of the flock or the herd.—Report of Rochester Farmers' Club.

The Morrisburg Courier says a most distressing affair occured recently at Dickinson's Landing. It appears that a man named Moss, who for some months previous had shown symptoms of lunacy entered the house of Mrs. Brown, his sister-in-law, about midnight though one of the windows. Mr. Brown, who slept up stairs, hearing a noise below and the footsteps of a man immediately descended, armed with an iron poker. Observing the figure of a man in the hall advancing towards him, he cautioned him to move not another step at the peril of his life. The intruder paid no attention to the caution however and advancing he was struck with the poker and fearfully cut about the head. A light revealed the fact that the injured man was the brother-in-law of Mrs Brown. Medical aid was at one called in; but there is little hope that unfortunate man will never recover. Lamentable as may be the consequences of this painful occurrence, still under the circumstances no blame can be attached to Mr. Brown, who we understand is greatly affected by the result of this unhappy affair.

PITHY ELOQUENCE.—O'Connel was amazingly powerful at times; but one of his most effective displays was a silent reply to a youthful member who had made an attack upon him that was quite unique.—The almost breathless assailant was so much frightened at his own audacity, that, after a few stammering sentences, he broke down, and making various wild and and noiseless gestures, tumbled upon his seat amidst a chaos of sounds. The shouting having subsided, the Great Agitator rose and looked at the greatly agitated wight so comic a smile that uproarious laughter was the immediate result; then, shaking his head as much as to say, "the poor fellow has quite enough," he turned quietly to the speaker and began to talk about so nothing else. Better acting was never seen on any stage

PIETY AT HOME.—Religion is majestic in the State; it may be grand in the church, — in the church building a great institution, in the state swaying the destinies of millions of men. But piety looks loveliest and sweetest at home; not arrayed in her court dress, not set off in her church regimentals, but in plain, homely, week-day, work-day clothes. It is a little striking that the word piety which so often reigns in the Christian Church is mentioned only once in the English Bible, and then coupled with the admonition to show itself first at home.—

THE SNOW BIRDS.—The stormy petrel is not more truly the harbinger of rough weather to the sailor on his lonely watch than is the little brown snow-bird the percursor and prophet of the winter on whose threshold we stand. Who will not save his scanty store of crumbs through these deserted months that are coming, to scatter them with a tender charity around the door? Who will not think to hang up the dried bean pouch, not too closely picked, for these wind-tossed little dependents to pick from when the earth was buried up?—Ploughman.

The Eclipses of 1870.

During this year there will be six eclipses—four of the sun and two of the moon. Of the two herein mentioned, the first will be a total eclipse of the moon, on Jan. 16, 17, which will be invisible in the United States, but partly visible at Greenwich, England. The second will be a partial eclipse of the sun, also here invisible, and visible only to the regions within thirty degrees of the South Pole. It occurs on Jan. 31. The next eclipse, visible in this latitude, will be a partial one of the moon on Jun. 6, 1871.

SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT.

NEW PRINCIPLES OF CURE

Of All Wasting Scrofulous, and Erupting Diseases of the Eyes, Nose, Mouth, Throat, Ears, Head, Lungs, Kidneys, Bladder.

THE SKIN MADE PURE, CLEAR, SMOOTH, AND BEAUTIFUL.

Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent quickly and surely purifies the blood of all Chronic Constitutional Diseases, and proves the truth of the old adage, that Consumption and other scrofulous diseases are curable. This fact has been demonstrated in over

One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption, wherein lung in each case was destroyed, and dread up, and in over

100 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION

Dr. Radway three years since published to the world his discovery of the Bisulphuret of Chromic Acid, and proved in the most conclusive manner that Consumption and other scrofulous diseases are curable. This fact has been demonstrated in over

One Hundred Cases of Confirmed Consumption, wherein lung in each case was destroyed, and dread up, and in over

100 CASES OF SUSPECTED CONSUMPTION

Dr. Radway's theory was received by the medical Faculty of Europe and America, and was accepted by the scientific men of both hemispheres. From his text medical books have been since published by medical writers, claiming to have discovered the cause of Consumption but have failed to produce the remedy to cure. Dr. Radway was the first to advance this theory, and the first and only discoverer of a medicine that will cure. In Dr. Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent the public have a remedial agent that will cure Consumption and all diseases of the Lungs, Bronchial, Kidneys, Bladders, Wounds, Tumors, Glands, and Urinary Organs.

In all Wasting Discharges, such as Involuntary Loss of Sperm, Emissions, Weakness of the Genital Glands, Leucorrhœa, and all Uterine difficulties, Gravel, Lime Water, Brick Dust, Uric Acid, and Calculous Concretions, the Sarsaparillian Resolvent is a positive cure. In Dropsy, Diabetes, unpurified Venereal, Syphilis in its many forms, it cures when all other prescriptions fail an increase of flesh, weight, and strength is experienced. It is fat-tissue, Caloric or Heat-making. It is to the blood what oxygen is to the atmospheric air—it supplies the life principle. It swiftly procures flesh on the surface—all Scrofulous Humors, Tubercles, Letter, Rash, Flesh Worms, Sores, &c., imparting a Clear & Beautiful Complexion to all.

EVERY DAY

CERTIFICATE OF BEAUTY.

The following letter is from a highly-gifted lady, well known in the circles of our best society:—

Lafayette, Ind., Jan. 23, 1869.

I had not the confidence in your SARSAPARILLIAN RESOLVENT (having been disgusted by the last four months with BLOTCHES and PIMPLES), I received, as all agreed, by the end took TWO BOTTLES, AND NOW I FEEL (less than a day, as directed). It is not quite ONE MONTH since I commenced its use. Nothing shows to not a BLOTCH, spot, blemish, or deduction of any kind to my person.—

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice, or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

[This cut represents Mr. G. A. Colby's Mill, at Niles, Mich., driven by seven Leffel Water Wheels.]

THE Joseph Hall Manufacturing Co. manufacture Leffel's Celebrated American Double Turbine Water Wheels, the most perfect and economical water wheel in use. We are the only manufacturers who can furnish the genuine "Leffel Wheel" in Canada, as will be seen by the following certificate:

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO, Dec. 25th, 1868.

We take pleasure in informing the public of Canada, that we have sold and furnished Mr. F. W. GLEN, of Oshawa, Ontario, Patterns, Formers, Drawings, Gauges, and all other necessary information, to build our celebrated Double Turbine Water Wheel, invented by JAMES LEFFEL, and known as the "Leffel Wheel." We have also obligated ourselves to furnish the same facilities for manufacturing to no other parties in Canada. Without the information we have given Mr. Glen, no one can successfully build our wheels, and we advise parties in Canada to purchase our wheels of no other manufacturer. Mr. Glen's facilities are unsurpassed, and we feel sure that he will build a wheel that will give perfect satisfaction. We therefore commend him to the public of Canada with entire confidence, feeling sure he will manufacture a wheel in all respects equal to our own.

[Signed,] JAMES LEFFEL & Co.

WARRANTY.—We are prepared to furnish Water Wheels, Gears, Shafts, Pulleys, and all Machinery necessary to attach the Wheels to the machinery they are intended to drive; and if, after two months trial, they are not satisfactory, we will take all back, pay freight both ways, and refund any payments made to us thereon. Where parties are not satisfied with the wheel, and cannot make a change at the time without loss to business, they may run the wheel and machinery a reasonable time without charge, not exceeding one year, in order that they may make a change without injury to their business.

We call especial attention to our superior Gearing of all kinds for attaching our wheels, made light and adapted to the high speed at which the wheels run. We caution purchasers against using heavy shafting and gearing.

☞ We also manufacture all kinds of Saw and Flour Mill Machinery, including Steam Engines and Boilers, English and American Gangs, Hand-setting and Self-setting Circular Saw-Rigs, Upright and Oscillating Mulay Saw-Rigs, Gearing, Shafting, Pulleys and Hangers, &c &c. Also Shingle Machines and Jointers, Leather-Splitting Machines, Knife-Grinders, Woolen Machinery, Washington Hand Printing Presses, Gordon's Power Press, Taylor's Cylinder Press, and Blake's Patent Steam Pump.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SILLS, Conway P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

MADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Blood Opener Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshoness Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbours and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshoness Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshoness Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, brought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a prisane one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

AMERICA AND ENGLAND.

America! and England!
The rulers of the world,
O may their mighty banners
In peace be ever furled;

From age to age in friendship
May each, for ever great,
Abide; and may they never
Feel enmity or hate.

What though the restless ocean
May fiercely roll between,
What though its tide divideth
Their smiling meadows green.

What though their climes may differ;
America is sprung
Of Britain—may they ever
In friendliness be one.

And let the wings of commerce
Unite more closely still
Their lots—may each experience
True friendship, and good will Let each the hand of friendship

In fellowship enclasp:—
And never let disunion
Relax their mighty grasp.

FISHER'S GHOST.

In the colony of New South Wales, at a place called Penrith, distant from Sydney about thirty-seven miles, lived a farmer named Fisher. He had been, originally transported, but had become free by servitude. Unceasing toil, and great steadiness of character, had acquired for him a considerable property, for a person in his station of life. His lands and stock were not worth less than four thousand pounds. He was unmarried, and was about forty-five years old.

Suddenly Fisher disappeared; and one of his neighbours—a man named Smith—gave out that he had gone to England, but would return in two or three years. Smith produced a document, purporting to be executed by Fisher; and, according to this document, Fisher had appointed Smith to act as his agent during his absence! Fisher was a man of very singular habits and eccentric character, and his silence about his departure, instead of creating surprise, was declared to be 'exactly like him.'

About six months after Fisher's disappearance, an old man called Ben Weir, who had a small farm near Penrith, and who always drove his own cart to market, was returning from Sydney one night, when he beheld, seated on a rail which bounded the road—Fisher. The night was very dark, and the distance of the fence from the middle of the road was at least twelve yards.—Weir, nevertheless, saw Fisher's figure seated on the rail. He pulled his old mare up, and called out, 'Fisher, is that you?' No answer was returned; but there, still on the rail, sat the form of the man with whom he had been on the most intimate terms. Weir—who was not drunk, though he had taken several glasses of strong liquor on the road—jumped out of his cart, and approached the rail. To his surprise the form vanished.

'Well,' exclaimed old Weir, 'this is very curious anyhow,' and, breaking several branches of a sapling so as to mark the exact spot, he remounted his cart, put his old mare into a jog-trot, and soon reached his home.

Ben was not likely to keep this vision a secret from his old woman. All that he had seen he faithfully related to her.

'Hold your nonsense, Ben!' was old Betty's reply. 'You know you have been a drinking and disturbing of your imagination Aim, Fisher gone to England! And if he had a come back, don't you think we shouldn't a heard on it?'

'Ay, Betty!' said old Ben, 'but he'd a cruel gash in his forehead, and the blood was all fresh alike. Faith, it makes me shudder to think on't. It ware his ghost.'

'How can you talk so foolish, Ben?' said the old woman. 'You must be drunk surely to get on about ghostesses.'

'I tell thee I am not drunk,' rejoined old Ben, angrily. 'There has been foul play, Betty; I'm sure on't.' There sat Fisher on the rail—not more than a matter of two mile from this. Egad, it were on his own fence that he sat. There he was, in his shirt sleeves, with his arms a folded; just as he used to sit when he was a waiting for anybody coming up the road. Bless you, Betty, I seed 'im till I was as close as I am to thee: when, all on a sudden, he vanished, like smoke.'

'Nonsense, Ben; don't talk of it,' said old Betty, 'or the neighbours will only laugh at you. Come to bed, and you'll forget all about it before to-morrow morning.'

Old Ben went to bed; but he did not next morning forget all about what he had seen on the previous night: on the contrary, he was more positive than before. However, at the earnest, and often repeated request of the old woman, he promised not to mention having seen Fisher's ghost, for fear that it might expose him to ridicule.

On the following Thursday night, when old Ben was returning from market—again in his cart—he saw, seated upon the same rail, the intentional appiration. He had purposely abstained from drinking that day, and was in full possession of all his senses. On this occasion old Ben was too much alarmed to stop. He urged the old mare on, and got home as speedily as possible. As soon as he had unharnessed and fed the mare, and taken his purchases out of the cart, he entered his cottage, lighted his pipe, sat over the fire with his better half, and gave her an account of how he had disposed of his produce, and what he had brought back from Sydney in return. After this he said to her, 'Well, Betty, I'm not drunk to-night, anyhow, am I?'

'No,' said Betty. 'You are quite sober, sensible like, to night, Ben; and therefore you have come home without any ghost in your head. Ghosts! Don't believe there is such things.'

'Well, you are satisfied I am not drunk; but perfectly sober,' said the old man.

'Yes, Ben,' said Betty.

'Well, then,' said Ben, 'I tell thee what, Betty. I saw Fisher to-night again!'

'Stuff!' cried old Betty.

'You may say Stuff,' said the old farmer, 'but I tell you what—I saw him as plainly as I did last Thursday night. Smith is a bad 'un! Do you think Fisher would ever have left this country without coming to bid you and me good bye?'

'It's all fancy!' said old Betty. 'Now drink your grog and smoke your pipe, and think no more about the ghost. I won't hear on't.'

'I am as fond of my grog and my pipe as most men,' said old Ben; 'but I'm not going to drink anything to-night. It may be all fancy, as you call it, but I am now going to tell Mr Grafton all I saw, and what I think;' and with these words he got up, and left the house.

Mr. Grafton was a gentleman who lived about a mile from old Weir's farm. He had been formerly a lieutenant in the navy, but was now on half pay; and was a settler in the new colony; he was, moreover, in the commission of the peace.

When old Ben arrived at Mr. Grafton's house, Mr. Grafton was about to retire to bed; but he requested old Ben might be shown in. He desired the farmer to take a seat by the fire, and then inquired what was the latest news in Sydney.

'The news in Sydney, sir, is very small,' said old Ben; 'wheat is falling, but maize still keeps its price—seven and sixpence a bushel; but I want to tell you, sir, something that will astonish you.'

'What is it, Ben?' asked Mr Grafton.

'Why, sir,' resumed old Ben, 'you know I am not a weak-minded man, nor a fool, exactly; for I was born and bred in Yorkshire.'

'No, Ben, I don't believe you to be weak-minded, nor do I think you a fool,' said Mr. Grafton; 'but what can you have to say that you come at this late hour, and that you require such a preface?'

'That I have seen the ghost of Fisher, sir,' said the old man; and he detailed the particulars of which the reader is already in possession.

Mr. Grafton was at first disposed to think with old Betty, that Ben had seen Fisher's Ghost through an extra glass or two of rum on the first night; and that on the second night, when perfectly sober, he was unable to divest himself of the idea previously entertained. But after a little consideration the words 'How very singular!' involuntarily escaped him.

'Go home, Ben,' said Mr. Grafton, 'and let me see you to-morrow at sunrise. We will go together to the place where you say you saw the ghost.'

Mr. Grafton used to encourage the aboriginal natives of New South Wales (that race which has been very aptly described 'the last link in the human chain') to remain about his premises. At the head of a little tribe then encamped on Mr. Grafton's estate, was a sharp young man named Johnny Crook. The peculiar faculty of aboriginal natives of New South Wales, of tracking the human foot not only over grass but over the hardest rock; and of tracking the whereabout of runaways by signs imperceptible to civilised eyes, is well known; and this man, Johnny Crook was famous for his skill in this particular art of tracking. He had recently been instrumental in the apprehension of several desperate bushrangers whom he had tracked over twenty-seven miles of rocky country and fields, which they had crossed bare footed, in the hope of checking the black fellow in the progress of his keen pursuit with the horse poline.

When old Ben Weir made his appearance in the morning at Mr. Grafton's house, the black chief, Johnny Crook, was summoned to attend. He came and brought with him several of his subjects. The party set out, old Weir showing the way.—The leaves on the branches of the saplings which he had broken on the first night of seeing the ghost were withered, and sufficiently pointed out the exact rail on which the phantom was represented to have said. There were stains upon the rail. Johnny Crook, who had then no idea of what he was required for, pronounced these stains to be 'White man's blood;' and, after searching about for some time, he pointed to a spot whereon he said a human body had been laid.

In New South Wales long droughts are not very uncommon; and not a single shower of rain had fallen for seven months previously—not sufficient even to lay the dust upon the roads.

In consequence of the time that had elapsed, Crook had no small difficulty to contend with; but in about two hours he succeeded in tracking the footsteps of one man to the unfrequented side of a pond at same distance. He gave it as his opinion that another man had been dragged thither.

The savage walked round and round the pond, eagerly examining its borders and the sedges and weeds springing up around it. At first he seemed baffled. No clue had been washed ashore to show that anything unusual had been sunk in the pond; but, having finished this examination, he laid himself down on his face and looked keenly along the surface of the smooth and stagnant water. Presently he jumped up, uttered a cry peculiar to the natives when gratified by finding some long-sought object, clapped his hands, and, pointing to the middle of the pond to where the deposition of some sunken substance had produced a slimy coating streaked with prismatic colours, he exclaimed, 'White man's fat!' The pond was immediately searched; and, below the spot indicated, the remains of a body were discovered. A large stone and a rotted silk handkerchief were found near the body; these had been used to sink it.

That it was the body of Fisher there could be no question. It might have been indentified by the teeth; but on the waistcoat there were some large brass buttons which were immediately recognised, both by Mr. Grafton and by old Ben Weir, as Fisher's property. He had worn those buttons on his waistcoat for several years.

Leaving the body by the side of the pond, and old Ben and the blacks to guard it, Mr. Grafton cantered up to Fisher's house. Smith was not only in possession of all the missing man's property, but had removed to Fisher's house. It was about a mile and a half distant. They inquired for Mr. Smith. Mr. Smith, who was at breakfast, came out, and invited Mr. Grafton to alight: Mr. Grafton accepted the invitation, and after a few desultory observations said, 'Mr. Smith, I am anxious to purchase a piece of land on the other side of the road, belonging to this estate, and I would give a fair price for it. Have you the power to sell?'

'Oh yes, sir,' replied Smith. 'The power which I hold from Fisher is a general power;' and he forthwith produced a document purporting to be signed by Fisher, but which was not witnessed.

'If your are not very busy, I should like to show you the piece of land I allude to,' said Mr. Grafton.

'Oh certainly, sir. I'am quite at your service,' said Smith; and he then ordered his horse to be saddled.

It was necessary to pass the pond where the remains of Fisher's body were then exposed. When they came near to the spot Mr. Grafton, looking Smith full in the face, said, 'Mr. Smith, I wish to show you something. Look here!' He pointed to the decomposed body, and narrowly watching Mr. Smith's countenance, remarked; 'These are the remains of Fisher. How do you account for there being found in this pond?'

Smith, with the greatest coolness, got off his horse, minutely examined the remains, and then admitted that there was no doubt they were Fisher's. He confessed himself at a loss to account for their discovery, unless it could be (he said) that somebody had waylaid him on the road when he left his home for Sydney; had murdered him for the gold and bank-notes which he had about his person, and had then thrown him into the pond. 'My hands, thank Heaven!' he concluded, 'are clean. If my old friend came to life again, he would tell you that I had no hand in this horrible murder.'

Mr. Grafton knew not what to think. He was not a believer in ghosts. Could it be possible, he began to ask himself, that old Weir had committed this crime, and finding it weigh heavily on his conscience, and fearing that he might be detected had trumped up the story about the ghost—had pretended that he was led to the spot by supernatural agency—and thus by bringing the murder voluntarily to light, hoped to stifle all suspicion! But then he considered Weir's excellent character, his kind disposition, and good nature. These at once put to flight his suspicion of Weir; but still he was by no means satisfied of Smith's guilt, much as appearances were against him.

Fisher's servants were examined, and stated that their master had often talked of going to England on a visit to his friends, and of leaving Mr. Smith to manage his farm; and that though they were surprised when Mr. Smith came, and said he had 'gone at last,' they did not think it at all unlikely that he had done so. An inquest was held, and a verdict of wilful murder found against Thomas Smith. He was thereupon transmitted to Sydney for trial, at the ensuing sessions, in the supreme court. The case naturally excited great interest in the colony; and public opinion respecting Smith's guilt was evenly balanced.

The day of trial came, and the court was crowded almost to suffocation. The Attorney-General very truly remarked that there were circumstances connected with the case which were without any precedent in the annals of jurisprudence. The only witnesses were old Weir and Mr. Grafton. Smith who defended himself with great composure and ability, cross-examined them at considerable length, and with consummate skill. The prosecution having closed Smith addressed the jury (which consisted of military officers), in his defence. He admitted that the circumstances were strong against him; but he most ingeniously proceeded, to explain them. The power of attorney, which he produced he contended had been regularly granted by Fisher, and he called several witnesses, who swore that they believed the signature to be that of the deceased. He, further, produced a will, which had been drawn up by Fisher's attorney, and by that will Fisher had appointed Smith his sole executor, in the event of his death. He declined he said to throw any suspicion on Weir; but he would appeal to the common sense of the jury whether the ghost story was entitled to any credit; and, if it were not, to ask themselves why it had been invented? He alluded to the fact—which in cross-examination Mr. Grafton swore to—that when the remains were first shown to him, he did not conduct himself as a guilty man would have been likely to do, although he was horror-stricken on beholding the hideous spectacle. He concluded by invoking the Almighty to bear witness that he was innocent of the diabolical crime for which he had been arraigned. The judge (the late Sir Francis Forbes) recapitulated the evidence. It was no easy matter to deal with that part of it which had reference to the apparition; and if the charge of the judge had any leaning one way or the other, it was decidedly in favour of the acquittal. The jury retired; but after deliberating for seven hours they returned to the court, with a verdict of guilty.

The judge then sentenced the prisoner to be hanged on the following Monday. It was on a Thursday night that he was convicted. On the Sunday Smith expressed a wish to see a clergyman. His wish was instantly attended to, when he confessed that he, and he alone, committed the murder; and that was upon the very rail where Weir swore that he had seen Fisher's ghost sitting, that he had knocked out Fisher's brains with a tomahawk. The power of attorney he likewise confessed was forgery, but declared that the will was genuine.

This is very extraordinary, but is, nevertheless, true in substance, if not in every particular. Most persons who have visited Sydney for any length of time will no doubt have had it narrated to them.—Household Words.

How to Keep Our Boys on the Farm.
BY W. A. CROFFUT.

I don't see, for my part, what this country's coming to!" exclaimed my neighbor, as he dropped in on Monday evening; "so many of the best boys are quitting the farms.

Why, When I was a boy, he proceeded, warming up with the recollection, "it was considered a religious duty for one of the sons in every family to succeed to the homestead of his father; and the steadiest of his brothers pursued the same honorable calling. Now and then, a promising youth adopted a profession; but, as a rule, not to be a farmer was thought about equivalent to being a vagrant. Now how is it? Why, bless me! three quarters of our boys are deserting the shelter of the farm-roofs, leaving their fathers' acres to more patient plodders from Ireland and Germany, and cagerly seeking refuge in the strange city. What can have got into them?"

Such a state of things is surely to be deplored. The prosperity of a nation always depends on the thrift and happiness of its rural people. The sources of this dissatisfaction ought to be removed. As they are numerous, so is the remedy complex.

1. The homestead must be made more attractive.—A thrifty farmer's boys generally see that their father's house is built more carelessly and kept more slatternly than that of the city merchant. Their first unconscious inference is that fine houses are the exclusive product of the city; their next deduction—"that's the place to live."

What's the picture which they carry to leave behind when they take their flight? A house unpainted and without blinds; a barn rickety and hastening to decay; rheumatic fences, offering kindly passage to hungry horses and filthy, bony cows; in the foreground, carcasses pitched promiscuously, wagon-wheels, old iron, and infinite rubbish; in the background, a dreary waste of skinned and plundered fields! Without any expense, except a little time and taste, our farmers' homes can be embellished and rendered delightful; and only so can the best youths of this generation be induced to remain in the homesteads of their fathers.

2. Farmers must provide separate cottages for the hired men.—Do merchants generally board their clerks? Do manufacturers usually impose upon their wives and daughters the necessity of furnishing meals and beds for their begrimed and sweaty laborers from forge and loom—of serving them at table with their food, and sharing their company at the fireside? Why should the wives and daughters of farmers be expected to do this? And as long as such burden is laid upon them, will strange that farmers' sons rebel against their lot and seek a city of refuge, and that farmers' daughters set their caps for clerks, mechanics, tailors, "speculators"—any body but their schoolmates?

The "hired-help" question, and the household totally destroys the family relation. The farm-house becomes a boarding house, in which the husband is steward, the wife cook, and the workmen boarders! The employer pumps the screw; the employee screams! No well-bred woman can tolerate such a condition of things, unless her profession is pre-paid. There is much work to be done in every family, which, if well-tasks, and been elected justice of the peace, and gone to the legislature, has become thin and furrowed with drudgery, bent to a furious and never-ending rotation of scrubbing, baking, stewing, sewing—for the hired men.

This precious sentiment has prevailed long enough in America, to the astonishment of foreigners and the disgust of our own people. It is high time that every farmer with a particle of personal sensibility or independence, or with any respect for the rights of [illegible] better way. Wherever the system of separation has been tried, it has resulted in the increased thrift of the farmer, the emancipation of his wife, and an accession of comfort and self-respect to the laborers.

If Farmers must [illegible] training.—A few of the best-educated and cultured men of America are farmers, and their students soon are treading the same occupation. But such are a small proportion of the whole.

"The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings."

Farmers ought, as a class, to cultivate better manners in parlor, kitchen and field; at fireside and table. Urbanity and rustic life: it is not by accident that these words have come to signify politeness and boorishness. Only through human contact can we acquire polish, and, by lack of this [illegible] have come to the observation of the polite, manners which mark the gentleman. Integrity and benevolence are not a guarantee of politeness; these must be added to these, intercourse with well-bred people.

To recover what we have lost, or gain what we have missed, let us seek to construct a society about us, to encourage neighborhood gatherings, farmers' clubs, agricultural societies, and evening parties of every innocent kind, that may bring us in contact with others. Put this end in every cooperative farming—thousands fly to the city because they wish to "see folks." To this end also, [illegible] learn from our wives, for they are often better read and usually better-mannered than we.

3. Progressive farming must be substituted for routine farming.—Abolish the plodding system; break up traditional customs, and the boys will seek advancing scientific farming does not mean the adoption of fancy theories. It means, [illegible] the laws of Nature, and the experience of other practical farmers, how to exchange bad habits of husbandry for better ones.

Mind governs matter, and no art or profession demands for its perfect development so much general and special information, and so wide a range of subjects, as does the tilling of the soil. Yet agriculture, as commonly practiced, is [illegible] behind every other art. Farmers have studied less to master their calling than have the members of any other trade. How many thousands there are, in every State, who never see an agricultural journal or book! Such farmers lack new ideas more than they lack new implements. Their minds need subsoiling more than their [illegible]

To make farming attractive to our boys, the drudgery of routine farming must be given up and the scientific way must be taught. This is the way transition between brawn and brains. Thought is being introduced as a new lever to relieve the elbow.

[illegible] county [illegible] more agricultural knowledge than could be found in the whole West a few years ago; and it is changing the whole character of farming as an occupation. One intelligent man now can do more than a stupid hundred, and derive from it more pleasure and profit. Farm machinery is not only labor-saving; it is consequently civilizing, because it saves human toil, it

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, JANUARY 13, 1870.

BY TELEGRAPH FROM TORONTO.

Jany. 12th. 1870.

The Dominion Telegraph Company held their Annual meeting of Shareholders yesterday. About thirty gentlemen were present. The Treasurers report shows a very large falling off in the payments of each successive call, and a considerable loss in the working of the lines. There is still due to Mr. Reeve, on the old contract, $15,500, and to the new contractor, $3,200; The amount of cash on hand is $381. The Chairman pointed out the importance of pressing the work forward with vigour.

WHEN WILL IT END?

A country governed as Canada has been since the present managers got hold of the helm, must very soon go to ruin.

For many years the grossest system of corruption has characterised every undertaking of John A. McDonald's various governments.

The government buildings at Ottawa, when commenced, were estimated at about three hundred thousand dollars. Already they have cost over three millions of dollars, and they are not yet completed. Three hundred thousand dollars would hardly meet the necessary repairs in order to make them habitable.

The Intercolonial swindle has been commenced, and is likely to surpass all the corruption of the Grand Trunk and Ottawa buildings put together.

The rout that has again and again been declared impracticable has been chosen, and contractors have undertaken the work, but already it is found that the excavations necessary are impossible, unless at fabulous sums, and the contractors are now in swarms around the department of Public Works, in hopes that the system of allowing for extras, as in the government buildings, may be granted to the bankrupt contractors. Fifteen millions twice told will not complete this gigantic Bnngle.

Now, when it is well known that one third could have been saved by taking a different route, as was advocated by the opposition, the country may well ask why do these incapables be allowed to retain power one hour! Why are they not hurled from the position they have so long disgraced, and allow other men to take their place—men who are neither afraid nor unwilling to do right, and to choose the best way of doing it—even though a thousand hungry contractors should try to frighten them.

The present corrupt government has trafficked in the political capital of trading representatives, and in this way have succeeded in retaining their positions, selling themselves to do wrong for the love of office, and buying others to do wrong by bribes and promises of tempting offices. They never had a difficulty until the present, and for it they are wholly unprepared and unequal.

The Red River embroglio now takes them by surprise. They had reckoned without their host in endeavoring to annex the western territory.

John A. and Cartier had bought up everything in Canada but the Globe and a few trusty Reformers; even the renowned Howe had been purchased, and they reasoned that everything is purchasable; venal was written on the palms of their hands, and their vision was so awry that venal was on everything they saw, and hence their idea of buying Ruperts land without consulting the settlers.

They also purchased Mr. McDougall, by the glittering baubles of a throne in the far west, to desert his party, turn traitor to his former friends, sell his constituents, sell Upper Canada, sell himself in fact, all for the empty pageantry of a throne among half-breeds and Indians, on the banks of the Red River.

But alas, all his hopes are blasted. They will not have him. No, not even the half-breeds will have the traitor. He must not even enter the country. He blew his rams' horns at Pembina several weeks. He attempted to surround the place, and sent Col. Dennis to spy out the land, and fortunately a squaw took pity on him and secreted him as a papoose, and left him safe on American soil. But is this the end of the farce? No. Mr. McDougall dare not venture even under the guidance or protection of the Indian, nor even in the garb of a squaw. All is lost till spring, he says, and back to Ottawa he hastens to leave his troubles at the foot of John A. and Cartier.

Poor McDougall is now humbled, John A. knows it, and will yet humble him farther. But during all this time the rebellion is growing stronger, discontent becoming louder in its demands, and the hopes of possessing the country without the shedding of blood daily growing more slender. And still the members of the Cabinet are enjoying themselves at Ottawa.

Was there ever a set of such incompetents at the head of the affairs of any country! A few red skins in their wigwams would act with more prudence and more decision.

For all this the country has to pay dearly. McDougall's going in state to Pembina and his hasty retreat will all cost the country a round sum. The squaw's blanket in which Dennis retreated must be paid for. The country must foot the bill. Surely their cup is overflowing, and we mistake the pluck of Ontario if ere long she does not reject those political bunglers who have nearly made the country bankrupt, and are now causing it to be the mock of civilized America, of England, and of all who know anything about us. When will this end? When will such bungling cease? And when will more honest men be allowed to settle those difficulties which the present men are utterly incapable of settling or managing?

The Leader is endeavoring to show that Mr. McDougall has not vacated his seat in the Cabinet, but is still a member of the coalition. Of course it is ready for all that sort of thing to please McDonald, Cartier & Co. We suppose there is to be another double shuffle on a small scale, to keep up the farce of coalition.

Affairs look more like a collusion than a coalition just now. John A. repudiates several of the ex-Governor's acts at Pembina. He is dissatisfied with this vice regal proclamation, it is said, and with his acts generally, but then a show of agreement must be retained.

Mr. Aikens has been called to Ottawa as Mr. McDougall's successor. He must be got rid of before McDougall can be reinstated, and then what follows, will he be willing to be thus soon shelved?

Mr. McDougall entered upon the duties of the office, chose his coadjutors—very unwisely it is true—but then he did it. He set out for the setting sun too, arrived at the confines of the country, sent his adjutant-general in before him, issued a proclamation as Governor to his unruly subjects, sought for interviews with the leaders, as their Governor, and the public will hold him as having vacated his office, and thus, now, merely a private citizen.

It is true no writ has yet been issued for North Lanark, but is evident that it should have been, so that the Riding may not be without a representative in the approaching meeting of parliament at Ottawa.

Sir John, however, is anxious to kill, politically, poor McDougall. He wishes the destruction of every one who ever assumed the name of Reformers, so that there may not be the ghost of a chance of a successful opposition to all his schemes and corruption, and the present offers a very fair opportunity for the destruction of one quasi Reformer.

Every Tory paper in the Province of Ontario is casting reproach on the late Red River bunglers, as if uuiting for the destruction of the traitor who went over to their ranks.

This has been long concocted. From the very day he joined the first coalition to this day his Tory allies have been planning his destruction. In this County they were ready to vote for any candidate that would keep Mr. McDougall out of office. They do not now love him a whit better. They are delighted at his failure, and the whole party will make him the scape-goat for all their short comings. Poor Willie, who pities him!

There can be no doubt but that his seat has been vacated and given to another, but they may bolster matters up by sending Malcom Cameron west, and thus open a way for McDougall's return to office. Mr. Cameron may not accept these terms. He sees the tottering gait of the coalitionists, and now awaits the assembling of parliament to witness their dissensions and overthrow.

Their rule has been one of corruption and bungling, their only object was office, all their efforts were to retain their salaries. They have scrupled at no means to secure their ends, and the country is now desirous of a speedy change, and a change they will have at next election if not before. The next election will make a clean sweep of the coalition. They have now had a fair trial and are found just as incapable under confederation as they were before it. The change of the office of bad men does not change the men. Remarkable only for their bacchanalian habits before confederation, they are still so, and will remain so. Can the Leopard change his spots?

THE GAS AGAIN.

In the Town Council on Monday, Mr. Toole asked what was to be done in the matter of some difficulty arising between the Council and the Gas Company, about the cost of the lamp posts.

Mr. Toole had learned that the Company asked $26 for each post, but that they could be obtained at other places for far less. Indeed, he Mr. Toole, had learned that a saving of $250 could be effected by not taking them from the Company. And he therefore asked what the Council was to do.

Mr. Stevenson remarked that the Company was not acting fairly with them, and was very saucy; going so far as to tell them that the Town must come to their terms, as they were bound to do so.

He, Mr. Stevenson, found that the Town was bound by a contract with Port Hope. This contract had never been seen by this Council, and until it was seen, nothing could be known, whether the Town was bound to take the Company's posts at their price; while it would be a loss of $250 to the Town. He, Mr. S., was sorry that ever they had done anything, till they had seen the whole contracts; but they were led into it, and he supposed would have to get out of it the best way they could.

Mr. Dickson believed they were bound to take the posts from the Company according to their terms.

Mr. Edmison believed they were bound to take the Company's posts, as they might not fit any other posts upon their pipes.

Mr. O'Bierne remarked that he had warned them about the contract at the time of passing the By-law, and now they were beginning to see it. The Town was at the mercy of the Company, for the Council did not yet know the terms of the Port Hope contract. It ought to have been seen, and ought now to be sent for.

Messrs. Stevenson, Toole, Edmison and O'Bierne, all at last concluded that it was best to settle as best they could with the Company, for they were in the power of the Manager; and would have to do the best they could. They also thought that Mr. Ferry should have a fair profit for the posts, and that by allowing him this, he might come to terms. And here the matter ended.

We would call the attention of our business men to the card of Mr. Tyrrell in another column. He comes before us highly recommended as an accountant, having had 16 years experience in some of the best commercial houses in London, England, and can refer to several of the merchants in this town. We think a good accountant should receive encouragement amongst us, and we trust that Mr. Tyrrell will be remembered by those who require his services.

COUNTY COUNCIL MATTERS.

Inasmuch as many of our readers are desirous of understanding the affairs of the County Council, we have taken the trouble to select a few items of general interest, for the refreshment of the memories of all who may require it.

We have heard some refer to the moneys spent on Roads and Bridges, and their ideas were not according to facts. The following is the apportionment of the $3578.71 set apart for Roads and Bridges:

Asphodel, $204; Ashburnham, $86. Belmont, $116; Dummer, $190; Enniskmore, $75; Monaghan, $148; Otonabee, $493; Smith, $388; Harvey, $47; Galway, $50; Snowdon, $50; Minnen, $50; Stanhope, $50; Dysart, $100; Burleigh, $100; Burleigh afterwards got a special grant of about $70, And there was a special grant of $100 to the Nassau Bridge.

These moneys were very fairly divided, and are all paid to the Municipalities except a few dollars not yet called for.

The accounts of the County are, we learn, in a very satisfactory state. The amounts paid for discounting county paper this year is very small compared with former years, owing to favorable arrangements with the bank.

In 1862 the discount account with the bank amounted to.....$ 673.89.
In 1863....., 635 90
In 1864..... 1234 37
In 1865..... 331 23
In 1866..... 241 01
In 1867..... 716 57
In 1868..... 1263 58
In 1869..... 344 33

It will be seen that there are two years in which there were large discounts, and 1868 is one of these years. This led the Warden and Finance Committee to consider the best means of lessening this expense, and the result of this can be seen in reducing it to $344.33 in 1869.

It was often found that there was no money in the treasury at a very early period after January. This year there are funds enough to meet all liabilities, and to spare.

There is due the County on January 1st, 1870:

From Belmont..... $910 80
" Dummer..... 358 09
" Galway..... 187 77
" Minden..... 37 65
" Otonabee..... 2039 47
" Smith..... 3864 12
" Asphodel..... 13 33

Total.....$7381 23

The Municipalities have to their credit.

Burleigh..... $ 76 85
Douro..... 31 88
Dysart..... 23 57
Harvey..... 151 89
Monaghan..... 396 48
Ashburnham..... 11 73

Total.....$692 40

The accounts, therefore, stands nearly thus:

Due by municipalities.....$7381 23
Less amt. of non. res, taxes. 692 40

Balance.....$6688 28
Cash on hand..... 2512 77
Interest due to Treasurer... 90 00
Advances to municipalities.. 82 90

Total.....$9373 95

Liabilities—

To Sinking Fund...$1043 47
Road thro' Ennismore 452 54

To Mr. Fronnum, on Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges 2626 25
Administration of Justice, ab't 1000 00

Sundries, not exceeding..... 1000 00
Yet due roads and bridges not including M L & P C Bridges 345 74
Redemptions, &c..... 185 93

During the year $970 of Sinking Fund were invested, which was not done heretofore; and the Warden and Finance Committee did all in their power to curtail expenditure in every form. The large expenditure caused by building the Jail, still hangs in part over the Council, but if the necessary sinking fund be applied as this year, the debt will soon disappear.

Every year should be made meet its own liabilities. And the past Council made arrangements to that end, but after the estimates were arranged, the sum of nearly $700 had to be removed from an asset supposed to be due from the County of Victoria. This, and unforseen expenses, will change the balances, but not materially, as will be found when the Council meets.

The above figures we believe are as near correct as can at present be ascertained.

The Cornwall Freeholder says, the friends of John Sandfield intend getting up a demonstration in his favor; and a meeting of the citizens of Cornwall has been held to carry the proposition into effect.

The scenes in the Ontario Legislature during last session, openly manifested the decaying influence of the Premier of Ontario; and his restiveness under the increasing power and withering rebukes of Messrs. Blake, McKenzie and McKellar, and others of the opposition, strongly indicated his knowledge of his decline, and approaching defeat.

But something must be done to bolster him up a while longer. And a demonstration is the means to be used for that purpose. Of course they can have supper and champagne at will and speeches and the Premier may swear ad libitum, but it will not suffice to satisfy the people of Ontario. They are determined on a change, and they will have it. It is much needed too.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TREAT.—The children of St. Paul's Sunday School, Minden Village, met in the Common School House to regale themselves with good things liberally supplied by the ladies of the church there. The Superintendent and Clergymen, with Churchwardens and others were present to say something both pleasing and encouraging. A Christmas Tree prettily loaded with presents for the scholars was decked out by Mrs. Burt, with the proceeds of the kind hearts of other ladies with herself. Miss Burleigh and the choir led the singing of Christmas carols, &c. The Rev. Mr. Burt, Mr. H. Andrews, Mr. S. Eastman, C. D. Curry, Esq., severally addressed the cheerful and orderly gathering. All parted quite satisfied, hoping God's blessing on Sunday School labours, and glad to have imparted joy to the hearts of the little ones of the fold.—Com.

Presentation and Address.

On Monday, on the assembling of the school, Mr. McFaul's pupils of last session met in his room and presented him with a very handsome watch stand, and also a writing desk.

Master Richard White read the address, and masters J. R. Stratton and J. Baptie, on behalf of the pupils, presented the articles.

The following is the address:—

To Mr. J. H. McFaul.

DEAR TEACHER,

At this season of the year, good wishes and congratulations are the order of the day, and now at the conclusion of our New Year holidays, a number of the pupils of the fifth division of the Peterboro Grammar and Union School, before commencing another term of studies under your supervision beg leave to present you with a small token of our appreciation of the attention and kindness we have received from you since the first day we entered your department of the School.

We feel great pleasure in again meeting you in good health, and hope that our relations as teacher and scholars, may be as happy and instructive in the future as the past has been to us.

Receive this small present with our kindest wishes for your welfare, and may you long enjoy prosperity and success in your avocation, is the ardent wish of your devoted pupils.

Signed in their behalf.

RICHARD WHITE,
Peterboro. January 10, 1870.

REPLY.

Peterboro, January 10, 1870.

DEAR PUPILS,

I thank you for this token of remembrance and assure you that I shall ever highly appreciate it; not merely on account of its intrinsic value, but especially because it is a gift from you, with whom I have been more or less associated in the school room during the past three years, and whose educational interests and future happiness have formed no small part of my daily study.

Your conduct, upon the whole, while at school, and your bearing towards me in the streets, have been praise-worthy, and the many happy hours which I have experienced in your midst, shall not soon be forgotten.

Since my appointment, I have never allowed the spirit of partiality to influence me in any one case, and in performing the functions of my calling. I have endeavoured to be faithful to my supporters, and true to my individual pupils.

Twelve or fifteen months ago, many of you left my class in the fourth division, and took your position in the ranks of those of riper years in the Junior Grammar School, where at the beginning of 1869, I was happy to meet you again and lend you my feeble aid.

Your position, as students of the Junior Grammar School, proves that you have made great conquests in the past, and your successful efforts during last session to qualify for the Senior Grammar School, fully convince me that you dread no task in that department, and fear no classical or mathematical difficulties.

Many of you, to-day, have entered the highest department in this institution, and are this evening the recognised pupils of Mr. Dixon, who, (I am sure) gives you a hearty welcome.

May you be guided safely over the vast sea of sciences, on whose inviting billows you now cheerfully embark.

May the crossing of every wave, and the examination of every reef, unfold fragrant fountains to perfume your arduous path, and cheer you on your way.

May philosophic discoveries during your scholastic researches open many precious mines of truth to bedeck your bed (in old age) with priceless gems.

May every Christmas greet you in a higher department, and every New Year suspend medals at your side, as trophies of success, until you are qualified to occupy a seat of honor and usefulness in the religious and political assemblies of our earth.

And now permit me again to thank you for this unexpected, but long to be remembered gift.

Yours truly,
JOHN. H. McFAUL,
Teacher J. G. S.

These presentations are like bright spots in a teacher's troublesome and onerous calling. They tend to cheer him under difficulties, for difficulties the teacher does have, and they serve as stimuli to urge to greater exertion, if possible, so that those committed to his care may be encouraged and aided in what to their tender minds are no small difficulties.

The close of the past session has been fruitful of these tokens of good will, but we would remind the pupils that one has been omitted in the bustle of preparing for the holiday seasons. This, however, can easily be remedied, and a few hours spent in doing so would be amply rewarded by the secret satisfaction of remembering all.

SUDDEN DEATH.

On Sunday morning about twenty minutes after nine o'clock, and while in the act of cleaning the sidewalk to the Episcopal Church, James Hodgson, the sexton, fell down and instantly expired; only two or three minutes elapsed until life was extinct. Mr. Hodgson was a shoemaker by trade, but for several years has been sexton of the church. He was a perfectly sober man, never known in years to drink intoxicating liquors; but being a widower and having no one to make home as pleasant and comfortable as it should be, in consequence, it is thought that he did not pay much attention to dietary principles, merely taking his food in the simplest way.—On Sunday morning he left his breakfast on the stove cooking, when he went to heat the church. A son of his about 16 years of age was in the church when he proceeded to clean or prepare the sidewalk to the street. Just as he arrived at the gate he fell down. Mr. Landy saw it and ran for some one to assist him, but before aid could be obtained, life was fled, and his spirit called to its Great Giver. His wife died about 8 years ago. He leaves 3 children, two boys and a girl; but they are able to provide for themselves. Mrs. Beck has a little girl. Hodgins was about 60 years of age, and must have died from disease of the heart, increased by the cold and want of due attention to personal comfort. He has no relatives in this country other than his children and distant relatives of his deceased wife.

WORTHY OF ATTENTION.—We invite the attention of our readers to the advertisement in this weeks issue, of Messrs. Green & Roche, who in order to meet the requirements of the present hard season have marked the remaining portion of their stock of seasonable goods down to cost price. We advise intending purchasers to give them a call.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Jany. 11th. 1870.

The Council met. Present his Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. English, O'Bierne, Stevenson, Edmison, Rutherford, Dickson, Kennedy and Toole.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Communications were read from H. N. Sanders, Clerk of Port Hope, asking whether any action had been taken to register the plan of the Town in accordance with the 31st. Vic., Cap. 20. From Hyslop and Ronald of Chatham, in reference to supplying the Town with a Steam Fire Engine. From Capt. O'Donnell, in reference to the account of John Marshall.—And a petition from D. Fancher, asking the Council to remit one-half of his Tavern License.

The Annual account of the Trustees of the Town Fund up to the 31st. of December last, was submitted to the Council.

An account from C. A Weller, Esq., claiming $94,86 as balance of his account, was referred to the Finance Committee.

Moved by Mr. Kennedy, seconded by Mr. Dickson, that the sum of $25 be paid to Mr. Fancher. Carried.

Moved by Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Toole, that John Marshall's account for repairing the Fire Engine be paid, amounting to $6,50, according to the report of Capt. O'Donnell. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that Capt. O'Donnell be furnished with the resolution of this Council, with respect to work ordered by any party except through Mr. Edwards.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole, that Mr. Rowe and Mr. Carlisle be directed to take the levels of the hill at Hilliard's Mill, and also of that at the Court House. Also to examine similarly any other elevation that may be available for the purpose, so as to enable the Council to form some opinion as to whether Water Works could be obtained for the use of this Town. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that Mr. Toole be re-appointed Grammar School Trustee on behalf of the Town. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Toole, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, that this Council instruct the Collector to remit the taxes of Gilbert Dafoe, for the year 1869, amounting to $2. Carried.

Moved by Mr. Stevenson, seconded by Mr. Toole, that the Mayor, Mr. Edwards and Mr. Edmison, be requested to settle the matter of the taxes, due on the property occupied by John Brown, in the manner they may think right. Carried.

Moved by Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Dickson, that Mr. Helm's account for repairing the Bell be paid forthwith, amounting to $12. Carried.

The matter of arranging about the cost of lamp posts, was left to the committee, and also to arrange the places for the posts.

The Council adjourned.

MINDEN.

PROGRESS.—The usual public examinations of Schools, took place within the last few weeks, and unmistakable signs of progress were visible in that most important subject—EDUCATION. At No. 4, Snowdon, the Teacher, Miss Smith, had been most prosperous, she had possession of the hearts of both parents and scholars.—Reading and Arithmetic were very fair indeed, whilst Geography was good. The art of teaching good, singing very pleasing. Attendance of scholars good, and co-operation of parents famous.

At No. 5, Snowdon, under Miss C. Bannan, the School has enjoyed first-rate management, and here reading, writing, geography and arithmetic were very good, and the Trustees and parents put full confidence in their teacher who continues her labours during 1870.

At No. 6, MINDEN, Miss Peck has taught successfully for nearly three years, shewing winsome ways to the wee ones who climbed up the tree of knowledge under her tuition to a marked height. Her girls exhibited aptness in arithmetic, reading, grammar and geography. Hooping-cough thinned the forms for full four months past, and its power for retrogression was manifest in this School as in all the Schools of the neighbourhood. Recitations and singing were spirited, and the School closed for the year with eclat.

At No. 7, MINDEN, this new section under a new teacher, Miss Burt, the closing examination shewed many a gratifying sign. Trustees and parents crowded in to hear and to tell of what they heard. In the several branches the scholars acquitted themselves really well, shewing the good and common feeling all around Minden, namely affection for the teacher. Miss Burt continues in this School for at least six months longer.

At No. 3, GALWAY, a very good examination took place. Mr. W. Clark, a veteran teacher, brought out to view good writing and arithmetic. The reading of some of the elder girls which Kinmount sends, and their grammar was excellent. Let parents endeavour to send the big girls and boys to school; it pays! The discipline was good, and progress was stamped in every class.

The Rev. F. Burt, Local Superintendent, was present at all; and took part in all these several joyous times, addressing pupils, parents and trustees, at each section. The resident Minister of the Wesleyans was present at some examinations, and encouraged those present, and so did C. D. Curry, Esq., M. D. and others.

Dr. McTaggart, will be at Chisnu's Hotel from Monday 17th. of January, till the evening of Saturday, 22nd. instant, for the purpose of attending to patients who may require his advice. Read the following extracts:

For that dreadful and destructive disease, Consumption, attended with large expectorations, bleeding lungs, night sweats and wasting of flesh, Dr. McTaggart is the physician, and I believe the only physician to rely upon. His searching examinations and through knowledge enable him to learn the nature of the disease and the treatment required to perfection. I believe he has no equal for contending with lingering diseases, be so speedy and effectually cures them.

J. J. HALL, M.D., M.R.C., St. Mary's.

August 14th, 1868.—This is to certify that my lungs were badly affected for a number of years, and after having been doctored with many Physicians in Canada, and receiving no benefit, I visited Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary, the 10 of April, 1868, and after three months' treatment with him, my lungs were entirely well, and I sincerely believe that no Physician in the country can treat the lungs so successfully.

July 8th, 1866.—The worst of sore eyes that seemed to resist the most skilful treatment, I have known Dr. McTaggart to speedily cure

D. W. BURROWS, Toronto, Ont.

The Ingersoll Chronicle speaks as follows of Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary:—Disease is so prevalent in this our stricken world, and so great a blessing is health, that every discovery in medical science which relieves suffering humanity, must be hailed with joy by every philanthropist and lover of his race. In this consideration Dr. McTaggart, of the Hamilton Infirmary, is justly entitled to the full confidence of the public, and judging from what is said of him by medical men and patients, he is without exception one of the most skilful practioners of the age.

The Chatam Planet says: We feel entirely safe in recommending those afflicted with disease to call upon Dr. McTaggart, of Hamilton, for from the remarks of his patients and physicians we deem him a very skilful man.

Dr. McTaggart.—The Guelph Advertiser says of him:—"Judging from the very flattering notices which have from time to time, come under our observation as to the undoubted skill and ability of Dr. McTaggart, we are disposed to believe that those who are in need of his services should by all means consult him immediately. We trust he will meet with the encouragement which his merits deserve. In all pulmonary affections and chronic maladies of long standing, the Doctor stands unrivalled."

Jun 1866.—I placed myself under treatment with Dr. McTaggart for the lungs after having been affected for more than five years, and given up to die with consumption, and in course of nine months I was entirely well.

MRS. G. WALKER, Strathroy, Ont.

Dr. M. F. McTaggart cured me in seven months of a bad case of Consumption, Bleeding Lungs, &c., of three years' standing when I was given up as incurable.

RED RIVER.

The news from Red River is of a nature to cause serious apprehension, and gives another proof, if such were required, of the extremely bad management of the Dominion Government in dealing with its new acquisition. It is not evident that the blunder committed is of such magnitude as to possibly cause serious trouble with the United States, and is another evidence of the incapacity of our rulers. This is a cut from the sharp knife of fact which lays open to the bone the gangrened sore of our political state, and if the House of Commons has not wholly departed from its traditions, next Session will see the downfall of a Government which is fast bringing the Dominion to bankruptcy after making it contemptible in the eyes of the world. Like Nero they are fiddling away at the Capital, while the country is going headlong to destruction.—Evening Mail.

WHAT WILL COME OF IT?—The thoughtful correspondent of the Times, now at Rome, interperses his communications with frequent reflections as to the tendencies of the Œcumenical council now gathered in that city, and thus speculates on the dilemma in which it may place Catholic countries, and the consequent possible result:—

"There is hardly a State in which the Council has not become a controversy treated by the light of these documents, that is, the Encyclical Letter and Syllabus. As the Bishops have come to Rome they have left behind them Pastorals, generally redolent with the last Papal inspiration; but they have also left the field open to other publications, written in a different spirit, and quite as likely to be approved. The civil power shows a lively interest in a controversy which is a question of life or death to it. The index has just condemned the 'Pope and the Council;' but the condemned volume is circulated by authority throughout Italy. In all that is said or written, however, one full issue appears, whether men have the right to think for themselves, to govern themselves, or to exercise their judgment upon any matter which has even the pretence of a spiritual import. In England every one among us may think and say what he pleases within some broad moral rules; and the Roman Catholics for many years have been laboring the hardest in the cause of religious liberty. But the questions raised by this Council lie not directly between Rome and the outer world, but between it and the States still professing to be in the Roman Communion. So far as a state recognizes the authority of the See of Rome, so far it also recognizes its old claim to the spiritual, social, and political government of the world. What, indeed, are the Catholic Powers and the Powers with Catholic populations to do, if the Bishops and clergy become pledged to principles subversive of civil authority, and hostile to the whole existing state of things. They will not be able to untie the knot, nor to bear it; they will have to cut it."

Fowls for market ought to be fat. It is a poor policy to throw down a little corn for a few weeks before the birds are to be killed and finally give them one big feed of corn, and cut their heads off, pluck and ship them. Such fowls will bring about half the price they would have brought had they been shut up and fed the same weight of Indian meal, kept well supplied with pure water, had the the floor of the coop strewed with well dried earth daily, and cleaned once a week and finally fasted eight or twelve hours before they were killed. Birds thus shut together must not quarrel; they should be fed on a variety of food three or four times a day the last feeding being of hard grain. Feed no musty or damaged wheat, though screenings, consisting of shrunken and broken grains, with foreign seeds need not be avoided. In packing for market kill with a small knife. Pluck dry while warm. Dip in hot water to plump them, and pack snugly in tight boxes when cold.

A KNIFE-GUN.—The Prussian needle gun has a formidable rival in the form of a zundnussergewehr, or knife-gun—the new breech-loader invented by Herr Mayhofer, of Konnehen, East Prussia. At the recent trial in Konigsberg, twenty-five rounds, with full cartridge, are said to have been fired off per minute. The missile penetrated at a distance of two thousand yards. The piece carries with great precision, and has the great advantage of a minimum of smoke. The invention extends to the cartridge as well as to the gun. The inventor had requested his offer to sell his patent to the Prussian government, but it has not yet been accepted. He has spent his whole fortune of twenty-five thousand dollars, in the production of the arm, and threatens to go to Austria or France if Prussia does not give him an answer soon.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 29th, 1868.

Messrs. RADWAY & CO.:

GENTLEMEN:—While a son of my friend Mr. Francisco de Matteo Pimenta (a large proprietor in the Oldeás de Campos) was staying at my house, he was attacked with intermittent fever. Immediately I sent for the very clever Dr. Tenieo, who is thought a great deal of in Campos, but the fever, instead of diminishing, turned, continued, and typhoid, the boy (14 years old) could not speak, would not take the broths, and it required a great deal of coaxing to make him swallow the medicines. Dr. Tenieo declared that there was not the slightest hope of saving the boy's life; that it would be advisable to write to his father and inform him of the state of his son's health. At that moment I thought of the well spoken Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments, and applied them in the following manner: One teaspoon of Relief in a tumbler of water, dividing it three doses a day; frictions with the Relief pure on the Chest, back and wrists; three (of Radway's) Pills every day, and well covered so that he might perspire. Second day, half an hour after meals, one dessert-spoon of Resolvent and water. In the fourth day he was able to get up from bed, to the astonishment of every one, who witnessed the miracles of Dr. Radway & Co's medicaments.

I remain, gentlemen,

Your very obedient servant,

JOAQUIM PINTO FALCAO, Merchant.

"Honor to Whom Honor is Due."

It has been said by a few unfortunate mortals who have striven in vain to gain position of honor and distinction, that they were not sufficiently appreciated. While such may sometimes be the case, it is generally to be observed that true deserving worth is cordially accepted and honored, whether applied to religion, politics, the arts, or inventions. Next to religion, invention or discovery, has the highest position, for it wields a mighty influence; through its channels nations have overleaped, as if by magic, the bounds of a separation, and united by electric wires, can converse together at momentary will.

Indeed, the diversified efforts of man's genius in these respects, are a source of admiration and gratitude to the whole human race. In medicine, science has revealed during the last quarter of a century, many hidden truths, which had before been considered to be impossibilities. The malignity of pestilential disease is now in a great measure bereft of its terror and even the "insatiate archer," consumption, is arrested in his deadly march, and oftentimes overthrown. Undoubtedly the great rallying power in the treatment of this and other pulmonary diseases, is Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry; and the foregoing allusions are applicable to the memory of its illustrious discoverer. The proof of the efficacy of this great remedy is in its undying reputation. It has stood the test of time, and its fame as a curative of throat and lung complaints has extended to all climes.—Canada Christian Advocate.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

PILES may be caused by anything that will irritate the lower bowels, producing a determination of blood to the rectum, as drastic cathartics, from the extensive use of which in past years the disease has become very common, habitual constipation, straining at stool, diseases of the liver, much riding on horseback, tight stays, sedentary habits, high living, heating, irritating food, &c. Dr. J. Briggs' Universalled Pile Remedy, remarkable for its superior excellence, should be used for this painful affliction. All who have tried it do not hesitate to recommend it in the highest terms. Sold by Druggists and country Merchants generally. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway N.Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

THE SARSAPARILLA DISEASE OF YUCATAN.—This singular set of people are descended from the ancient Aztecs of Southern Mexico, and still retain some of the peculiarities which Stephens and Prescott gave of their ancestors. Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., employ a small army of them in digging Sarsaparilla root. Provided with narrow spades a coil of rope, and a bag of water, they are ready for the forest where the wild banana furnishes them with food, and thick-leaved trees their only shelter. Few of those who find themselves rejuvenated by this product, know how much they are indebted to the toil of these humble laborers, who dig health for thousands of Doctor Ayer's patrons, while they sometimes lose their own. [Boston Commercial.

INVENTED TOE-NAIL is a very painful disease, generally the result of wearing tight shoes, and is usually accompanied with more or less inflammation, and, at times, ulceration. The great toe is the one usually attacked. At first, there is only a little uneasiness, which ceases when the shoe or boot is removed from the foot; after a time the part becomes tender or inflamed, and the corder or edge of the nail is found pressing deeply into the flesh, while the whole nail is narrow, and much arched across Ulceration eventually ensues, proud flesh appears, and the pain becomes very severe. For the sloughing of the proud flesh, healing the ulceration, and eventually curing the toe, use Dr. J. Briggs' Modern Curative, according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, Broadway, N.Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

GREAT SUFFERING.—How many thousand ladies, both young and old, have passed through great suffering from that terrible demon, Neuralgia, some passing a sleepless night tossing about in great agony, but succeed in getting relief after a few hours of misery, only to be renewed again in a short time with the same unrelenting, excruiating pain. Others have endured this terrible torture for weeks, both day and night, until exhausted with such continual suffering, and almost wishing for the angel of death to relieve them; but hope dawns: a cure has been discovered, a rapid and radical cure; Briggs' Allevantor is the remedy; can be tested, free, at No. 6 King St. West, Toronto; is sold by Druggists and Country Merchants everywhere. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors' No. 208 Broadway, New York

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealer

IF with Catarrh, that distressing disease,
You are afflicted and wishing for ease,
Use no snuffs that induce you to sneeze,
They surely increase, not relieve the disease.

Briggs' Allevantor will relieve in a trice,
You also will find it fragrant and nice;
Go try it, your friends please entice,
Gladly they'll thank you for the advice.

You will always find the above-named Remedy at all Druggist and Country Merchants generally throughout the country, and you will also find Briggs' Allevantor the greatest remedy of the age for the speedy cure of Catarrah, Headache, Neuralgia, and all ailments arising from Pain or Inflammation. Dr. J. Briggs and Co, Proprietors. Offices, No. 208 Broadway, N.Y, and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto, Canada.

SEVAR'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical.

NEURALGIA may be distinguished from rheumatism by the intensity of the pain, its short continuance, and its liability to return on the slightest touch; in acute rheumatism there is fever, redness, heat in the part affected, and some swelling, all of which are absent in Neuralgia; in chronic rheumatism the pain is continuous, less severe, and often worse at night. From toothache, by the shortness of the paroxysm, the rapidity of its succession, and the frequent convulsive twitches. To obtain immediate relief, use Dr. J. Briggs' Allevantor according to directions. Sold by Druggists and Country Dealers. Dr. J. Briggs & Co., Proprietors, 208 Broadway, N. Y., and No. 6 King St. West, Toronto.

THE ŒCUMENICAL COUNCIL lately called at Rome is an instance of the solicitude of the Catholic Church for the welfare and prosperity of her Communicants. Large assemblies of this nature containing representatives from all parts of the world, should be of some benefit to our race. We hope this opinion will be as harmonious and unanimous as the verdict in favor of the Great Shoshonees Remedy, for diseases of the lungs, blood, stomach, liver, &c. For sale by all druggists.

To those who suffer from Corns Bunions Bad Nails, Chilblains, Frosted Feet, &c., try Dr. J. Briggs' Curative. If used liberally as directed, relief is immediate, and cure certain. Sold by Druggists.

Are you a sufferer from Neuralgia Rheumatism or Pain of any description? Dr. J. Briggs Allevantor will soothe away your Neuralgia cure your Rheumatism, and banish your Pain. Sold by Druggists.

A MYSTERY

AT

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boot and Shoe Store, Peterboro.

I that rustic path was treading,
When the sun his rays were shedding—
Beaming, gleaming, fairly streaming through the trees;
And I watched the streamlet glistening,
As entranced I there was listening
To the melting, merry music on the breeze,
When beneath a tree reclining
Where no sun or ray was shining,
Lo! I saw a fellow-being on the ground!
Though no other feature shirked,
Quickly soon his eyes uplifted—
Upward lifted as he wildly looked around.
'Good friend,' said I, approaching,
'Do not charge me with encroaching—
Are you waiting for some messenger of news?'
But no other word he muttered,
And no other sentence uttered,
Save—'You'll find there's noses like

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Boots and Shoes!'

'That's a strange expression, surely,'
Said I, looking down demurely,
'I trust, good sir, that you the question will excuse,'
But he only looked the prouder,
As he spoke the words the louder,
'There's always plenty comfort in WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
'Why, bless me, man!' I shouted,
As his sanity I doubted,
'Tis surely nought to me what people's goods you use!'
But he only cried the higher,
With enthusiastic fire,
'You'll save your cash by wearing WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes!'
So I left him there reclining,
Where no ray of sun was shining,
And frequently I wondered at the words the man did use;
Thinking surely 'twas a mystery,
And that some hidden history
Was weaving round myself, and WHITE & McCULLAGH'S Boots and Shoes.
So then I resolved to try them;
Nay, I felt compelled to buy them.
And behold, I've cause for gladness,
That the words I deemed were madness,
Induced me thus to purchase

WHITE & McCULLAGH'S

Matchless Boots and Shoes.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound spoken of after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the blood, we boldly state that the great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Kreestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Bovey, of Papanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

☞Call at the Drug Store and get a Circular of unquestionable certificates on the GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY and satisfy yourselves.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine. Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt & Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store, and Dr. Taylor and Dr. Bell.

DR. A. TRASK'S

MAGNETIC OINTMENT!

CURES CROUP OR RATTLES.

Dr. Dingham, of Utica, New York, says:—'I have used Dr. A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment in my practice a number of years, and can say with pleasure I deem it one of the greatest discoveries of the age for the cure of inflammation of the Lungs, Inflammation of the Bowels, Inflammatory Rheumatism, and in Child Bed Fever, it operates with perfect success. In cases of Burns, Bruises, Frozen Limbs, it acts like a charm."

Dr. J. P. Kennedy, of Chittenango, N. Y., says:—"It has stood the test trial and has not been found wanting. Its astonishing cures of Inflammation of the Lungs and Croup, and the wonderful success in subsiding the torturing pains of Rheumatism, and relieving Nervous Affections, entitle it to a high rank in the list of Remedies for these complaints."

Dr. A. W. Belding, of Knowlesville, N. Y., says:—"I have used it in several cases of Specific Irritation, and for the worst cases of Piles, and sundry other complaints, and find it a superior article, and well worthy the attention of all."

Purchasers should be sure and ask for Dr. A Trask's Magnetic Ointment, and see that the words "A. Trask's Magnetic Ointment" are on the wrapper.
